THE ratio of $16 to 1 ton of cos may remind the republicans that it is a condition that confronts us ir stead of a theory.

THE republicans have been telling us that the silver question was dead but their candidate, Mr. J. Lindsay Patterson, is not at all inclined to that opinion. His speech here was campaign.

THE independents and republicans are greatly elated over their candi date for Congress, Mr. Patterson awfully afraid that Mr. Kitchin will beat him in this district, and therefore makes Mr. Kitchin's political record the paramount issue in his speech. This is possibly the chief reason why Mr. Patterson does not meet Mr. Kitchin in joint debate.

WE have not read anything in years that gets so close to us-goes up and down all the evenues of our feelings with all the force of automobile velocity-in fact it just kicks our emotions, like a refractory mule, into shattered rainbows, and there is naught to behold but iridescent gems, as large as cakes of Limberger cheese, in a world that is unappreciative of what is truly great and glorious without compare. It gets away with us. Our pen is stuck in a star, and our thoughts are automobiling up a moonbeam. It is this-an article in the Charlotte Observer, by Walter R. Henry, on Jeter Pritchard, which closes with the following paragraph:
