GOOD RESULTS EXPECTED FROM COTTON CAMPAIGN

Continued support of the cotton reduction campaign by North Carolina farmers and bankers augmented by the cooperation of the agricultural forces, points to a successful reduction in this state, Dean O. I. Sibaub, director of the State College Extension believes.

District and county meetings, under the supervision of the College Extension Service, have been in progress during the past two weeks and definite results will be available within the next few days. North Carolina's reduction quota is 353,000 acres.

Lack of information from Washington during the inaugural days of the campaign handicapped the movement momentarily, however, the county agents and vocational teachers, were prepared by Tuesday, June 27, to answer the many questions arising.

The College Extension service now has the bulk of its personnel in the cotton reduction work. Roy H. Thomas, director of vocational education, has placed 183 vocational teachers from 50 counties as assistants to the county agents in the campaign.

"It is necessary that the farmers understand that he is to be paid for his cotton reduction," says Dean Sibaub. "And that the plan is purely and voluntarily on the farmer's part. Payment will be made on a yield per acre basis and two plans are offered."

"Under the first plan, the farmer is paid from $6 an acre for land producing from 100 to 124 pounds with an increased amount depending upon the yield per acre. With this plan, options on government cotton at six cents a pound in the amount destroyed by the farmer is given. No option can be sold below 9-1-2 cents a pound before December.

"The second plan offers the farmer a straight cash rental only. The rate of payment ranges from $7 per acre on land producing between 100 and 124 pounds of cotton with the scale ranging as high as $20 for land producing over 275 pounds, the rate depending upon the yield per acre."

TIMELY FARM QUESTIONS ANSWERED AT STATE COLLEGE

Question: When is the best time to plant Irish potatoes for the fall crop?

Answer: In Eastern North Carolina the seed should be planted during the latter part of July or the first week in August. As the fall crop of potatoes depends to a large extent on the amount of moisture available, it is best to take advantage of the season's conditions rather than the time limits. Plant when the soil is moist even if a little early or a little later than the dates mentioned.

Question: Is it too late to top dress corn with nitrate of soda and will later applications give increased yields?

Answer: It is not too late, but earlier applications would have given greater returns. For best results corn should be top dressed when about knee high. After this time the amount of increase from this top dressing begins to decrease.

Question: When should young poultry be wormed?

Answer: Worm the young birds at 12 to 14 weeks old. Due to climatic conditions, especially in North Carolina, worms in poultry are very prevalent and deworming is the only possible insurance. Use range stock size tablets from some reliable biological house and follow directions on the container. The older birds carried over for breeders should be dewormed after they have gone into the summer moult.

PLANT LATE CROPS ON COTTON LAND

Late summer crops for food, feed, for soil improvement, for grazing and for winter growth might be planted on any land left vacant by cooperation in the cotton reduction movement.

"The choice of these crops will depend on the individual needs of the farm," says P. H. Kime, agronomist for the North Carolina Experiment Station. "However, nearly every farm in the State needs more legumes for soil improvement and a high percentage of all farms could use more grain and hay for feeding the work stock, cows and hogs. The cost of seeding these replacement crops should be relatively low. Seed will cost from $1 to $2 an acre depending on the crop to be grown and the rate of seeding used. Labor should not exceed 50c an acre since the land is in a good state of cultivation."

Mr. Kime says the crops best adapted to this time of the year are cow peas, soybeans, Sudan grass, millet, corn and vegetables. The legumes should receive first consideration.

Mr. Kime also points out that some of the land removed from the cultivation of cotton might be kept for planting to small grain.

He thinks it is a mistake, however, not to use such land to good advantage. In many cases it has been fertilized thus assuring of better yields of the replacement crops.

One of the best crops to plant in place of the cotton removed is cowpeas, Kime says. Cowpeas may be used for human consumption both in winter and summer; they may be pastured, will enrich the soil, and cowpea seed are always in demand. The crop may be planted in North Carolina up to July 15th.

SAY COTTON SURPLUS MUST BE REDUCED

That, in effect is the immediate concern of Cully A. Cobb, in charge of administering the Agricultural Adjustment act as it applies to cotton through years of good crops and accentuated by reason of the world wide depression stands like an impenetrable barrier on the road to better prices for the cotton grower.

The surplus began to accumulate back in 1929 when the carry over of American cotton in the world was some 4,500,000 bales. By August, 1932, the carry over had reached the total of 13,000,000 bales. And in that year a 13,000,000 bale crop was produced making a supply of 26,000,000 bales. This year, 1933, indications are now for an excellent crop and the low rate of consumption promises another huge carry over to add to the crop being grown.

There has been some rise in the price of spot cotton recently due to various factors but always looms in the background a surplus above present needs. For this reason, cotton growers are urged to replace with soil building crops some of the cotton now growing. Government officials estimate that between two and three million bales must be removed from production this season in the effort to reduce the surplus existing. To remove this cotton will mean a greater prosperity for the Southern farmer. The removal will not be regarded as a sacrifice when it is fully understood that the government plans to pay each cooperating grower a fair rental for the land taken from the production of cotton and will also give him an option as much cotton as he removes, thus assuring him of having his usual amount of cotton to sell this fall with out the further expense of producing part of it.

DAIRYEN TO MEE AT FARM CONVENTION

The North Carolina Dairy Association will hold its annual meeting this summer along with State Farmers' convention and the 9th annual gathering of the American Institute of Cooperation to be held at State College during the week of July 24 to 29.

"We have planned our dairy meeting during the week of July 24th that we may take part in the discussions about milk marketing and related subjects which will be an important feature of the Institute program," says John A. Arey, specialist at State College. "In the past we have been worried about a marketing problem because we have never produced enough milk for the needs of our local people. However, with a reduced buying power on the part of the people and the steady increase in dairy herds we are beginning to be faced with this problem. It is wise for us to meet together to work out some definite plans."

Arey points out that Secretary Henry A. Wallace will attend the convention this year and that some of the leading milk marketing specialists of the nation will be present. Mr. Arey has arranged a two day program for the State Dairymen on Wednesday and Thursday, June 26 and 27. The annual banquet and business meeting of the association will be held in the college dining hall Wednesday evening.

Arey also points out that dairymen attending this conference may secure rooms free of charge in the college dormitories as long as they last. Meals will cost little and every dairyman should use this opportunity as the time for taking a short vacation of little expense.

The Vacation Bible School for young people at Steele Street Methodist church will begin Monday, June 26, and will continue through the week. Mr. Hayman will have a number of competent women to assist him. These schools are held every summer and are found to be very beneficial.

Side Quit Hurting, Got Stronger, Well; CARDUI Helped Her

Mrs. R. L. West, of Huntsville, Ala., writes: "I was weak and run-down. I had a pain in my side, and I kept losing weight. I grew nervous over my condition—this was unusual for me, for I am very cheerful when I am well and don't take anything. I knew I ought to do something. My aunt told me I ought to try Cardui, which I did. I began to feel better. I kept it up until I had taken three or four bottles. My side quit hurting and I was soon feeling strong and well. Cardui is sold at drug stores here."
