ANOTHER DANGEROUS INSECT.

Youth's Companion. Men have hunted wild beasts so persistently and relentlessly that the lions, tigers, wolves and other dangerous animals have disappeared from every settled district.

It is less than twenty years since Maj. Ronald Ross announced his theory that malaria is spread by the bite of a certain variety of mosquito, and less than fifteen years since it was demonstrated that yellow fever, as well as malaria, is communicated by another species.

Doctor Sambon, an English physician, has lately announced his conclusion that pellagra, a terrible and insidious disease ending in insanity and death, is such an ailment. He holds that it is communicated to the well by the bite of a black sand-fly of the Cimulidulæ family.

If, after further investigation, Doctor Sambon's conclusions are found to be warranted, one more disease has lost its terrors and one more insect is added to the list of those that must be exterminated or avoided.

"Before I started to work mornings I would have to wrap every finger separately, so as to try and keep them soft and then wear gloves over the ragged work while using Cuticura Ointment.

THE GET-RICH-QUICK ROAD A LONG AND ROCKY ONE.

Baltimore Sun.

The raid of United States officials upon two alleged corrupt business concerns in New York has laid bare a great system of fraud and illustrated the credulity of people who seek wealth without working for it.

In former times, when the Post-office Department was being used by any concern or individuals for purposes of fraud, a so-called fraud order was issued and the transportation and delivery of the mail was stopped.

It would be well if Mr. Hitchcock or some one else could impress upon the people generally that the best, and indeed the only safe, way to acquire wealth is to work for it, and that reliable business firms do not offer safe stocks which pay 50 per cent. dividends at bargain prices.

Christians in Old Rome. Religious persecution as such was unknown under the Romans. The Christians were regarded as sectarians.

Wounds of the Heart. In wounds of the heart itself the escape of blood is never in large quantity, and the lethal consequences are due to the fact that the escape of blood from within its cavity or cavities into the surrounding sac of the pericardium mechanically interrupts the alternate contraction and expansion by which its pumping action is maintained.

Cutting. A Scotch lawyer was well reprieved when, seated by a lady fully aware of her own plain looks, having bowed to his hostess in giving the toast, "Hon. Mr. Men and Honorable Ladies," she rejoined, raising her own glass, "We may both drink that toast, since it refers to neither of us."

A BIT OF DISCIPLIN.

Youth's Companion.

A reprimand which takes the form of a joke is sometimes more effective than a burst of anger. Such an example was furnished by a Confederate officer, and described by T. O. Moore in his "Anecdotes of General Cleburne."

General Granbury saluted General Cleburne, who remarked: "I'm peddling apples to-day."

The invitation was accepted, the men cheering for "Old Pat." When the apples were gone, the general made each man who had stolen the apples carry a rail for a mile or two.

WHY NOT GET RID OF CATARRH? Here are some symptoms of catarrh; if you have any of them, get rid of them while there is yet time:

Is your throat raw? Do you sneeze often? Is your breath foul? Are your eyes watery? Do you take cold easily? Is your nose stopped up? Do you have to spit often? Do crusts form in your nose? Are you losing your sense of smell? Do you blow your nose a great deal? Does your mouth taste bad mornings? Do you have to clear your throat on waking or have a discharge from the nose? Does mucus drop in back of throat? Have you ringing noises in the ears? HYOMEI (pronounce it High-ome) is guaranteed to cure catarrh, coughs, colds, sore throat, bronchitis, asthma and croup, or money back. Just breathe it in. Complete outfit, including hard rubber inhaler, $1.00.

How the Natives Treat Gorillas. Natives in the countries inhabited by great apes regard them always as human beings of inferior type, and it is for this reason that for a long time it was considered impossible to get hold of an entire gorilla skin, because the savages considered it religiously necessary to cut off the hands and feet of the animals when they killed them, just as they do with their enemies, possibly for the purpose of rendering them harmless in case they should by any chance come to life again.

Perhaps. Mr. Clubman—I see by the papers that a poor young man who lost both his legs while saving the life of a beautiful heiress at a railway crossing is to marry the girl. She dismissed all suitors and offered herself to him. Mrs. C. (meaningly)—Very sensible girl. She'll know where her husband is nights anyway.

