

FATHER 80-MOTHER 76

The aged father and mother of a prominent Boston lawyer safely carried through the last two winters by

Vinol

The son says: "My father and mother owe their present strength and good health to Vinol. During the last two trying winters neither of them had a cold, and were able to walk farther and do more than for years. I think Vinol is perfectly wonderful. It certainly is the greatest blood-making, strengthening tonic for old people I ever heard of."

We want every feeble old person in this town to try Vinol. We will return their money without question if it does not accomplish all we claim for it.

ECZEMA CURED

Many people have tried so many remedies for eczema without being materially benefitted that they have come to the conclusion that there is no cure for this most distressing disease. That this conclusion is erroneous, and that will effect a cure is shown by the following unsolicited testimonial of Mr. Venable Wilson, who for many years was a citizen of Wadesboro. Mr. Wilson says:

"This is to certify that for nine years I suffered with eczema, and during that time tried numerous so-called specifics for it, but without effect. But after a few applications of Hobson's Eczema Ointment I was completely cured."

HOW TO RAISE BOYS.

In an article by H. Anderson Bruce, in the American Magazine, the author writes of William James Sidis, the 11-year-old boy phenomenon who recently lectured before Harvard professors on the "Four Dimensional Bodies." Mr. Bruce, who has known the boy since he was 4, claims that he is quite normal in every respect and that his gift for mathematics was merely the result of educational training by his father. Mr. Bruce quotes as follows the elder Sidis:

"The notion that the young child's mind should be allowed to lie fallow is the way Dr. Sidis put it to me, is utterly wrong and pernicious. The child is essentially a thinking animal. No power on earth can keep him from thinking, from using his mind. From the moment his inquiring mind first taking in the details of his surroundings he begins the mental process which education is intended to guide and develop. He observes, he draws inferences from everything he sees and hears, he seeks to give expression to his thoughts.

"Left to himself, however, he is certain to observe inaccurately and to make many erroneous inferences. Unless he is taught how to think he is sure to think incorrectly, and to acquire wrong thought habits, causing him to form bad judgments respecting matters not only vital to his own welfare but also important to the welfare of society. In fact, in order to get the best results, his training in the principles of correct thinking should begin as soon as, or even before, he starts to talk. There need be no fear of overtaxing his mind. On the contrary, the effect will be to develop and strengthen it, by accustoming him to make habitual use of the latent energy which most people never utilize at all."

DOCTOR ADVISED OPERATION

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Galena, Kans.—"A year ago last March I fell, and a few days after there was soreness in my right side. In a short time a lump came and it bothered me so much at night I could not sleep. It kept growing larger and by fall it was as large as a hen's egg. I could not go to bed without a hot water bottle applied to that side. I had one of the best doctors in Kansas and he told my husband that I would have to be operated on as it was something like a tumor caused by a rupture. I wrote to you for advice and you told me not to get discouraged, but to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did take it and soon the lump in my side broke and passed away."—Mrs. R. R. HUXEY, 718 Mineral Ave., Galena, Kans.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has proved to be the most successful remedy for curing the worst forms of female ills, including displacements, inflammation, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result has been worth millions to many suffering women.

If you want special advice write for it to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. It is free and always helpful.

GIRL BEATEN AND BLINDED.

Revenge for Minister's Dance Hall Crusade Suggested Motive.

New York, May 2.—Attacked after a Black Hand warning to her mother, Miss Ethel Jones, 360 Marston street, Brooklyn, is in a serious condition today at her home, suffering from a blow on the back of her head and half blinded by some fluid which her assailant dashed into her eyes.

The attack followed a series of threats which are reported to have been received by Rev. Dr. Charles J. Allen, of Beecher Memorial Church, in Brooklyn.

Dr. Allen, whose home is next door to that of Miss Jones, and whose church the injured girl attended, notified the police that he had received several Black Hand threats warning him that unless he ceased preaching against concert and dance halls some of the young women, attending his church would be abducted. The police, it is said, did not take the letters seriously.

Yesterday Mrs. Robert Jones is alleged to have received a letter, surmounted by a skull and crossbones device rudely drawn and a black hand, reading as follows:

"Your daughter Ethel's life is in danger when you least expect. Beware!"

The letter was signed with the initials "B. H."

Mrs. Jones showed it to Rev. Dr. Allen, who told her not to worry about it.

