THE STAFF OF LIFE.

Cereals As Human Food From The Earliest Ages Until To-Day Philadelphia Times.

According to modern analysis as well as to well-founded traditional knowledge, there is an abundance of potent and strength-giving factors in oats, corn, wheat, rice and other varieties of the graniferous products to warrant their use as a mainstay and staple of food. Bread has been for centuries recognized in the telling popular phrase as "the staff of life," and popular phrases are usually founded on sound experience. Going back to the roots of the language, our word "lord" is derived from the Anglo-Saxon words "loaf ward"—the loaf-keeper or dispenser, who was, of course, an important feudal figure. The Roman mob cried: "Panem et circenses!" (For grain and pleasure!)

Despite the strictures of dyspeptic Carlyle, the Scotch, with their oatmeal cakes and oatmeal porridge, are a robust race. The Chinese have for centuries flourished on a fare of rice; the aboriginal Americans had maize as their chief food; the Southern Latin peoples partake mainly of spaghetti and the Northern peasantry eat their black bread made of various grains.

And so examples might be multiplied indefinitely to attest the value of cereals in the human economy. At this time cereals are to be obtained in many varied and palatable forms. As manufactured there is an infinite variety of them which might beneficially be turned to account in the daily regimen. The objection may be urged that as soon as this were done the new demand would cause a rise in prices, but such reasoning would be fallacious, in view of the twofold fact that the manufacturers of cereals have conducted in their interest a campaign, the feature of which is a fixed price for cereals, and that the supply is too ample with our yearly "bumper crops."

DOCTOR ADVISED OPERATION

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Galena, Kans.—"A year ago last March I fell, and a few days after there was soreness in my right side. In a short time a lump came and it bothered me so much at night I could not sleep. It kept growing larger and by fall it was as large as a hen's egg. I went to bed without a hot water bottle applied to that side. I had one of the best doctors in Kansas and he told my husband that I would have to be operated on as it was something like a tumor caused by a rupture. I wrote to you for advice and you told me not to get discouraged but to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did take it and soon the lump in my side broke and passed away."—Mrs. R. R. HUEY, 713 Mineral Ave., Galena, Kans.

Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has proved to be the most successful remedy for curing the worst forms of female ills, including displacements, inflammation, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result has been worth millions to many suffering women.

BEECHER'S FARM.

Sketch Contributed to The Buffalo Express by Mark Twain.

Mr. B's farm consists of 36 acres, and is carried on in strict scientific principles. He never puts in any part of a crop without consulting his book. He plows and reaps and digs and sows according to the best authorities—and the authorities cost more than the other farming implements do. As soon as the library is complete the farm will begin to be a profitable investment. But book farming has its drawbacks. Upon one occasion when it seemed morally certain that the hay ought to be cut the hay book could not be found, and before it was found it was too late and the hay was all spoiled. Mr. Beecher raises some of the finest crops of wheat in the country, but the unfavorable difference between the cost of producing it and its market value after it is produced has interfered considerably with its success as a commercial enterprise.

His special weakness is hogs, however. He considers hogs the best game a farm produces. He buys the original pig for $1.50, and feeds him about $40 worth of corn, and then sells him for about $9. This is the only crop he ever makes any money on. He loses on the corn, but he makes $7.50 on the hog. He does not mind this because he never expects to make anything on corn anyway. And any way it turns out, he has the excitement of raising the hog anyhow, whether he gets the worth of him or not. His strawberries would be a comfortable success if the robbers would eat turnips, but they won't and hence the difficulty.

One of Mr. Beecher's most harassing difficulties in his farming operations comes of the close resemblance of different sorts of seeds and plants to each other. Two years ago his farsightedness warned him that there was going to be a great scarcity of watermelons, and therefore he put in a crop of seven acres of that fruit. But when they came up they turned out to be pumpkins, and a dead loss was the consequence. Sometimes a portion of his crop goes into the ground the most promising sweet potatoes and comes up the most execrable carrots.

When he bought his farm he found one egg in every hen's nest on the place. He said that here was just the reason why so many farmers failed—they scattered their forces too much—concentration was the idea. So he gathered those eggs together and put them all under one experienced hen. That hen roosted over the contract night and day for many weeks under Mr. Beecher's personal supervision, but she could not "phase" those eggs. Why? Because they were those shameless porcelain things which are used by modern farmers as nest eggs.

