The affair has created a tremendous sensation here. Nothing else has been talked today and there is much to speculate about yet, for Mr. Paisley refused to divulge the name of the child's mother and the mem bers of the church session refused to give out any information as to what took place at the meeting, except that Mr. Paisley included in his statement the fact that he had plan ned to have the child left at his door.

ROOSEVELT, INSURGENT.

If there lingered any doubt as to where Roosevelt stands," that doubt mie. He not only declares his sympathy with the Insurgent movement, but he sets forth his intentions definitely, almost as a regular platform. "I am back here to join with you in working for whatever is for the benent of our country," he tells the Kansans. And he presents a program that goes farther than that of the Insurgents in Congress.

The first duty, in his opinion, is to drive the corporations and the "special interests" out of politics. "The citizens of the Unived States must effectively control the mighty commercial forces which they themselves have called into being!" he exclaims. And he holds that there can be no effective control of corporations so long as they are allowed to remain active in politics. "To put an end to it will be no short or easy task," he says, "but it can be done." And Mr. Roosevelt leaves the inference that he is the man to do it. He reiterates his oft-repeated demand for Federal control over the capitalization as well as the operation of public service corporations. But in his plans for the supervision of railroads he goes much farther than Mr. Taft ever dared go. He calls for not only thorough-going regulation and control of stock and bond issues, but he adopts the idea that Senator La Follette has urged so long and which the Regulars have denouced as dangerous doctrine-the physical valuation of railroads. This is the one thing that the railroads have fought against most bitterly. They have been ready to agree to almost any plan of fair supervision, if this be spared them. But Mr. Roosevelt declares that physical valuation is necessary before Federal regulation advocating this dedtrine which mos railroad men regard as revolutionary. he proclaims that he and the Insur gents are the true conservatives and warns the financiers that submission to government control is the only thing that can save the railroads from Government ownership.

His assertion that "combinations in industry are the result of an imperative economic law, which cannot be repealed by political legislation," is another way of saying that he believes the trusts are here to stay and that there is no need to try to dissolve them or prohibit them under any anti-trust law. He would have the law confirm the trust in its organ ization, but would regulate its business through the Government. He would extend Federal supervision to "combinations which control necessities of life, such as meat, oil and coal, or which deal in them on an impor tant scale." It is only a step from this to Federal control of all forms of

Had Been Left In Cellar Without Food For Two Days.

Philadelphia, Sept. 1.-The cellar of the vacant house 746 South Seventh street was the scene of a battle yesterday afternoon in which 14-yearold August Forlana, of 768 South Eleventh street, fought for his life with two vicious bulldogs that had been there without food for two days. The boy had been idling in the neighborhood of Seventh and Fitzwater streets. He knew that the occupants of the Seventh street house had moved away, but he did not know that they had failed to take their bulldogs with them. He decided to enter the cellar to see if they had left behind any articles of value. No sooner had he set foot on 'the cellar floor than the two dogs, frantic from bunger and maddened by confinement struck him with a rush which carried him to the floor. The boy screamed with fear and pain as the animals sank their teeth time and again in his legs, arms and back. He had the presence of n ind and good fortune to ward off their attacks on have stifled his cries for help.

Given superhuman strength by his desperate plight, the boy finaly gained his feet and reached a window. But every time he tried to climb through the animals dragged him back. His yells attracted the attention of men passing by, but when they saw the savage brutes they were afraid to enter thecellar. But some one summoned a policeman of the Second and Christain Street Station.

When the policenan arrived the dogs had the boy on the cellar floor again. The rescuer sprang at the animals, swinging his club with telling strokes. After receiving a number of heavy blows the dogs slank into a corner. The policeman caught up the boy, dashed up the cellar steps and slammed the door.

Hospital, where his many wounds were cauterized and sewed up. None of them were in a vital place, so the doctors think he has a good chance of recovery. Later he was taken to the Philadelphia Hospital for the Pastuer treatment.

When the police afterward went to the cellar they found that the dogs
