

Students Find Interesting Work To Help Pay Part of Tuition

By LYDIA WEEKS

Many of the students at Chowan are able to help themselves and also the faculty and staff by enlisting the aid of work grants. These self-help students earn a salary according to the number of hours they are able to work a month during their free time. Chowan College employs more than one hundred students as regular part-time workers. The students serve as laboratory assistants, secretaries to professors and administrative personnel, switchboard operators, receptionists in the women's lounge, and in numerous capacities in the college cafeteria.

Very Valuable

The college's plan for helping students help themselves by part-time employment is very valuable to students and to the staff as well.

Pictured here are several college coeds busy at their various jobs. Brenda Brodie of Virginia Beach busies herself in the office of Professor Sandifer, Head of the English Department. Miss Brodie's tasks consist of filing, typing, transcribing, and other office duties. Brenda will receive her diploma in Medical Secretarial Administration in May.

Busy as an assistant in the Registrar's Office is Anna Hayes of Norlina. Anna does quite a bit of filing, typing, and supplying students with information. Anna will graduate in the spring with a Secretarial Administration diploma.

Receptionist

Rebecca Parker of Murfreesboro serves as a switchboard operator and receptionist during her spare time. Because of the large number of visitors who enter the Columns Building daily, Rebecca often finds herself answering questions and giving directions to those visiting the college. Miss Parker's course of study is One-year Secretarial.

KEPT HIS PROMISE

Bride—Men are brutes. My husband promised me a surprise if I learned to cook, so I took lessons.

Friend—You did! And what was the surprise?

Bride—He dismissed our cook.

GENE WILLIAMS AND FAMILY—The new secretary of the Brotherhood Department of the Virginia Baptist Board is shown here with his family. His wife is the former Gloria Cox, also a Chowan graduate, and their two children are Leslie Carol 2, and Worth, 4.

Chowan Alumnus to Work For Virginia Baptist Board

RICHMOND, VA.—The Reverend Gene Williams, pastor since 1962 of Pine Street Baptist Church in Richmond has become Brotherhood Department secretary for the Virginia Baptist Board. He assumed his new duties on February 1. The announcement was made by Dr. Lucius M. Polhill, executive secretary for the board.

Mr. Williams' new job has put him in charge of the missionary education and service program for Baptist men and boys in Virginia. A native of Rocky Mount, North Carolina, he attended Chowan College, Wake Forest College and Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary.

Before going to Richmond he was pastor of the Colfax Baptist Church in Colfax, North Carolina.

Mr. Williams is married to the former Gloria Cox. They have two children, Russell Worth, 4, and Leslie Carol, 2.

Speaking about his studies at Chowan, Williams said, "We recall our student days at Chowan as days of preparation for such an enlarged service as we have been privileged to receive. Chowan will always have a place in our hearts, especially since this is where Gloria and I first met. We rejoice in the excellent reports of the academic, physical and spiritual progress of this great school." The Williamses live at 6908 Montauk Drive in Stratford Hills in Richmond.

Crime Doesn't Pay; Courtesy Always Will

(ACP)—Traffic law enforcement is taking on a new twist for campus police at Michigan State University, East Lansing, this month.

February was Traffic Courtesy Month at MSU, and the chivalrous motorists were rewarded with movie passes to area theaters, the MICHIGAN STATE NEWS reports.

Police patrols started the day with three passes and looked for motorists, pedestrians, and bicyclists to give them to.

If day patrols didn't find enough courteous motorists, the passes were given to the night shift for distribution.

The patrolmen themselves decided what constitutes an act of courtesy.

The director of public safety initiated the program. Though engineering, education and enforcement have lowered accident rates, he said, they are inadequate in themselves. "Lack of courtesy is a big part of the problem."

Though the emphasis will be on law-abiding drivers, the director said that "traffic violators will not go unnoticed

SWITCHBOARD OPERATOR—Rebecca Parker, of Murfreesboro, finds interesting work as a part-time switchboard operator and receptionist. The young student is studying for a Secretarial diploma.

BUSY, BUSY, BUSY—Lydia Weeks of Elizabeth City, helps in the Office of Public Relations when she finds time from her schedule. Lydia is a Teletypewriter Perforator student in the Department of Graphic Arts.

OFFICE HELPER—Brenda Brodie, of Virginia Beach, Va., is busy with office chores, to help Professor Charles Sandifer, Head of the English Department.

REGISTRAR'S "GIRL-FRIDAY"—Anna Hayes of Norlina finds time from her classrooms schedule to work in the Office of the Registrar. She will graduate from Chowan in May in Secretarial Administration.
