'C' GETS ON THE 'SWITCH.'

YESTERDAY'S COMMUNICATION IS THE SUBJECT OF ANOTHER ONE.

MR. EDITOR:—Your correspondent was very much amused at the article signed "Switch," which appeared in yesterday's SUN; yet he is glad that the street railway track has one avowed friend, and ventures the assertion that "poor toiling" Switch is the only one in all this population.

Poor Switch takes great delight "in making use of the street cars, both for pleasure and to husband his strength for the day's work, and to carry him home to his little ones after a day of toil."

How many times, Mr. Editor, during the past year, has this weary traveller had the opportunity to rest his worn-out body on a street car seat, this poor son-of-toil. I wonder how many nickles he dropped in the Durham street-car box during the past year in order that he might rest his tired frame and contribute out of the generosity of his heart to the support of this glorious poor man's carriage? If he would only consent to the removal of the street car track, the town would save her population much annoyance by having Switch brought to his work and carried back home in the Fire Company's wagon. It seems that the town council forgot about Switch and has only thought of "those mighty ones who roll in carriages of pleasure." Shame on you commissioners! It occurs to this writer that the Third party aphorism "equal rights to all, and special privileges to none," ought not to have been forgotten by you commissioners so soon after Mason's celebrated campaign last Fall. If you have forgotten it Switch has not, for this is the peroration of his plaintive wail in the interest of the toiling poor.

Two foolish wise men of the county, ambitious of gold, some time last year, probably after the crops had been laid by, meandered their way to Durham, accompanied by two very ancient quadrupeds, called horses. They sought the Street Railroad Company, and possibly after some persuasion succeeded in leasing the cars and the right-of-way over the street car track. They provided themselves with whips, attached the old horses to the cars, and started on their errand of mercy, viz: to have Switch to work and then haul him home to the fond embrace of his little ones, and, Mr. Editor this writer is of the opinion that Switch was about the only passenger, and doubtless even he sometimes walked, when he should have dropped a nickle in the box as a thankoffering to buy coin for those poor horses. It used to be a joke on the streets that if a person desired perfect solitude it could be more readily found on a street car than in any other place in Durham. So few of the toilers or any other class of people had the time to ride on a street car, then to think of encountering the awful solitude, unless Switch happened to be aboard to cheer his weary fellow traveller.

After the commissioners notified the representative of the Street Railroad Company that his valuable franchise had been declared a nuisance, and that the work of tearing up the track would be begun on August 4th, 10 and behold, Ferrell, with a face all wreathed in smiles, was seen moving towards the street car stables. Then a few minutes of suspense and behold the car appeareth drawn by two of the "long eared aristocracy."

Later on in the day Ferrell does not seem as happy, for the solitude is getting unbearable, and this writer, "confidentially" speaking, asks himself the question: "Where is Switch?" Can it be that he is wearing out shoe leather in these "panicky" times, when his old friend beckons him to come and rest his weary feet?

Oh! where is Switch? C.

May be excused for making an awfully big racket over a mighty little egg, but when she cackles for an hour over a China door knob, it is time to throw a brick at her. There is also some excuse for a Merchant cackling a good deal over

DOOR KNOB BARGAIN

It is time some body threw a brick or a "shoo" at the noisy thing. There is an awful lot of cackling about bargains going on just now, but they are all door knob bargains, so here goes our brick:
