TREASURY DEPARTMENT WORKING TO CHECK THE SPENDTHRIFT TENDENCIES

Urges People Not to Sell Their Liberty Bonds and Thrift Stamps As They Will Reach Par, and Believe it is Constructive Americanism for a Man 'Wont Throw a Bomb at His Bank.

BY W. S. MANN. (Copyright, 1920.)

Washington, May 14.—Economists of many schools agree that no small part of the present high cost of necessities is due to spendthrift tendencies of many who are disbursing with a too lavish hand the wartime wages and profits that still are paid to thousands. With a small but widely distributed force of workers the savings division of the treasury department is working to counteract this tendency, and is meeting with much encouragement, particularly in the public schools and in some of the large industrial centers.

The division is a branch of the executive arm of the government and never loses sight of the purpose of its organization, which is to sell thrift stamps and war savings stamps. But in selling these small forms of government securities it must of necessity preach the gospel of economy and systematic saving, so much needed today.

Thrift Dramatized. "It is as easy to vivify thrift, to dramatize it, as to dramatize any other subject in the curriculum," said William Mather Lewis, director of the bureau. "When a boy of 12 in California writes me that he has learned thru war savings stamps how money rolls up and that he has now earned and saved $65 toward a coveted collection when a newsboy is pointed out to me as the only one in a school room who has never missed a week in purchasing a thrift stamp; when reports show me that the school children of Texas own about $12,000,000 worth of thrift and war savings stamps and that the boys and girls in Ohio each bought an average of seven dollars worth of these securities in 1919; when I learn of the economical use of school supplies and the care of school furnishings in those institutions where the students earn and save, I know that there is something in thrift practically applied that stirs the imaginations of our future citizens."

A report has just been compiled showing the stamps sold in 22 industrial plants, large and small, in and around Philadelphia during the first three months of the present year. During that time 17,742 men and women bought stamps having a total value of $115,000.

In the New York Shipbuilding corporation plant at Camden, N. J., the sales amount to about $6,000 weekly. The employees at that place are particularly enthusiastic over this form of saving because of the less learning there during the war. When the war savings stamps and thrift stamps were first offered, the men in the yard bought liberally, largely from patriotic motives, many of them having small idea of making permanent investments. Late in 1918 when the influenza epidemic struck the city only the sale of these war savings stamps by the holders kept many stricken families from being dependent on charity. They provided doctors and nurses and were the means of saving many lives, and since that time the Camden yards have furnished a good market for the small government securities.

During the war the stamps could be sold largely by appeals to patriotism, but in the last year and a half the "selling talk" has been on economic lines. The bureau maintains officers in each of the twelve federal reserve districts, including an educational director who organizes the savings work in the schools through the teachers and voluntary aids. Because of the small number of employees the bureau can do little individual canvassing.

Go to College Clubs. A popular form of saving is the organization of "Go-to-College-Clubs" in the grade and high schools, where pupils earn and save small sums weekly or monthly to be used in paying their way through colleges. In the District of Columbia during one month this year there were 22,634 school children who bought stamps having a total value of $10,338.

The bureau has not stopped at this, but has succeeded in getting these stamps and their value explained in many of the school text books. The Kentucky teachers' manual contains a treatise on these forms of securities, and some arithmetics contain problems in computing the value of stamps purchased a various times. The bureau also is doing much to urge small holders of Liberty bonds to hold on to their war time investments, instead of putting them on the market for less than their face value, or trading them for "wild-cat" stock. An officer of the New York restaurant men's organization recently asked the bureau to get out a statement "in words of one syllable" explaining the value of government securities, and this was distributed among 60,000 waiters in the metropolis.

"If you sell your Liberty bond now you are cheating yourself," said this statement in part. "The government promised to pay you 100 cents for every dollar you put into your bond, but it did not promise to pay it to you this year. Read your bond and you will see the year it comes due. Uncle Sam will pay you back in full on that date and in the meantime will pay you every cent of interest he promised. Nobody who has lent our government money has ever lost it, and you will not. Hold to your Liberty bond and buy more."

One of the best features of the bureau is that through the federal reserve banks it reaches every part of the country. Some of the best records in the purchase of thrift and war savings stamps have been made by western communities and the response has been general. Treasury officials also regard this work as constructive Americanism, for the purchase of such securities makes a man or woman a stockholder in the government. And no man wants to throw a bomb at his own bank.

Born in 1839 Dr. Caldwell Still in His Office Daily

Wonderful vigor of the founder of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Millions now use his famous prescription Physicians know that good health depends largely upon proper digestion and elimination and that much sickness results from constipation. No one knows this better than the "family" doctor, the general practitioner.

DR. W. B. CALDWELL OF Monticello, Illinois, was and is a family doctor. The whole human body, not any small part of it, was his practice. More than half his "calls" were on women, children and babies. They are the ones most often sick. But their illnesses were usually of a minor nature—colds, fevers, headaches, biliousness—and all of them required first a thorough evacuation. They were constipated.

Dr. Caldwell in the course of 40 years' practice, for he was graduated from Rush Medical College back in 1875, had found a good deal of success in such cases with a prescription of his own containing simple laxative herbs with pepsin. In 1892 he decided to use this formula in the manufacture of a medicine to be known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and in that year the preparation was first placed on the market. The picture of Dr. Caldwell that appears on the package was taken in that year.

The preparation immediately had as great a success in the drug stores as it previously had in the doctor's private practice. Today the third generation is using it.

Mothers are giving it to their children who were given it by their mothers. Every second of the working day someone somewhere is going into a drug store to buy it, for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is selling at the rate of over 6 million bottles a year.

Its great success is based on merit, on repeated buying, on one satisfied user telling another. There are thousands of homes in this country that are never without a bottle of Syrup Pepsin, and the formulator of that prescription is fortunately living to see its wonderful success.

Women, children and elderly people are especially benefited by Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. While it is promptly effective on the most robust constitution and in the most obstinate cases, it is mild and gentle in its action and does not cause griping and strain. Containing neither opiates nor narcotics, it is safe for the tiniest baby and children like it and take it willingly.

Every drug store sells Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Keep a bottle in your home. Where many live someone is sure to need it quickly.

DR. W. B. CALDWELL TODAY. Born Shelbyville, Mo., March 27, 1839. Began the manufacture of his famous prescription in 1892.

In spite of the fact that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the largest selling liquid laxative in the world, there being over 6 million bottles sold each year, many who need its benefits have not yet used it. If you have not, send your name and address for a free trial bottle to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 511 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois.

No senator holding office was ever elected the presidency, but Garfield was a senator-elect when nominated.