Badly Balanced. A witty Frenchman wrote at the commencement of this century a very interesting and amusing book bearing the title, "Les Agremens et les Chagrins des Marriages." In this work the first four pages are devoted to the "agremens" (joys) and the remaining 350 to the "chagrins" (sorrows).

A Comparison. Several times had little Mary looked wonderingly out of the window, watching the full moon rise. Then a thought seemed to strike her.

WAR ON THE BOLL WEEVIL.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 22.—More than two hundred delegates, representing all of the cotton-growing States, gathered in the convention here today to discuss but one subject: "War on the Boll Weevil." The delegates were welcomed by Gov. Joseph M. Brown and Mayor Robt. F. Mead.

It was the consensus of opinion that this cotton plant pest can be successfully fought, but it will be necessary to completely revolutionize farming methods. It was pointed out that as the weevil will be across the Southwestern borders of Georgia by 1912 it is necessary to outline a campaign against the weevil as early as possible.

One of the most practical addresses of the session today was that by Dr. W. D. Hinds, State entomologist of Alabama. Dr. Hinds illustrated his address with stereopticon views. He declared that to successfully combat the eastward march of the weevil the planter must burn off the cotton stalks just as soon as the crop is picked. He declared that this will kill 97 per cent of the weevils.

Two sessions of the conference will be held tomorrow.

There Was No Other Course. The New England boiled dinner and other dishes like pork and beans, bolted codfish and pumpkin pie best appealed to the appetite of Chief Justice Melville W. Fuller. It was said in Washington that the Fuller Saturday night dinner was baked beans and nothing else, and this story is told: "One evening the chief justice, possibly forgetting that it was Saturday, asked a distinguished English jurist home to dinner with him. When the beans came on the Englishman promptly declined them. Mrs. Fuller showed some embarrassment, whereupon the Englishman amiably said: 'Never mind. I'll make it up in the leg of mutton.' 'But, good Lord,' exclaimed the chief justice, 'there isn't any other course!' And there wasn't. In addition to being a very small eater the chief justice was a moderate smoker of modestly priced cigars. He was said to smoke the same kind of cigars, as far as they were obtainable, that he smoked when he was struggling hard to establish a living law business in Chicago in the old days. He said he was attached to these cheap cigars by ties of sentimentality, and that nothing else would taste so good to him."—Springfield Republican.

"Pins and Needles." After being for a long time in a constrained attitude a peculiar numbness and pricking are often felt in the arm, leg or foot. This is caused by some interruption to the circulation and can usually be removed by rubbing or exercise. The reason of the sensation, which is decidedly uncomfortable while it lasts, is that pressure for a certain length of time deadens the sensibility of a nerve. When this pressure is suddenly removed, as straightening out the leg after sitting with it doubled underneath the body, sensibility gradually returns to the nerve, and as each nerve fiber commencing the trunk, regains its normal condition of sensibility a pricking sensation is felt, and these successive prickings from the successive awakenings of the numerous fibers have not inaptly been called "pins and needles."

The Prayer That Hurt. A member of a certain Massachusetts parish prominent for his thrift and personal consequence was also notorious for his overbearing assumptions and pompous airs. Under the distress and fright of a dangerous illness he "put up notes" on several successive Sundays, and after his recovery, according to usage, he offered a note to be read by the minister expressive of his thanks. The minister was somewhat "large" in this part of his prayer, recalling the danger and the previous petitions of the "squire" and retaining his grateful acknowledgments with the prayer that the experience might be blessed to the spiritual welfare of the restored man. He closed with these words: "And we pray, O Lord, that thy servant may be cured of that ungodly strut, so offensive in the sanctuary."

Law and Geography. From the half timers' papers written at the chief term examination: "Some of the chief inventions of the last 150 years are having an act so that no person under fourteen years must go into the public house. Another act was so that no person under the age of sixteen years must smoke cigars, pipes and cigarettes, and no person under that age can be served with any. My brother Bill is now all right for this invention. He was sixteen last week."

Here is a geography answer: "The river system of Canada is what you might call very good, but sometimes they shoot the rapids, and unless you are a red Indian this is very troublesome at times, especially when you get snaked under like Captain Webb."—Manchester Guardian.

