

Great Improvement

Reports a Welcome Change in Her Condition

Statement by a North Carolina Woman.

"Nearly all my life I have had one cold after another and the trouble seemed like catarrh in the head. There were discharges from my ears, and my hearing became affected. I took a number of kinds of medicine but I grew worse instead of better. One day I procured a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla and began taking it, and soon found it was doing me good. I gained strength and was greatly benefited in many ways. I continued its use and now the bad feeling in my head is gone, and the earache with which I suffered has disappeared. I am now able to do my household work without help. I shall keep Hood's Sarsaparilla in the house as long as I live." Mrs. T. G. KIRBY, Dallas, North Carolina.

Will SCOTT'S EMULSION cure consumption? Yes and no. Will it cure every case? No. What cases will it cure then? Those in their earlier stages, especially in young people. We make no exaggerated claims, but we have positive evidence that the early use of

CHILDREN'S BRAINS.

Scientific Experiments Made to See How Much They May be Exercised Safely.

Philadelphia Inquirer.

How much happier the lives of the thousands of children entering school this month would be if only women--mothers and teachers--better understood the nature and limitation of their brain cells. Such knowledge is to be had, as very important experiments and deductions have recently been made by scientific investigators, but it always takes an unreasonable length of time for such knowledge to become general.

After 25,000 tests by the best educators in America it has been absolutely demonstrated, for instance, that the length of time that a child six years of age can concentrate its mind does not exceed seven minutes, and that all efforts to confine its attention upon one subject beyond this limit are worse than useless. This power of concentration increases slowly. At the age of eight a child's attention may be easily held ten minutes. At the age of twelve his mind should not be riveted upon one subject longer than seventeen minutes. It is, therefore, a great mistake to keep a child of this age, say, at the piano more than fifteen minutes.

After a change of occupation another quarter of an hour's practice will be of incalculably more benefit than the attempt to continue work after brain and nerves have become fatigued.

Indeed, most of the inattention and restlessness of children may be explained upon the physical basis. A boy's brain, for example, undergoes a certain shrinkage at the age of fourteen or fifteen. It actually weighs less than at the age of twelve and thirteen. This fact explains the carelessness, laziness and general unreasonableness of boys of this age. Statistics show that a large proportion of boys leave school at about this time. It is altogether probable that if parents and teachers realized that the proverbial lawlessness of boys of fourteen merely evidenced a temporary condition of brain cells, more of them would be patiently guided through the period, to take up their studies a year or two later with renewed interest.

The same tests have conclusively proved that the brain of a child is always most active between 8:30 and 11:30 in the morning. All lessons, therefore, requiring the exercise of reasoning power--such as arithmetic and grammar--should be at this hour. It has been further deduced that the average child, unhampered by grades and systems, may have easily mastered his arithmetic by the time he is twelve years old.

Scientists have also discovered that if the brain centers governing the motor nerves remain undeveloped until the age of sixteen, there is no chance whatever of any later development, which fact is a powerful argument in favor of manual training in the public schools. The majority of children are so active that they develop their own brains and nerves to a certain extent along these lines. Where they fail to do so we get the tramp and the sloven. It is a physical impossibility to acquire skill and dexterity in any art unless the foundation has been laid in the formation of brain cells and the training of the motor nerves before the age of sixteen.

How to Prevent Croup.

We have two children who are a subject to attacks of croup. Whenever an attack is coming on my wife gives them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and it always prevents the attack. It is a household necessity in this county and no matter what else we run out of, it would not do to be without Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. More of it sold here than of all other cough remedies combined.--J. M. Nickle, of Nickle Bros., merchants, Nickleville, Pa. For sale by Jas. A. Hardison.

AGES OF GREAT GENERALS.

Hannibal Was Nearly the Youngest and Von Moltke Much the Oldest of All the Famous Generals When They Fought Battles Which Crowned Their Success.

Boston Post.

It has ever been a much-mooted subject the period in his life at which a man may be supposed to be at his best. There is nothing in the field of human action to compare with war in its demand upon every great quality in the character of the Generals, who direct the opposing armies. Courage, energy, perception, knowledge, wisdom, capacity for organization and the effecting of quick combinations--all are required in their full extent in the commander-in-chief, and in proportion as he possesses them, and other analogous qualities is measured his greatness as a general and the probabilities of the success of his campaigns.

