Lynn Gruber runner-up in competition

Lynn Gruber, assistant director of admissions at Chowan College, placed first runnerup in the district Business and Professional Women's Club's Young Career Woman speech competition held recently in Hertford.

Gruber represented the Ahoskie Business and Professional Women's Club. The eight contestants were judged on their speech and judges' interview.

The topic of the five minute talks was career choice including short and long-term goals. Gruber presented her talk to the Ahoskie club prior to the district competition.

Gruber, a Chowan alumna, received her B.S. in journalism/public relations from West Virginia University. She has taken graduate studies in marketing at American University.

Prior to coming to Chowan in 1981, Gruber had a variety of work experience. Her career included animal welfare lobbying, working public relations firm in Washington, D.C., coordinating membership services for the National Association of College and University Attorneys, and freelance consultant for an outdoor recreation organization.

During her speech, Gruber noted, "I chose my present position because I enjoy working with students and education and feel a responsibility to help educate today's youth- whether by counseling, recruiting or teaching."

Mary Lou Graham Banks, president of the Ahoskie club, said that Lynn Gruber "represented Chowan College very ably and highlighted its Christian heritage. She did very well in the competition."

She added, "Lynn is an asset to our club, this area and Chowan College."