The daughter, Ethel, accompanied by two friends, went out calling later in the evening. Coming home, she parted from her companions a short distance from her home.

As she hurried in the direction of the house Miss Jones says she was suddenly struck on the back of the head by a man, who at the same instant threw a fluid in her eyes which blinded her. Then a handkerchief was knotted around her mouth so that she was unable to cry out and the blow was repeated.

She struggled desperately and scratched the man's face. After a moment the assailant, finding it impossible to stun her, cursed her in Italian, she believes, and ran away. Miss Jones staggered on until she was noticed by a young woman, who, seeing the gag fastened around her mouth, took the girl to her home and sent for a doctor, who worked over her until early today. He said that Miss Jones would not lose her eye sight. Some weak solution of acid was used, he thinks.

The force of the blows on the young woman's head was deadened, according to the physician, by an arrangement in her hair known as a "rat."

Better Than Spanking.

Spanking does not cure children of bed-wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box W, Notre Dame, Ind., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money, but write her today if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child, the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

ROBERT MALTHUS.

Was Great Theory Maker and Master of Scaring People.

Chicago News.
A hundred years ago there was a man named Malthus, and he was the proud possessor of a theory that was built with a special view of scaring the cheerfulness out of mankind.

His front name was Robert, and he was a doctor of medicine in England. One day when his digestion was poor and he had been up all night at a tedious case and collections were had, the poor man began to see indigo blue. While in that state of mind he couldn't think of anything cheerful, so he evolved a theory that the human race was due to make its last gasp in some of these centuries when none of us is looking for it.

His basis of figuring was this: The human race and other races of animals increase in geometrical ratio—by multiplication, while food and other things increase only arithmetically—by simple addition. When Doctor Malthus thought of that he couldn't sleep a wink.

Now, Malthus' theory looked so good that Charles Darwin, on the strength of it, proceeded to scare up his theory of the survival of the fittest (which conflicts so strongly with the saying that the good die young), and gave Malthus credit for the idea.

A new power of law of some kind was enacted by the English Parliament on the basis of Malthus' big scare. You see, the Doc was a past master at scaring people. He had the high-brows headed south about as fast as their poor feet would carry them. He went all over the part of Europe that wasn't then full of wars, with a view of confirming his theory, and, of course, he confirmed it. No man ever yet made an investigation with a definite result in mind without getting that result. That's why investigations by riders of hobbles are so valuable and trustworthy.

His theory went on to show beyond a shadow of doubt that in a few more generations the world would be so crowded with people that they would jostle each other for standing room in the most isolated spots, while in cities the population would be piled upon shelves. His idea was that by this time or a little later—say a century or so later—the world's food supply would have become so small in proportion to the population that hotels would be run on the lottery system. Then only the holders of the lucky numbers at the bi-weekly drawings would be given the capital prizes in the form of square meals. Most of the time, according to this cheerful person, the inhabitants of earth would be engaged in boring new holes in their belts to buckle them tighter and thus keep down the pangs of hunger.

In those days the only canal scandals would be those of the alimentary canals, the Panama ditch having become a trivial matter.

But how hard Malthus fell down in his prophecy! He didn't know that that the feature of matrimony was to be division instead of multiplication. Sioux Falls had not yet been discovered. Neither had puddles taken the place of babies among the wealthy and influential. Neither had Teddy bears been invented. These things have played havoc with his geometrical theory.

How could Malthus fore-see the building of flats and apartment houses in whose sacred precincts babies are high crimes and misdemeanors? How could he look ahead and see that it was going to cost four times as much to bring up a family of two as it once cost to raise six? Did Malthus ever buy a real piano, a set of furs, a party dress, dancing lessons, two kind of skates and other knickknags for a young daughter's Christmas, and proportionate luxuries for a son, both of whom must be as well equipped as the children of other fool parents.

No, Malthus didn't know about

A CONFEDERATE PUZZLE.

Daguerrotype Charleston Curator Would Like to Know About.

New York Sun.
Every Northerner who visits Charleston, S. C., should go to the museum of the Daughters of the Confederacy in the old Market Hall on Meeting street. He may be just the one living man who can solve the mystery of the old daguerrotype that was lost in battle and recovered after 40 years. The little old lady who is curator and guide about the museum hall hopes that before she dies some one from the North will look at this faded daguerrotype and say, "Yes, I know this man."

