PRODIGALS.

Fortunate are they who have the happy knack of profiting not only by their own past mistakes, but also by the bitter experience of others. Verily they are the comparative few. In spite of the abundant proof of the inevitable outcome of vice and folly, heedless, unthinking youth—and often heedless age as well—goes on in the very uneven tenor of its way, with nothing in view but present enjoyment, and no care or thought for the future.

The thought is suggested by a number of instances mentioned in the daily press during the past few months—and they are but samples of the vast unrecordered legions—of blighted lives and wasted fortunes, of foolish men who, after spending their all on hypocritical and sycophantic fair-weather "friends," ended friendless, in abject poverty and destitution. We can't help pitying these poor prodigals whose chief fault perhaps is their lack of sense and judgment—their failure to realize that the friends of their prosperous days are, in many cases, drawn to them by sheer self-interest and consequently sure to desert them in the hour of need.

The prodigal isn't always, or even generally, a radically bad man. On the contrary, he is generally a kind, warm-hearted, good-natured fellow. Not seldom he has in him the very best material, but it has never been developed by proper training or direction. Probably he has had no one to put him on the right road and give him the right start. Superficial and shallow-minded people generally regard as fortunate the child "born with a silver spoon in its mouth," but really, unless such a child has unusually fine inherited traits and wise direction, there could scarcely be a greater misfortune for it than to be born into a condition or state of life which precludes the necessity of exertion or personal efforts—the only means possible for the formation of character and the attainment of true and vigorous manhood.

Prodigals, like human nature generally, are much the same in all times and places; and the Prodigal Son of the Gospels is a true type of the prodigal of every age, while his respectable elder brother is a fair specimen of the opposite class. This poor young fool of a prodigal wanted "to see the world," "to see life," as so many others have wanted before and since his time. He saw it and was speedily disillusioned. Impulsive and impetuous, ambitious perhaps, full of animal spirits, weary of his dull, commonplace surroundings, of the ordinary, humdrum, routine life of his father's house, he yearned to go forth into the big world beyond and enjoy life to the full. With the generosity common to such natures as his, he spent his money freely, and of course quickly gathered about him a host of "friends"—not his friends, but his money's friends. We can readily picture the depth and strength of their attachment so long as the money lasted. But when that went, they went too, with the usual result that the erstwhile princely patron became a drudge and a beggar. The same thing is occurring under our own eyes every day in the year. The prodigals of the present generation, like those of preceding ones, will not take warning from the fate of their famous prototype.

To tell the truth, we have more liking for the prodigal than we have for his respectable elder brother. And in this we are in line with the prodigal's own father. It is worthy of note that parents—mothers especially—seem to have a particularly warm spot in their hearts for the black sheep of the family. It isn't the badness in the prodigal that attracts, but the good native material that has gone wrong and been abused. Nor is it the really good qualities of the respectable elder brother that make us like him less. It is his sanctimonious

IT WAS ECZEMA IT WAS RINGWORM

It Spread All Over His Head—If Touched It Would Bleed and Leave Raw Spot—Could not Go to School—Spent $200, Still He Was Bad.

Got Cuticura. In Six Weeks He was Well and Had Growth of Hair.

"One day, when my boy was five years old, I noticed a sore on the top of his head. I was alarmed, so I called in Dr. — and he said it was eczema. After treating it for a week it spread all over his head, so the doctor advised us 'to see a specialist in New York' by the name of —. He said it was a bad case of ringworm and recommended a course of his. We doctored with him a long while and spent about $200 and the boy's head was still bald. He had a disgusting looking little head. I would scale over night and if you touched it it would bleed and leave a raw spot. All this time he had not been able to go to school, although he was eight years old. Then an old druggist named — said, 'Why don't you take him to the hospital, as they have cured a young lady with the Cuticura Remedies?' But they said the young lady's case had been different. So we decided to try the Cuticura Remedies ourselves. We got Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent and they gave our boy immediate relief with the first application and in six weeks' time he was well and had a growth of hair. Now he is fourteen and has a nice growth of hair than my other children! The doctors all said he would be bald or that would come out in white spots, and several doctors said to take the child to the hospital. We had at least seven doctors and we received no benefit from any." Mrs. Harry Fox, Liberty Corner, N. J., Feb. 10, 1910.

