July 1, 1910 .-There will be Farmers' Institutes at Morven, Wadesboro and Peachland July 19, 20, and 21, I shall thank you very much to make a notice of it in your paper and call the attention of your farmer readers to the importance of attending the institutes. There will be held in connection with the Farmers' Institute a Women's Institute presided over by Mrs. Hollowell. Women's Institutes are not an experiment, but are regarded by those who are most familiar with them of even more importance than the institutes for men. It is at the women's institutes that improvements suggested that tend to the better health of the family and to other conditions that will mean better country homes for our children. # SAVED THE PEW.

Youth's Companion. Years ago there was a great meeting of a certain religious denomination in Chicago. Among many important inatters considered by them, writes Mr. Anderson in "Hitherto Untold," was the condition of their benevolent enterprises. It appeared from carefully compiled statistics from missions of all kinds, that the members of the denomination in the Northern States during the preceding year had paid only thirty-eight cents per capita.

An elequent and humorous brother discussed the subject before a large congregation. He said that the fact shown by statistics reminded him of a rich but penurious man in Wisconsin who was never known to contribute anything either for missions or local church expenses. He had a little boy who had just donned his first pair of trousers, and was as proud of his pockets as a peacock is

The little fellow had noticed that many people in the church dropped money into the contribution boxes, and decided that he would do so, too. He became the lordly owner of a

On Sunday his father and mother took him to church. As usual, a collection was taken, but neither of his parents gave anything.

The boy became excited, jumped off the seat, ran his hand dawn into one of his precious pockets, got hold of the only cent he had, and proudly dropped it into the contribution-box. As the collector passed to the next pew he heard the little boy say to his

the Petitioners in the Ansonville Depot Dispute, Makes a Savage Attack Upon Corporation Commissioners McNell and Rogers

One of the most sensational speeches ever made in North Carolina was delivered Friday by Mr. James A. Lockhart, of this place, before the Corporation Commission at Raleigh. The Commissioners sitting at the time were Chairman McNeil and Mr. S. L. Rogers. The hearing was on the exceptions of the petitioners to the findings of the Commissioners in locating the Southbound depot at Ansonville. It will be remembered that the Commissioners refused to order the depot located in the town of Ansonville, but permitted the location (known as the Richardson location) selected by the road to stand.

There has been a good deal of feeling about the matter and the exceedingly bitter speech made by Mr. Lockhart to some extent reflects the temper of the disputants. Mr. Lockhart said, in part:

"I of course realize the absolute in utility of appearing before the members of this Commission and requesting them to overrule their own decision, especially so as this decision is one which intringes upon the rights of the people and confers almost unlimited prerogatives upon a railroad. A Comparison of Buggies

This is what we would like to get every prospective customer to do-make a comparsson of the Tyson & Jones or Hackney buggies with any other buggy ever sold in the town of Wadesboro. When we can get a customer to do this we are entirely satisfied whether we make a sale or not, because if we do not convince him that we have the best buggy we don't want his business. We have been selling Tyson & Jones and the Hackney buggies for years and expect to be selling them years hence; we are steadily building up a trade on these two buggies while our competitors shift from year to year from one cheap buggy to another. Did you ever buy one of these cheap buggies on a "Very broad guarantee" and when you went back to the dealer next year and told him his buggy was no good have him tell you: "We have found that out. We have changed our line, and we have just as good a kind now as the Tyson & Jones or the Hackney." It sounds "fishy", doesn't it?

We would like to take up buggy comparison with you by starting in on the wheels. We use no wheels on these two grades of buggies that we do not fully and absolutely guarantee. Our axles are warranted and are undoubtedly the best grade of self oiling axles. We guarantee the leather upholstering of these two grades to show up of better material than any competing lines. We give you a deeper top, better trimmed top and better constructed top than any of the others. The castings and fittings, Bailey hangers, etc., are polished and emery ground before painting. Our springs are made of the best second growth seasoned hickory. Our factories not only use the very best quality of paints. but all bodies are rubbed out with several coats of rubbing varnish and finishing varnish, and our gears are finished in the old "rub lead" system, in five coats.

"The proof of the pudding is the eating thereof," so ask the man who uses a Tyson & Jones or a Hackney buggy what he thinks of them. They cost a little more than thetcheaper grade buggies, of course, but if comfort and pleasure are what you want you will