Chief among all generals of the past stands Hannibal, who in his qualities as a commander has never been surpassed. His passage of the Alps with his army stands today, after twenty centuries, a high-water mark in military achievement. He was in his twenty-ninth year when, on the death of his illustrious father, Hamilcar, he became commander-in-chief, with the supreme direction of the forces of Carthage, on land and sea. At the age of thirty-one, having fully organized his forces and made all preparations in Spain, he crossed the Pyrenees and the Alps with his army of 90,000 foot soldiers, 10,000 cavalry and 37 elephants, descended into the valley of the Po, and made good his position in Italy by routing the Roman army at Ticinus and Trebia. At the age of thirty-three he annihilated the Roman army at Cannae, and filled with the dread of invasion the city of Rome itself.

He was forty-seven years of age when he met with crushing defeat by the Romans, under Scipio Africanus, at the hard fought field of Zama.

In the way of precocious military exploits, Alexander the Great bears the palm in all history. Called to the throne of Macedonia at the age of eighteen, he had already figured in the wars and administration of his father, Philip. At the age of twenty-one, he carried the day against Thebes and Athens with the Macedonian phalanx, had razed Thebes to the ground and made himself master of Greece. He was twenty-three years old when, after winning some preliminary battles, he met the Persian King, Darius, at Issus and cut to pieces his army of 600,000 men. After seven months siege he took the great maritime city, Tyre, and on the following year, at Arbela, he destroyed the army and empire of Darius, and at twenty-five years old had made himself master of Persia.

Alexander seemed to possess a purely military genius, with the ability to conquer, but without the capacity to improve his conquests in the permanent enlargement of his kingdom.

It is in Caius Julius Caesar that we find the military chief, statesman, politician, historian and popular leader combined in the highest degree that has been manifested in any one man in the world's history.

The greatest political and civil organizer in all the Roman era, and as a general second only to Hannibal, the destiny of the world turned on his fortunes. Conspicuous even as a boy in war and politics, his great campaign began in Gaul, when, at the age of forty-four, with raw troops, he defeated and broke the power of the Helvetii at Bibracte. The next year he conquered the Belgae, and he was forty-seven years old when, two years later, he invaded Britain. He was fifty-four years old when he defeated Pompey at Pharsalia, a victory which made him master of the world.

Among generals of modern times, Gustav Adolphus, of Sweden, the "Champion of Protestantism" in Europe in the first-half the seventeenth century, was thirty-seven years old, when, at Breitenfeld, near Leipzig, he overwhelmed the forces of Tilly.

Charles XII, of Sweden, "The Royal Madman," was a commander whose military genius budded early. He made war because he liked to fight battles, to upset kingdoms, and put one king in place of another. He was but twenty-four years old when, at Kramstadt, he won the battle that dethroned Augustus II, of Poland. At twenty-six years of age his fortune turned on the field of Pultowa, where the Russians annihilated his army, and the crushing disaster ended the great battles of the Swedish monarch.

As a general in the field few commanders, of any epoch have equalled John Churchill, Duke of Marlborough. The "Splendid Calm" which he was wont to display when at critical times on the battlefield made his troops and threw them irresistibly upon the enemy at the right place and moment, and the mastery way in which, campaign after campaign, he out-maneuvered and out-fought the great warriors of Louis XIV, has won the admiration of every soldier since. He was fifty-three years of age, when, as general commanding the united armies of England and Holland, he at Blenheim defeated Marshal Tallard's superior force about to invade Vienna. He was fifty-six years old, when, at the battle of Ramillies, he beat Villeroi and gained Brabant and Flanders to the allies. The next year he won the battle of Oudenarde, and he was fifty-nine when at Malplaquet he again defeated the French under Villars.

Napoleon already had distinguished himself at Toulon, when at the age of twenty-seven years, he was made commander of the armies of Italy. He was twenty-nine years of age when he beat the Mamelukes at the battle of the Pyramids, and the Turks at Abukir. At thirty-one years he fought the battle of Marengo; at thirty-three he received the Austrian surrender at Ulm, and in the same year, at Austerlitz, defeated the combined armies of Austria and Russia. He was thirty-seven when he shattered the Prussian army at Jena. At thirty-eight he fought at Eylau the indecisive battle with the Russians and Prussians, and at Friedland won the victory that brought the Russians to terms of peace in the treaty of Tilsit. Napoleon was forty years old when, at Wagram, he quashed the Austrians under Grand Duke Charles, forty-three, when at the climax of his career, he beat the Russians at Borodino and marched to Moscow. He was forty-four when he beat the Russians and Prussians at Lutten, won the field of Dresden, and met his fatal defeat by the allies at Leipzig. In 1815, at the age of forty-six, his career of military glory closed on the field of Waterloo.

