$000,000 to $600,000 worth of cotton in Lee county during the wet summer of last year. They are now preparing to drive the little pest from the face of the earth if it can be done by a liberal use of poison. The farmers are buying and hauling, it out from Sanford to their farms by the barrei. As was recently stated in these col-umns the boil weevis have already made their appearance on the young and theder stalks and should the and tender stalks and should ithe rainy season continue they will get such a strong hold on the cotton that it will be impossible to exterminate them unless the farmers begin the work of destruction at once. It was proven by farmers in some sections of the belt last year that a good yield of cotton could be made in spite of the presence of the boll weevil by the intelligent use of the right kind of noison. Planters take areat raise the intelligent use of the right kind of poison. Planters take great pains to destroy the worms and other pests on tobacco. In order to save the cot-ton crop why not give it the same attention? Should the farmers suc-ceed in destroying the boll weevils new on the cotton they should be now on the cotton they should be easier to handle later in the summer