Mr. Beecher's farm is not a triumph. It would be easier if he worked it on shares with some one; but he cannot find anybody who is willing to stand half the expense, and not many that are able. Still, persistence in any cause is bound to succeed. He was a very inferior farmer when he began, but a prolonged and unflinching assault upon his agricultural difficulties has had its effect at last and he is last rising from affluence to poverty.

She Wasn't Skeptical. "Mebby youse wouldn't believe it ma'am," said the husky hobo, "but I come av putty good stock."

GOVERNMENT COTTON REPORT

Report Did Not Bear Out Extremely Bullish Private Estimates But It Served to Advance Prices to a New High Record For Season.

New York, Oct. 3.—Although today's government report on the condition of the cotton crop did not fully bear out some of the extremely bullish private estimates, it was bullish enough to start an active buying movement, which advanced prices to a new high record for the season. While there was tremendous realizing the market advanced to 14.13 for December and 14.31 for March before there was any reaction of consequence. Even then, offerings were so well absorbed that after selling off some 15 to 25 points from the top the market again rallied and at the close was firm, with last prices 20 to 30 points above the closing figures of Saturday.

Business was more general than at any time since last May, for the excitement which attended the closing phases of the old crop bull campaign did not represent such widespread interest as the market now appears to be attracting, owing to an apprehension that another small crop is to follow.

For the past two or three weeks the market has shown an advancing tendency based upon a bullish view of crop prospects, and it now appears that some of the same bull leaders who were prominently connected with the movement of last season are already accumulating large holdings in anticipation of further high prices. The effect of this buying had been considerable, and before the government's condition figures were issued today, December contracts, which had sold at 12.83 last month, were selling at 13.94, while March contracts, which had sold at 12.89 after the culmination of the old crop bull campaign, had advanced to 14.12.

While the acreage this year is larger than last season, bull authorities assert that the crop this year is so late that calculation based upon the condition figures will prove misleading unless there is an abnormally late growing season.

The census report issued early in the day had no immediate influence on the market. The Southern spot markets, as officially reported, were unchanged to 1 cent higher, but local buyers profess to believe that the South will be found ready to follow the speculative advance.

Capt. Bogardus Again Hits the Bull's Eye.

This world-famous rifle shot, who holds the championship record of 100 pigeons in 100 consecutive shots, is living at Lincoln, Ill. Recently interviewed, he says: "I suffered a long time with kidney and bladder trouble and used several well known kidney medicines, all of which gave me no relief until I started taking Foley Kidney Pills. Before I had taken five of them I had severe backaches and pains in my kidneys with suppression and a cloudy voiding. On arising in the morning I would get dull headaches. Now I have taken three bottles of Foley Kidney Pills and feel 100 per cent better. I am never bothered with my kidneys or bladder and again feel like my old self."—Per Doe Pharmacy; Parsons Drug Co.

He Was Too Enthusiastic.

Hank Dobbs was noted as a "honest" horse trader. He would not let it about a horse. He would merely suppress the truth. Incidentally he always beat the customer who dealt with him. The way he could stir over the defects and buzz about the virtues of an animal amounted to genius. Once Hank was trying to sell a neighbor a horse that was short, even which was nearly sightless. The neighbor knew Hank would not let it outright to him, so he questioned the horse trader as to the various points of the brute.

"How about his eyesight? Can he see out of both eyes?"

"Sure," said Hank. "He's got good eyes." Here he leaned forward, his eyes fairly scintillating with suppressed honesty. "One eye is particularly good!"

Hank's enthusiasm for the truth had carried him too far. The deal was off.—Tulsa (Okla.) Post.

Hair Monstrosities.

French theater managers in the eighteenth century had worse evils than picture hats to contend against. Marie Antoinette, that was short, even according to French standards, set the fashion of high coiffures and ultra-fashionable women prided themselves on measuring four feet from their chins to the tops of their heads. These structures took about six hours to erect, the hairdresser mounting a ladder in the process. Some coiffures were almost as broad as they were long, with wings sticking out about eight inches on each side of the head. For the "frigate" coiffure the hair was ripped in a huge pile to represent the waves of an angry sea and surmounted by a fully rigged ship. As a consequence of these monstrosities, disturbances in theaters occurred almost daily until an ordinance was issued against the admission of women with high coiffures to the floor of the house.