They have many quaint and sad relics of the war, these daughters of a past generation of fighting men. The exhibits stand in cases and hang from the walls of this one long room, where the Market Commissioners of Charleston have held their meetings since first the Market Hall was built in 1841. After the curator has pointed out the Confederate flag, which was reconstructed from a captured Federal flag—"For silk was difficult to find in those days"—the original painting of the interior of Fort Sumter after the long siege, the stars and buttons from General Lee's coat, she leads her visitors to a case on a side wall and points out the daguerrotype. Then she puts her question: "Do you know this man?"

The daguerrotype is round and cut to fit within the back of a watch case, wherein it is set. The portrait, still clear enough to be seen in its every line, is that of a young man in civilian dress—the dress of 50 years ago, with high rolling stock, low cut waistcoat and frilled shirt front. The youthful face is bearded and the heavy hair waved up into a dandy's lock over the forehead.

This portrait, backed in the gold watch case, was turned up from a battle field by a plough share only two years ago. The place where it was uncovered was fallow land on Morris Island in Charleston harbor. This is the story the curator tells:

It was in 1864, shortly before the evacuation of the crumbling Sumter by the Confederates and during the time when the investing Federal ships and marines were bending every effort to find away to fight through Charleston. A detachment of Federal marines landed under cover of gunfire on Morris Island. A repelling force of Confederates from Fort Moultrie landed at another point on the island, crossed over and fell upon the Federal marines. There was a hot engagement, and in the end the Union force was pushed to its boats and back to the blockading fleet. They did not have time even to bury their dead.

The scene of this skirmish remained forgotten and untouched through the evacuation of Charleston down to the recent time when the plow was run over the land where the marines had tried to make their stand. Then bullets, cannon, shot and belt clamps marked "U. S." were turned up with human bones. Also this daguerrotype backed in the half of a gold watch case and almost undimmed by the long years of burial.

"It is a mystery, this daguerrotype," says the curator of the museum. "Some day it may be solved."

CERTAIN RESULTS.

Many a Wadesboro Citizen Knows How Sure They Are.
Nothing uncertain about the work of Doan's Kidney Pills in Wadesboro. There is plenty of positive proof of this in the testimony of citizens. Such evidence should convince the most skeptical doubter. Read the following statement:

Mrs. A. B. Tarlton, of Wadesboro, N. C., says: "I am so well pleased with the benefit I received from the use of Doan's Kidney Pills that I willingly give them my endorsement. For a long time I suffered from severe pains in the small of my back, often accompanied by a soreness across my kidneys. The kidney secretions were unnatural and irregular in passage, causing me much annoyance. I tried many remedies, but nothing relieved me until I procured Doan's Kidney Pills. Since using them I have been steadily improving and seldom have any pain in my back. The kidney secretions also pass more regularly and I feel better in every way."

KISSING NOT DANGEROUS.

Boston, May 1.—Kissing as a perfectly safe pastime has just received the "O. K." of Dr. A. M. Worthington, a professor in the Harvard Medical School.

Persons who refrain because of fear of an interchange of bacteria are mortifying themselves uselessly, the educator told his audience at a lecture on "Man and His Bacteria" last night.

The bacteriological expert assured his hearers that the only danger in the practice to healthy persons was a sudden and violent attack of heart trouble.

"There is every reason to believe that when two wholesome persons meet lip to lip they may break away without upsetting the bacterial balance" was the way he put the good news.

Collecting Hairpins His Past. The New York Press.

Hairpins are supposed to be of interest only to women except when they jab a man in the eye. Here's a bachelor who, to make a collection of something, hit on hairpins. He is Lynnes K. Babcock, private secretary to Mayor Shank of Indianapolis. He has 4,000 in his collection, and many of them are said to have a historical value. "There is only one other man who collects hairpins," said Babcock the other day. "Mine is the largest collection." Babcock has labeled every hairpin with a complete history of where he got it. "I was in Queenstown, England, for four hours," said he, "and I found seventy-two hairpins. I have one that I picked from the grave of George Elford. I have another I picked up after a horse ridden by King Edward VII. stepped on it as the King was reviewing the troops in St. James' Park. I found another pin in St. Peter's, Rome. I have hairpins from every capital in Europe."

Readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh, being a constitutional disease, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.
