"Coal To Burn"

The Wadesboro Oil Mill operates a domestic fuel department. Perhaps this seems a curious branch of the oil business, but it is easily explained. It takes steam to run a mill, and it takes fuel to make steam. We buy coal in great quantities, and now have a large supply on hand.

This is the Right Coal to Buy

We save all the good clean lumps for our customers, and use the dirty dust for our furnaces. (There it burns just as well as the other.)

Discriminating Customers get the very finest coal every time.

The Drawing Up of a Big Mort gage a Serious Matter.

a Basis For an Issue of Bonda an Expert on Definitions la Employed-Expense and Big Fees Involved.

Drawing up a big mortgage, cially when it is to be the basis for as of in the open market, is a tuek far tinuous labor elapse between the beginning of the first draft and the final approval of the last revised copy by those most directly concerned. The primary object of such a formidable legal instrument is, of course, to define clearly and exactly what the motiongor will do. The individual or company in whose favor the mortrage is drawn, however, through his attorney seeks to protect himself from every possible contingency. Some of these possibilities that are sought to be guarded against appear to be absurd to the lay mind. Some years ago a boat line ressels plied on a certain riv ed to mortgage its property and is bonds. One of the provisions of the be done in the event of the river drying up or becoming impossible to naviflood of water at all seasons, the possibility of this contingency arising seemed out of all reason, but the attorneys for the mortgagee insisted upon its insertion. Nothing has happened to the river as yet. The commonest weakness of a mor gage and one that may escape the ordinary eye is not the use of the wrong word to express the desired meaning, but the use the right one. After provisions are satisfactory to sides the lawyers who draw the gage in the first instance pres they fear there may be some dispute and turn this list over to the expert etymologist who is in charge of the library to every big office. This man prepares a report which shows not only the dictionary definition of each one of these words, but also fornishes a list of all legal decisions the been made relative to its exact significance. This expert, being advised of the particular shade of meaning it is desired to convey, also furnishes an opinion as to what is the right word. supporting his statement by a list of such legal decisions as may apply. All these reports are carefully bound together and become a part of the mass of papers, sometimes weighing many pounds, that accumulates while the mortgage is being drawn. They are filed away when it is finished. After the mortgagor's counsel h completed drawing up the instrument as they think it should be it passes to the attorneys on the other side, who pick as many flaws as possible in It. They, too, pay special attention to the exact meaning of words, and frequently their experts question the defini tions of those on the other side.