GOOD WAY TO USE HYOMEI FOR CATARRH.

Besides breathing through the inhaler a few times a day, many catarrh sufferers write that they find inhaling HYOMEI (pronounce it High-o-me) from a bowl of steaming water each night before retiring a great aid in curing stubborn cases.

Try it; it's very simple; gives quick relief and makes you breathe easier.

Fill a bowl half full of boiling water; pour into the water a teaspoonful of HYOMEI, cover head and bowl with a towel, and breathe through nose and mouth the pleasant, medicated, antiseptic and healing vapor that arises.

This method relieves that stiffness at once, and makes your head feel fine.

You can get a bottle of HYOMEI at Parsons Drug Co. and druggists everywhere, for only 50 cents. Ask for extra bottle HYOMEI inhalent.

But bear in mind that a HYOMEI outfit which includes inhaler and bottle of HYOMEI costs $1.00.

HYOMEI is guaranteed by Parsons Drug Co. and druggists everywhere to cure catarrh, sore throat, coughs, colds, asthma and croup, or money back. Try it on that generous basis.

Robbed of Her Happiness.

"You are not looking well, Mrs. W. H. Hinton."

"No; I haven't slept well lately."

"What's the trouble? Has the weather affected you?"

"Oh, no; it isn't that."

"I'll tell you what it is. You ought to give up the practice of drinking coffee at night. I know a lot of people who toss awake all night after they have been out to a late dinner and finished with coffee. I had to quit it myself."

"I'm sure that isn't the cause of my trouble."

"Have you seen a doctor?"

"No. A doctor couldn't help me any."

"But how can you tell until you go to one and let him examine you?"

"Well, if you must know, I'm worrying about my husband. He hasn't kicked at the size of the bills lately, and he's been so kind and even tempered right along for a month or two that I feel almost sure he must be leading a double life. Ah, if he would only get to grumbling and making it disagreeable around the house again!"

The Waiter With Two Cars.

A Cleveland party recently sojourning in a Toronto hotel decided to take an automobile ride about the city. They approached the extremely self-conscious clerk and asked him where they could secure a car.

"Our head waitress has two, don't you know," he replied.

It took some little time to recover from this shock, but presently one of the party ventured to ask the price.

"Three an hour," was the answer.

That was voted satisfactory, and at luncheon one of the Clevelanders turned to the nearest waiter.

"Who's the chap that owns two automobiles?" he asked.

"I am the chap," the waiter replied, and he threw such a freezing emphasis into the word "chap" that it was fairly frost cracked.

They finished their luncheon before they had enough courage to ask the price.

"Four dollars an hour," the waiter replied with haughty indifference. Then they went upstairs and hired a very good car for $3 an hour.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Gaelic A B C.

Every letter in the Gaelic alphabet is represented by a tree. The alphabet of today consists of eighteen letters—in ancient Gaelic seventeen—and now, as of old, all the letters with the exception of g, t and u, which stand for ivy, furze and heather, are called after trees.

The Gaelic A B C of today runs: Ailim, beite, coll, dur, eagh, feara, gath, haath, fogh, luis, nuin, nuin, oiv, peith, ruis, suil, teine, ur, which is equivalent to saying elm, birch, hazel, oak, aspen, alder, ivy, whitethorn, hew, rowan or quicken, vine, ash, spindle tree, pine, elder, willow, furze, heath.

In the ancient Gaelic alphabet the letter h (the heath or whitethorn) does not exist. The alphabet is called the beith-luis-nuin, because b l n and not a b c are its first three letters.

A Good Position

Can be had by ambitious young men and ladies in the field of "Wireless" or Railway telegraphy. Since the 8-hour law became effective, and since the wireless companies are establishing stations throughout the country, there is a great shortage of telegraphers. Positions pay beginners from $70 to $90 per month, with good chance of advancement. The National Telegraph Institute operates six official institutes in America, supervised by railway and wireless officials, and places all graduates into positions. It will pay you to write them for full details at Davenport, Ia., Cincinnati, O., Portland, Ore., or Memphis, Tenn.
