

LOOKING BACKWARD

CHOICE BITS OF NEWS CULLED FROM ISSUES OF THE EXPRESS OF PAST YEARS.

FRIDAY, APRIL 16, 1909. COLONEL LANE AND THE OLD 26th

One of the Most Intrepid of All Brave Commanders of the Confederacy - Heroism of His Regiment at Gettysburg.

The battle of Gettysburg, on July 1, 2 and 3rd, 1863, was one of the most sanguinary and important engagements in the world's history.

In the battle of Gettysburg the Twenty-sixth North Carolina regiment won imperishable glory. In that fatal conflict it suffered the highest percentage of loss of any regiment in the civil war.

Colonel Vance was 31 years of age when he assumed command. He was elected Governor of North Carolina in 1862, and resigned in August, 1862, to enter upon the duties of his new position.

Colonel Vance was succeeded by Colonel Harry G. Burgwyn, not yet 21 years of age.

General Ransom, commanding the brigade, opposed Burgwyn's promotion, saying he wanted no boy colonel in his brigade.

The regiment was transferred to another brigade, and the boy colonel was promoted to die at Gettysburg in July, 1863, a year later, with wreaths of immortality encircling his youthful brow.

A Loss of 88 Per Cent in One Battle. Major John R. Lane became the Lieutenant-Colonel. He was then only 26 years of age.

This Twenty-sixth North Carolina regiment went into battle on July 1, 800 strong. Of this number 708 were killed or wounded, over 88 per cent. Thirty-nine officers went into the battle and of these 34 were killed or wounded, 87 per cent.

It was in part Pettigrew's brigade, and its commander, sixteen days later died at Bunker Hill, Va.

Colonel Romulus M. Tuttle, of Company F, afterwards a Presbyterian minister in Virginia, led into battle 90 men, all of whom were either killed or wounded. Nineteen were killed outright, 12 mortally wounded and 60 wounded but recovered.

In the charge young Burgwyn was shot through both lungs on the battlefield the glorious death of a patriot. Brilliant, handsome in person, brave and heroic as man could be, he made the greatest of offerings, his life's blood for the independence of his beloved Southland.

Lane Lifts the Colors Aloft After They Had Been Down 13 Times. In the charge, the colors, up to the moment of Burgwyn's fall, had been down ten times, only to be lifted up by men who knew no fear.

The assistant inspector of the brigade seized the colors and waved them aloft. Instantly he was killed. Lieutenant Wilcox seized them, he fell. Colonel Burgwyn lifted them up. When Private Honeycutt pleaded to be allowed to bear them and as Colonel Burgwyn turned to place them in his grasp, the fatal shot struck him, and he, mortally wounded, sank to the ground.

A moment later Honeycutt was shot through the head and he died. The colors, now stained by the noblest blood heroes can shed, lay between the dying Colonel and the dead gallant private.

When Colonel John R. Lane, reached his expiring friend - the boy colonel - he gave him a look of love and tender grasp of the hand. These brave men parted.

Colonel Lane immediately passed along the line to make proper dispositions. Returning, he found the colors still down, and, picking them up, a lieutenant cried out, "No man can take those colors and live!" Calmly, the new colonel, with a wave of the hand, exclaimed, "It is my time to take them now. Men of the Twenty-sixth, follow me." A mighty shout answered the call, and the regiment passed forward and broke the last line which opposed its charge, now made renowned by the most remarkable death roll of the mightiest struggle the world has ever known.

The Regiment Surrenders at Appomattox 120 Strong. As Colonel Lane turned to see if his regiment was following Charles H. McConnell, color sergeant of the 24th Michigan regiment, attracted by the splendid bearing of the officer, rested his musket against a tree and took a farewell shot at the advancing Confederates, and sent a ball, crashing the neck and jaw of the advancing Colonel. The flag dropped from Colonel Lane's nerveless grasp, and for the fourteenth and last time the colors of the Twenty-sixth North Carolina fell to the earth.

It was believed that Colonel Lane would die on the battlefield, but he was borne away by the small remnant of his illustrious command and regained his health.

he suffered a third mishap, and at Ream's Station, in August, 1864, he was struck by a fragment of shell, two ribs broken and the flesh torn from his side. The Twenty-sixth North Carolina surrendered at Appomattox, 120 strong.

MAY 21, 1909. Rev. R. J. Beattie and wife went to housekeeping last week. On Saturday night a large number of their friends suddenly arrived at the home on Steele street burdened with good things to eat, which they left in the dining room and pantry. Among the many good things was a large quantity of sugar. The preacher said he would try and profit by the sugar hint.