COULDN'T TRUST HER.

National Monthly.

Brown was motoring through the country with a young lady friend who was very fond of wild flowers. Running along beside a country stream the young lady espied some beautiful wild blossoms and asked Brown to stop the car so she could get out and gather a bouquet. Brown stuck to the car while the young lady proceeded to the river bank. In a few minutes time a youngster waited on Mr. Brown.

"Hey," said the boy, "is that your lady friend down there on the river bank gatherin' flowers?"

"Yes, she's my friend," said Brown.

"Will," said the boy, "she's keepin' us from goin' in swimmin' and the fellers sent me up to see if you'd take her away from here."

Brown was rather pleased with the old demand and he had the boy wait his car while he ran down to the river bank advise the young lady of the request the boys were making. When he returned to the car, he told the boy that he and his companions could go right ahead with their swimming and that the young lady had agreed not to look their way. The boy then returned to his companions only to come back to Brown a few minutes later.

"Hey," said the boy.

"Well, my son, what is it now?" asked Brown.

"That's all right what you said about her not lookin', but the fellers say that she's no different from other women and they doesn't trust her."

Three Curious Bells.

There is a curious legend connected with the bells of Messingham church. It is said that a long, long time ago a traveler was passing through Messingham when he noticed three men sitting on a stile in the churchyard and saying, "Come to church, Thompson; come to church, Brown," and so on. Being very much surprised, he asked what it meant and was told that, having no bells, they called folks to church in this way. The traveler remarked that it was a pity so fine a church should be without bells and at the same time asked the men if they could make three for the church, promising to pay for them himself. They undertook to do this. They were respectively a tinker, a carpenter and a shoemaker. When next the traveler passed that way he found the three men ringing three bells which said, "Ting, tong, pluff," being made respectively of tin, wood and leather!—London Tit-Bits.

Calling on Tennyson.

A young American girl, who with her mother had called at Farringford to see the famous poet Tennyson, but was not received, shortly after expressed her regret to Mrs. Cameron, Tennyson's neighbor, who was also his intimate friend and a lady at once "harming and masterful."

"Oh, so he wouldn't see you?" cried Mrs. Cameron indignantly. "Come with me."

She took the reluctant American straight back to Tennyson's house and, without knocking or ringing, went into the room where he sat with his wife.

"Alfred," said she as the two looked up, startled, "these strangers came from a far country to see the lion of Freshwater, and behold—a bear!"

Tennyson burst out laughing and became amiable at once.

Taking a Chance. The mistress was giving Harriet the benefit of her advice and counsel touching a momentous step the latter contemplated.

"Of course, Harriet," said the lady of the house, "if you intend to get married that's your own business, but you mustn't forget that marriage is a very serious matter."

"Yes, mum," said Harriet; "yes, mum, I know 'tis sometimes, mum. But, mum, maybe I'll have better luck than you did, mum."—Brooklyn Life.

One of His Lives Lost.

The Yonks Companion.

John Burroughs, the aged naturalist, is by no means a sentimentalist, and loses no chance to ridicule the nature writers who attribute almost human intelligence to creatures beneath man in the scale of life. In the Kenebeck Journal there is a story told by a New York editor of a dinner at which Mr. Burroughs and a young writer of the new school were guests.

This young man told a wonderful story about the intelligence of oysters. He said he was going to put the story in his new book. Mr. Burroughs gave a dry laugh, and said:

"Let me tell you about a cat. This story is quite as authentic as the other one, and it should do for your book nicely."

The venerable student passed impressively, then said:

"A Springfield couple had a cat that age had rendered helpless, and they put it out of its misery by means of chloroform. They buried it in the garden, and planted a rose-bush over its remains. The next morning a familiar scratching took them to the front door, and there was the cat waiting to be let in, with the rose-bush under its arm."

Biliousness is due to a disordered condition of the stomach. Chamberlain's Tablets are essentially a stomach medicine, intended especially to act on that organ; to cleanse it, strengthen it, tone and invigorate it, to regulate the liver and to banish biliousness positively and effectually. For sale by all druggists.