Arthur Wellesley, the Duke of Wellington, the great antagonist of Napoleon, had made a good record in fighting Maratras, in India, before he was thirty-five years of age. He was forty when he won the field of Talavera, against Marshal Soult, in 1809. Four years later, commanding the British and Spanish troops, he beat Maroont and the French at Vittoria. He was forty-six when, with the allied British and Prussians, he vanquished Napoleon at Waterloo.

Gen. Ulysses S. Grant was forty-one years old when he captured Fort Donnellson, and turned a rout into victory at Shiloh; forty-two when he captured Vicksburg; forty-three when he fought the battle of the Wilderness, and forty-four when, after the long fighting before Petersburg, he received the surrender of the Confederate army at Appomattox.

The great Prussian general, Helmuth Freiherr von Moltke, the most consummate strategist in the history of modern warfare, was sixty-six years old when, on the field of Sedan, the Prussians defeated the Austrian army commanded by Field Marshal Benedek. Four years later, on September 1 and 2, 1870, he, at the age of seventy years, fought the battle of Metz and won the victory which decided the issue of the Franco-Prussian war, and resulted in the creation of the German Empire.

THE REAL CONDITION.

Incidents of Life as it is in Wilmington.

Wilmington Messenger.

It is thought that the negro bearing is less aggressive and violent now than it was two or three weeks ago. This may be true as to the males. There is an understanding now that they must put brakes on until after the election, as demonstrations of lawlessness might injure the Radical cause. We give two recent illustrative instances, both unqualifiedly true, of recent date:

HE STOPS TO THINK.

A Prominent Randolph County Republican in Raleigh--He Came to Investigate and Has Seen Enough and Has Made up His Mind--Will Vote the Democratic Ticket.

News and Observer.

To the Editor: I have been a life-long Republican and have voted and worked for the success of the Republican party and its candidates in my native county--Randolph; I have, during the past few weeks, been reading of conditions in some sections of my State, where negroes were said to be largely in control of public affairs, and I have wondered how these things could be true. Indeed, like many others of my party, I have thought they were campaign lies.

I finally decided to investigate for myself, and I came to Raleigh yesterday from my home in Randolph county. I went first to the white Blind Institute, and I saw there carved into the corner stone of the new building now being constructed, the name of James H. Young, the colored politician of Wake county, as one of the directors. I then went inside and asked the superintendent, Mr. Ray, if he would let me see the official report signed by James H. Young, as one of the committee on inspection of that institution. He promptly showed me the official report signed by James H. Young himself, and Mr. Ray told me that his was the same report which had been printed in the News and Observer and other papers.

I also went into the Wake county court house and saw with my own eyes a negro man sitting at a desk in the office of the Clerk of the Superior court, he, the negro, being a deputy clerk in that office who was placed there by the Republican clerk of the court in Wake county to succeed a white man. I have seen and heard a good many other things that I never dreamed really existed in good old North Carolina. I have seen and heard enough. I know now that the statements that are claimed by some to be Democratic lies are actual facts, and facts that must make a white man stop and think. I have stopped and I have thought, and my mind is made up. I cannot and will not longer lend my aid or my influence that I may have to the support or endorsement of such a condition of affairs in my beloved State. The only way that I can see to prevent this condition of affairs is to vote the white man's ticket--The Democratic ticket, and I shall do all I can to get others to do the same.

700 POPS. RETURN IN HALIFAX.

The White People in That Old County United Once More.

Raleigh Post, 29th.

Mr. F. L. Travis, of Scotland Neck, the chairman of the Democratic executive committee in Halifax county, was here yesterday. Mr. Travis brings very encouraging reports from Halifax. The Democrats there are aroused as they never were before.

Mr. Travis says nearly every Populist in Halifax county has gone back to the Democratic party. Four years ago there were over 700 Populists in Halifax. Now Mr. Travis says there are not more than 25 Populists in the county and that they are returning every day.

Recently a white government union was organized in Scotland Neck. Citizens closed their stores and 500 people participated. Sixteen Populists were presented and announced their return to the Democratic party.

The work of the white government union cannot be overestimated. Chairman Simmons has received information that in one of the eastern counties 29 Populists participated in a newly organized union. At another meeting 23 Populists were present.
