What Makes Fertilizer Cheap?

Exactly the same thing that makes shoes cheap, and clothes cheap—that is, the use of inferior material. If you get "stung" in the purchase of a suit of clothes, you can buy another one. If you get "stung" with cheap and inferior fertilizer, you are permanently and incurably disabled for the year. You lose your labor and the proper income on the land.
If one fertilizer analyzes 8-3-3, it isn't necessarily exactly like another 8-3-3. There may be a difference in the availability or solubility, just as there are differences in the digestibility of food. Some manufacturers, who are striving for cheapness, may get their ammonia from scrap leather or hair. The land can not properly digest such material and hence this sort of fertilizer is cheap in name only. It is very expensive if it is the cause of your getting half a bale of cotton where you are entitled to a bale.
It does not pay to take such chances—not if it takes a year out of your life.
You take no chances when you buy the brands of

SUPPURATION.

YOUTH'S COMPANION.
As with so many physical ailments which afflict the human race, it is now generally recognized that a boil or carbuncle is really a battle royal between the cells which are our protectors and the germs which would be our destroyers. The little microbe the special disagreeable of which is called to excite the formation of pus, is called in medicine the staphylococcus. When it gains entrance to the human body, it at once goes to work at its unpleasant industry.
The immediate results are signals of distress which take the form of local inflammation, with its accompanying itching, swelling and burning. These uncomfortable symptoms are a warning to the leucocytes, or protecting blood-cells, that a colony of staphylococci has formed and settling up a factory, and will presently do much damage to the surrounding country unless they can be checked. Nature therefore hurries a great number of leucocytes to the spot, so many, in fact, that they are able to cut off the enemy from the surrounding tissue, and after starving them into submission, to throw them out.
When a boil breaks and discharges its inflammation at once goes down, and this is a sign that virtue has triumphed once more—the leucocytes have won.
This particular cell seems to be endowed with almost human intelligence, as shown by its knowledge of what to attack, and when and where to do it. People who are suffering from certain weakening diseases, such as Bright's, are very prone to attacks of boils, and so are convalescents from exhausting illnesses, and, in fact, any one who is in a condition of lowered vitality from any cause whatever. A single boil will sometimes make its appearance because of some local irritation, as, for example, from the constant rubbing of the neck by a rough sweater.
Never mind what may be the direct cause, or how good the general condition of the sufferer may seem to be, it is well to take that boil to the physician, who, he if sees it early enough, will probably make efforts to defeat it, or at least to limit as far as possible the suppurative, or pus-formation. Any efforts on the part of the patient to squeeze it are unwise; he will not help the boil, and may lead to local infection, resulting in a continuous crop of boils—the condition known as furunculosis, a most distressing affection, which may last for months, and may even run through a family or a school.
The abortion of a boil in its early stages is often brought about by the injection of a little carbolic acid into it. This, or any other form of surgical intervention, is of course the province of the surgeon, who will exercise the utmost antiseptic precaution to prevent local reinfection.

MARY'S BROTHER FALLS IN LOVE WITH SUSAN.

