On Which Side Are You Piling Your Dollars?

“The Fate of Our Nation Hangs In The Balance”

Many of us, when the war is won and peace is declared, will feel an uneasy reproach that perhaps we did not do what we really could to help while we yet had the chance—that we did not invest our dollars on the side of the scales that brought Victory.

In these tremendous moments of the world struggle we cannot falter, relax, or allow ourselves in weariness to fall short of our task; the investments we make now is an investment for all time—an investment for home, freedom, justice, righteousness.

“The controlling influence of America in the final and decisive phase of the struggle opens a great historic opportunity for our Nation. We have fewer selfish interests at stake than any of the other peoples; we have the great traditions of democracy; we lift the whole contest above a fight for territory and trade privileges and make it a battle for the freedom of the Nation and the achievements of international order and peace.

These are really tremendous moments. The fate of our Nation hangs in the balance.

When we have faced up to the ultimate of self denial we become eager to do and save—to keep none of life's small change—to outdo our own best record of self surrender.

As much depends on the people at home for the preservation of the Nation as does the heroic work of the soldiers on the battle front.