The Earliest Cigars. The earliest mention of cigars in English occurs in a book dated 1735. A traveler in Spanish America named Cockburn, whose narrative was published in that year, describes how he met three friars at Nicaragua, who, he says, "gave us some seggars to smoke; these are Leaves of Tobacco rolled up in such a manner that they serve both for a Pipe and Tobacco itself; they know no other way here, for there is no such thing as a Tobacco Pipe throughout New Spain."

DIES OF PELLAGRA.

Miss Maud Cheers Passes Away at Her Home in Waxhaw. After a Long Illness, Waxhaw Enterprise.

Miss Maud Cheers, a well known young lady, died Monday morning about 5 o'clock at the home of her sister, Mrs. John G. Parks, in this place, after an illness of three years or more of pellagra. Hers was perhaps one of the most perplexing cases of this strange and incurable disease that has yet developed in this section of the country.

Miss Cheers' health began to fail more than three years ago, when pellagra was hardly known in this community, her case being one of the first diagnosed as that disease in this neighborhood, when the symptoms were nothing more than the usual nervousness with the angry spots appearing on the hands and arms.

But Miss Cheers was industrious and energetic and began at once a battle for life against the disease, which she most wonderfully kept up until she fell a victim to its unyielding power. She took hospital treatment and went to different health resorts, but found no permanent benefit anywhere.

During the three years of her affliction this typical case of pellagra developed every phase and stage known in the strange disease. The patient often passed over as many as five days and nights in succession without any sleep or rest whatever, finally becoming desperate in the last stages. However, she met death bravely, appearing to embrace it as a sweet relief, for the facts could hardly be woven into a story that would express in full the sufferings of a victim of this malady.

Miss Cheers was born in the eastern part of Union county, about thirty-eight years ago, but her parents moved to Waxhaw, where she made her home before coming to Waxhaw. She was graduated from the High Point Female College at the age of eighteen years, after which she taught school at several different places in the State. About eight years ago Miss Cheers took a special course at the State Normal College, but never further engaged in school work. She came to this place about five years ago and took a position as milliner with the R. J. Bell Company, which she held until her health failed. And during that time she made a large number of friends in her adopted home town and community, who gave her up with the deepest regret.

Miss Cheers had an unusually cheerful and happy disposition, and during her long and desolate affliction she rarely appeared to be the least impatient or to lose sight or hope of the beautiful home beyond. She died at last the death of a Christian. She was a member of King Street Baptist church.

Miss Cheers was a daughter of Dr. Cheers, who was well known in the western part of this county 30 years ago.—The M. & J.

From The Belay. A sea captain and his mate went ashore on getting into port and made for the nearest restaurant. They ordered soup. When it arrived the captain examined the curious-looking fluid and shouted: "Here, waiter, what d'ye call this?" "Soup, sir," said the waiter. "Soup," said the captain, turning to his mate, "blame me, Bill, if you and me ain't been sailin' on soup all our lives and never knowed it."

SWIFT JUSTICE.

Baltimore Sun.

The pertinent thing about the Crippen case can be said in a few words. The man murdered his wife, he was convicted in short order, he was sentenced to be hanged and he was hanged. There was no improper delay, no long-term appeals, no quibbling over technicalities. Crippen was given a fair trial and after being found guilty he was hanged. In this country the court proceedings would have dragged along for years and at the end of the time the guilty man, possibly, would have escaped.

There isn't much force in the sentimental plea that through this swift procedure an innocent man's life may sometimes be sacrificed. Since the establishment of the Criminal Court of Appeals in England we think no fable of this sort has occurred there. In this country, on the other hand, the problem of the law's delay has grown to be one threatening and appalling.

They do these things better in England.

Was Disappointed. "Did you hear what happened at Bagley's today?" "No; what was it?" "He took down an old pistol he had had about the house for years and playfully snapped the trigger at his wife, thinking it wasn't loaded." "Good heavens!" "Well, it wasn't."—New York World.

We're sorry if you've tried other medicines and they failed. As a last resort try Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. It's a simple remedy, but it's worked wonders. Makes millions well and happy. Purifies the blood, makes flesh and muscle, cleanses your system.
