Never a Tear Would Fall.

There's never a tear would fall
 But some kind heart would catch it;
 There's never a sigh would swell
 But some kind heart would feel it,
 There's never an orphan sad,
 And never a widow lonely,
 But some one would make glad,
 With smiles of joy, if only
 The good men all were Masons.
 There's never a word profane
 By heedless mortals spoken,
 And never a cruel blow,
 And never a statute broken;
 There's never a man could die
 Away from old ones, lonely,
 And never a hopeless sigh
 Be heard on earth, if only
 The good men all were Masons.
 But every heart would smile,
 And tongue break forth with singing;
 And stores of corn and wine and oil
 The generous would be bringing;
 All men would strive to make
 The path of life less lonely,
 A green and flowery way,
 As Eden walk, if only
 The good men all were Masons.

The Conflict of Forces.

[For the Patron and Gleaner.]

Geologists tell us that the universe has been in existence for about thirty million years and recent investigation and discovery have led to the hypothesis that the earth has been spinning on its axis for the last hundred million years. But it matters but little to us just how long this mundane sphere has been flying in space, since its time of creation. Since first the morning stars sang together and greeted the creation of other worlds and other climes by their melodious sobs and chanted songs, the "Conflict of Forces" has existed.

While the nebulae hypothesis was doing its work to further the cause of creation, it suggests to us the necessity of conflicting forces. It is natural to suppose that ever since the dawn of creation, action and reaction have taken place. The sun that shines by day and the stars which deck the heavens at night suggest to our minds two opposing forces. If the centripetal force was cut asunder and the centrifugal allowed to take its course of action we would soon perceive the result of things without opposing forces. The earth would, probably, be hurled from its orbit into the sun or some other planet. The geologist says there was a time when fishes were lords of creation, a time when reptiles ruled the world, and so on in the scale of life until we reach that period when brute force no longer rules the world, but the forces of reason spring up and put into execution human skill and genius, thus supplanting brute force. This is the great intellectual era of the world's history. Reason now controls the world, and next in succession is virtue. It was conflicting forces which brought on the Reformation under Martin Luther. In fact, all the great and heroic battles, which have been recorded on the pages of history, are only the results of opposing forces which have arisen among the civilized and uncivilized nations of the world.

We know that there have been geological conditions under which human life was impossible on this earth. Even now as the earth circles on her appointed orbit, the northern ice cap slowly thickens, and time gradually approaches, when its glaciers will flow again and astral seas, slipping northward, bury the seats of present civilization under oceanic wastes. And beyond these periods science discerns a dead earth, an exhausted sun—a time when, clashing together, the Solar System shall resolve itself into a gaseous form, again to begin immeasurable mutations. There is a continual warfare going on in the animal and vegetable world and it is only the consequence of opposing forces.

Sentient beings striving against the conflicting forces of the universe with a desire to become the survivors of the fittest.

With steam and electricity, and the new powers born of progress, forces have entered the world that will either compel us to a higher plane or overwhelm us, as nation after nation, civilization after civilization, have been overwhelmed before.

Between democratic ideas and aristocratic adjustments of society there is an irreconcilable conflict. In short, to use the language of which Herbert Spencer has defined evolution, the development of society is, in relation to its component individuals, the passing from an indefinite, incoherent homogeneity to a definite, coherent heterogeneity.

The great lovers of morality are at work trying to counteract the opposing forces of immorality. And thus an analogy may be drawn between the life of society and the life of the Solar System upon the nebulae hypothesis. As the heat and light of the sun are produced by aggregations of atoms evolving motion, which finally ceases when the atoms at length come to a state of equilibrium; the aggregation of individuals in a community evolves a force which produces the light and warmth of civilization. Invention is knitting together nations into one common family and science is unlocking the silent and conflicting forces of Nature and the Universe.

Ought to be Taught.

A prominent educator of Texas has recently introduced resolutions at the State Teachers' Association meeting, advocating a systematic course of instruction in the public schools which shall teach not only a broader patriotism, but give the children correct ideas of the rights and duties of citizenship, as well as of the rights of property. His argument is that if these notions were properly instilled into the minds of the millions of school children throughout the country, when they grew up they would honor and respect the rights of property and appreciate the duties of citizenship. These resolutions were commended to the National Teachers' Association. There is everywhere a growing appreciation of the fact that the duties of the public schools and the cause of education are not limited to instruction in reading, writing and arithmetic. What is learned in childhood is seldom forgotten in middle life or old age. Ideas firmly established in school never lose their influence. For some time there has been a prevalent sentiment that patriotism, reverence for the flag and love of country may very properly be made a part of common school training. Broadening the field will be beneficial. The scheme suggested need not include an elaborate course in civil or political law, but should serve to give the pupils correct ideas regarding the relation of the citizen to the State and the nation.

It may well impress all with a reverent sense of loyalty to the Government and the need there is for laws and their enforcement. A great proportion of the population relies wholly for its educational advantages upon the public schools and the wider the usefulness of these institutions can be made the better. It is an old saying that the school-house is the corner-stone of American liberty.—Farmers' Friend and Grange Advocate.

Augustus H. Stephenson.

WHEREAS it hath pleased our kind, loving Heavenly Father in his inscrutable wisdom to remove from our midst by death our esteemed and much beloved brother, Augustus H. Stephenson, and called him, as we believe and trust, to a home of rest in the bright mansions above prepared by the dear Savior; he so much loved to honor in his long Christian life; therefore,

Resolved 1st: That we the Robert's Chapel Sunday School, of which he was an honored member and faithful teacher, bow in meek and humble submission to this dispensation of Divine wisdom and goodness, and say, "Thy will be done."

2nd: That while we deeply mourn this loss to us, and shall miss him in the church, as teacher, friend and neighbor, still we weep not as if he had died without hope.

3rd: That we extend to his bereaved family our Christian sympathy in this hour of great trial and grief to them.

4th: That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Sunday School, a copy sent to the family of the deceased and also a copy be sent to the Biblical Recorder and the PATRON AND GLEANER for publication.

A Sad Case.

"I'll tell you how it is," said the wild-eyed patient to the asylum physician, "I met a young widow with a grown up step-daughter, and I married that widow."

"Then my father met our step-daughter and married her. That made my wife the mother-in-law of her father-in-law, and made my step-daughter my step-mother and my father became my step-son. See?"

"Then my step-mother, the step-daughter of my wife, had a son. That boy was, of course, my brother, because he was my father's son; but he was also the son of my wife's step-daughter, and, therefore, her grandson. That made me grandfather of my step-brother. Then my wife had a son.

"My mother-in-law, the step-sister of my son, is also his grand-mother, because he is her step-son's child. My father is the brother-in-law of my child, because his step sister is his wife. I am the brother of my own son, who is also the child of my step-grandmother. I am my mother's brother-in-law, my wife is her own child's aunt, my son is my father's nephew, and I'm my own grandfather—and I can't stand it!"—Truth.

Laugh.

Learn to laugh. A good laugh is better than medicine. Learn how to tell a story. A well-told story is as welcome as a sunbeam in the sick room. Learn to keep your own trouble to yourself. The world is too busy to care for your ills and sorrows. Learn to stop croaking. If you cannot see any good in the world, keep the bad to yourself.

Learn to hide your pains and aches under a pleasant smile. No one cares to hear whether you have the carache, headache or rheumatism. Don't cry. Tears do well enough in novels, but they are out of place in real life. Learn to meet your friends with a smile. The good-humored man is always welcome, but the dyspeptic or hypochondriac is not wanted anywhere and is a nuisance as well.—Detroit Free Press.