JULY 23, 1909. The Old Warden Buildings Will Go. A number of wooden buildings on Chatham street have been condemned by Building Inspector George Womble and ordered removed. They are the Foushee old hotel, the adjoining building occupied by N.C.C. Ray, as a shoe shop, Mr. W. T. Buchanan's warehouse, an old blacksmith shop near the Gunter livery stable, and the John S. McIver old building. Mr. Buchanan has 30 days in which to move his warehouse, and 20 days is the limit for the other buildings. Brick buildings will probably take the place of some of these buildings.

DECEMBER 3, 1909. The Grit says the produce dealers of Siler City bought 1,500 rabbits, 400 partridges and 1,000 dozen eggs last Friday and Saturday. At the prices rabbits, partridges and eggs are now selling these sales turned quite a little sum of money loose among the farmers of Chatham. The Grit says the best part is that there will be an increase in the receipts as the season advances.

A contractor who knows the cost of about every new building in Sanford, tells The Express that there has been about $100,000 spent on new dwellings and business houses in the town since Lee was created. The most of this amount was spent on brick business buildings during the past six months. Some of the dwellings are nice ones and cost from $2,000 to $3,000. From the above figures you can get some idea of the growth of Sanford in the past two or three years. Six brick buildings have been erected here since last spring.

Statesville Landmark, November 23: "Dr. K. M. Ferguson, of Moore county, has located in Statesville to succeed Dr. Houck's practice. Mrs. Ferguson will arrive this week and they will begin housekeeping on the corner of Salisbury and East Broad Sts."

The whole country is flooded with liquor mall advertisements of liquor houses in other states. They have been sent to every man, preacher, excluded, whose names could be secured, and now they are beginning to come to the children. These liquor houses have failed to buy space in many of the newspapers, and to introduce their goods they have to use the mails.

DECEMBER 24, 1909. Capt. J. A. O. Kelly, commander of Camp Ransom, tells The Express that there are 112 members of the camp. Some four or five Confederate veterans of this county belong to the Harnett county camp. Captain Kelly says all the daughters of the Confederate soldiers are eligible to membership in the chapter of Daughters of the Confederacy which is proposed to organize in Lee county. Some chapters admit the sisters of the Confederate soldiers.

SEPTEMBER 17, 1909. The Carter Furniture and Coffin Company, of this place, recently shipped a consignment of furniture to Washington City. The purchaser of the furniture got it cheaper than if it had been bought in Washington.

With wheat selling at from $1.10 to $1.20; flour $2.90 to $3.10 corn 90 to $1; cotton at 12 cents, and all other things raised on the farm at good prices, it looks like the farmer is the most favored man in the country today. It is now believed that as the crop is short the farmers will realize more than 12 cents for their crop of cotton this fall. It is said that there is a sentiment among the members of the Farmers' Union against the farmers selling their cotton at once, as it is the belief that the short crop warrants 15 cents.

A. & P. SALES DECREASE. Sales of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company for the four week period ending January 30th were $68,966,599. This compares with $78,814,870 for the same period in 1931, and is a decrease of $9,848,271, or 12.5 per cent.

January sales expressed in tons were 395,428 this year, compared with 410,807 in January, 1931. This is a decrease in quantity of merchandise sold of 15,379 tons, or 3.74 per cent. Average weekly sales in January were $19,743,718 in 1931, a decrease of $2,462,068. Average weekly tonnage sales were 98,857, compared with 102,702 in January, 1931, a decrease of 3,845.

LOCAL TOBACCO MARKET CLOSES

Producers' Sales For Season Amount To Around 4,500,000 Pounds of Leaf.

The Sanford tobacco market closed last Friday for the 1931-32 season. The total producers' sales during the year while not officially announced, are believed to be around four and one-half million pounds. With re-sale the figures will probably reach the 5,000,000 mark.

This is considered satisfactory in the number of pounds sold but the price as on all markets, was disappointing. The market drew tobacco from a wide territory. The acreage in the surrounding section was cut from the year before, and the crop was lighter in weight than usual. But for this total number of pounds sold would have been much greater. However, warehousemen and tobaccoists are optimistic over the future of the market and are now making plans for next season.

TROT OUT YOUR HORSES. There is a shortage of work horses on the farms and the result is that work horses bring good prices. The Department of Agriculture say that in 1921 prices of horses declined only half as much as all farm produce. The Department adds that from all indications the raising of horses should prove profitable.

Restless, could not sleep. "THERE were days when I felt like I could not get my work done. I would get so nervous and 'trembly' I would have to lie down. I was very restless, and could not sleep at night. My mother advised me to take Cardui, and I certainly am glad she did. It is the first thing that seemed to give me any strength. I felt better after the first bottle. I kept it up and am now feeling fine." - Mrs. T. B. Gibson, Fort Payne, Ala.