Mr. Boylin: Who is that Susan, her real name? Brother says if I find out and tell him he won't "jaw" me any more, he is in love with Susan "Sight unseen." He says he just knows she is a mighty sweet blue-eyed girl. Mother says that she is evidently a very bright and smart child and will make some one a fine wife. Father said that girl is all O. K. What does O. K. mean, Mr. Boylin? I asked father and he said "find out."
Well, Mr. Boylin, you tell Susan to come to my house and I will take her to ride. We will talk De Laval Separator and Messenger and Intelligencer. Brother says I talk De Laval in my sleep.
Mr. Boylin, please print the following as my letter to Susan:
Dear Susan, the M. & I. is a good thing to talk about working or sleeping and the De Laval Separator is the next best thing to talk about dream about.
I tell you, Susan, we are just getting subscribers these days in a hurry. One of our fine boys was elected as Congressman from our school to the Children's Industrial Congress and when he went to Wadesboro he got a good showing of subscribers and from now on every one who can will be working day and night.
That is a good idea about several families buying a separator in partnership. But they are so cheap almost any farmer can afford one. The whole outfit can be had for $75 and the interest on that amount is just four dollars and fifty cents a year. That is not much money.
No, I did not go to Mr. Patrick's carnival but I saw and heard Mr. Patrick at our school house. I went to the tent in which he and Mr. Joe Smith lived in, it was striped and had a queer little round stove, a real beauty of a tent. Folding chairs and tables, rugs and bear skins on the ground for carpets. I asked Mr. Patrick if they were big black cow skins, they were so large I thought they were cow skins, and he said, no, my little girl, those are black bear skins. I asked where he got them. He said they were killed by his gate way up 14,000 feet above sea level in the mountains of Old Mexico. I asked if he shot at them and he said No, that the guide kept in advance as he was an old bear hunter and he said, little lady, I do not like to take the life of a dumb animal; perhaps I am responsible for their death but I did not kill them.
Mother says Mr. Patrick is doing much good but brother puts in his tongue and says I don't like the way he does. Mr. Patrick wants the children to work, he wants them to make axe-handles and butter molds and lots of things, and he says Mr. Patrick gives the girls bigger prices for doing the same kind of work the boys do. But then Mr. Patrick need not mind what brother says, he will just grumble and complain, Susan. And I warn you right now if you should fall in love with my brother and when you and he grow up you get married you must learn to know him and humor his ways. My brother is a mighty good brother and if you just know how to manage him, and mother says that is the way a woman ought to do anyway, just learn how to manage their husbands. I expect it is just learning how to humor them. My mother is just the smartest woman at that in the county. She gets everything she wants and father just thinks my mother is the best and sweetest woman he ever saw and it is just because my mother knows how to humor him. She does not grow and complain every time he comes home and she has us children to run out to meet and kiss him every time he comes home. This is the kind of a mother I have, Susan, and if you get my brother, and he is sure going to try to find you, just treat him as my mother treats father and you will have a happy time in life.
Susan you ask me to calculate. Well Susan, my teacher says I am just one of the best calculators she ever saw to my age and that I can add to the calculations so many thoughts and questions it keeps her guessing what is coming next.
"How long it would take a woman to pay for a De Laval Separator if she had four cows from which she got five pounds of butter each per week to sell, and butter and milk enough for her family. That's what you ask me to figure out Susan—that's easy. Let's figure this way. Four cows five pounds each, makes twenty pounds of butter a week. In twenty weeks she has two hundred and eighty pounds, and at thirty cents a pound it brings in eighty four dollars. So in just fourteen weeks, one week more than three months, she has money enough to get a nice outfit of the De Laval pattern and that is the kind to get. Others can be had for less money but they are not so good. In a year's time this woman has saved enough to buy her outfit and has left more than one hundred and fifty dollars to cash to put in the

ELECTROCUTION OF RATS.

Charlotte Evening Chronicle.
The great Gould fortune was founded on a rat trap, a simple wire concern that did not hold good for very long, for the rats soon got an understanding of what it meant, but the original Gould sold enough of the traps to lay the foundation for a fortune. Since then, human ingenuity has been exercised in devising a trap that would not excite the suspicion of the rat and many more or less successful devices have resulted. It has remained however, for Mr. Henry Williams, a Charlotte hotel keeper, to originate a trick that the rat will never become wise to. Mr. Williams had a good deal of trouble with the rats. The more trouble they gave him the harder he studied up a plan to get even with them. He has been much interested in the subject of electrocution and the question occurred to him, why not electrocution for rats? He made a study of it and began experimenting. The results were encouraging from the start, and one morning when he counted twenty victims of his electric trap, he exclaimed, and with good cause, "Eureka!" He thereupon set about securing a patent and it is to be hoped that in his case the Gould history will repeat itself. In all seriousness, Mr. Williams seems to have hit upon an effective device for the extermination of rats and has found a new and what is likely to prove a popular use of electricity.

A COURT REMINISCENCE.

Charlotte Observer.
With regard to a paragraph yesterday in names of persons before criminal courts in this State a friend tells us of an occurrence in Anson county superior court some years ago. A man had been indicted for some misdemeanor. His christian name appeared in the bill of indictment as "Gus." The defendant's attorney moved to quash the bill for misnomer. To the judge's question if the person was not generally known by that name his attorney replied that he had not known the defendant since the latter was a boy and added: "And I give you my word of honor that I have never called him anything but Augustus." A member of the bar who happened to be representing the collector rose and said in a dignified manner: "May it please your honor, I can very well believe that, for knowing the gentleman who has just addressed you as well as I do I cannot conceive of his using as short a word as 'Gus' when he could possibly substitute as long a one as 'Augustus.'" The other lawyer sprang to his feet in great anger and for a while it looked like trouble. The judge in his efforts at pacification made matters worse for a while by remarking that he thought the violent language used by the defendant's attorney was intended to be understood in a Pickwickian sense. There was talk of a duel, but it soon died out.
