

Farm Forest and Garden

NO VACATION FOR

THE GARDEN

"Take a vacation yourself, but don't give the garden one." Such is the advice of gardeners who look forward to their fall and winter harvest. Many crops must be planted by the second or third weeks in August if they are to mature before frost. The following stand-bys should not be neglected:

Beans—Snap Beans should be planted every three weeks up to within 60 days of the average date of the first killing frost. This means planting as late as the first of September in many sections.

Beets—After they are up and established, young beet plants will stand a great deal of heat even though they prefer cool weather. Plant during seasonable weather, and at least ten weeks before killing frosts occur. Early Wonder and Crosby Egyptian will feature a week to 10 days earlier than most varieties. For round, well-shaped roots, plant Detroit Dark Red.

Cabbage Plants—Early maturing varieties, such as Copenhagen Market, and Jersey Wakefield may yet be set with reasonable assurance of a crop. Cabbage should be grown rapidly by applying a side dress of readily available fertilizer as soon as the plants are established in the field. Keep free from cabbage worms by spraying or dusting with either calcium arsenate or lead arsenate.

Carrots—Give much the same care as for beets but plant 12 weeks before killing frosts occur. Carrots will stand some frost but not heavy freezes. The Chantenay is a good variety.

Cowpeas. If this crop is not available in the field, by all means plant a row or two in the garden. It will still produce "roasting ear" peas in most sections. The Blackeye is an excellent variety for home use.

Turnips. Land for the turnip patch should be thoroughly prepared and fertilized. If manure is used it should be in a well rotted condition. Use 1,000 pounds per acre of fertilizer if the crop is planted in rows, or 1,500 to 2,000 pounds per acre of the same mixture if applied broadcast. Give main crop varieties, such as Purple Top Globe, 10 to 12 weeks time in which to mature. Early varieties, such as White Milan and Purple Top Strap Leaf will be ready for use in less time.

USE BURLAP BANDS TO TRAP APPLE WORMS

Trapping and destroying the worms of the Codling moth as they leave the infested apple and crawl down the tree around harvest time will greatly reduce this pest next spring.

"The pests can be trapped by fastening layers of burlap from four to six inches wide around the trunk of each bearing tree," says H. R. Niswonger, extension horticulturist at State College. "Many of these worms leave the trees before ripening time and will also hide behind these bands and can be destroyed."

The bands are placed around the tree from eighteen to twenty four inches above the ground and held in place by nails run through the ends of the burlap. Before putting on the bands all loose bark should be scraped from the trunk in order to eliminate any hiding place other than the bands. After the harvest season is over the bands are removed and the worms destroyed by boiling them in an iron kettle or similar container. The burlap can then be dried and put away for use another year.

This method of worm control is being practiced by apple growers in this state and throughout the country and many growers have banded their trees since the middle of June.

"The worms collected through the early banding have been destroyed each week and this practice has saved growers much money in reducing the number of pison sprays to be applied," says Niswonger.

CULL POULTRY FLOCKS INCREASE PRODUCTION

At the present low prices for poultry and poultry products and with the outlook for higher prices this fall none too bright, all poultrymen should begin to systematically cull their flocks and eliminate all hens that lay just enough eggs to pay feed costs.

"Hens that lay from six to nine eggs a month cannot make money for the flock owner at present prices and should be killed, sold or canned," says C. J. Maupin, poultry extension specialist at State College. "Such hens will eat more feed than their total market value and should be taken from the flock in order to lower feed costs and increase the quality and production of those birds left in the flock."

Proper culling, especially where the flock contains 50 or more hens, some form of catching coop should be provided. Such a coop can be made of slats or just a wire frame covered with wire and should fit the poultry house door so that the hens can be driven into it without injury. With such a coop the poultryman can cull at any time of the year.

Maupin advises that close attention also be given to the breeding males as this will determine, to a large extent, the profit made from poultry hatched and raised next year. Old male birds that will not be needed next year or young cockerels that are not developing properly should be removed from the flock. Where possible, one or two breeding cockerels should be secured from trapezoidal flocks.

"All culled birds, whether low producing hens, undersized pullets, or undesirable males should be taken from the laying or breeding flock at once and either killed for home consumption or sold," says Maupin.

BAREEN CORN HAS HIGH FEED VALUE

Barren corn stalks should be removed from the fields while still green to obtain the greatest possible feed value.

E. C. Blair, extension agronomist at State College, says that, "In 1933 as in every dry year, many North Carolina corn fields will make a very low yield, and such fields always contain a high percentage of barren stalks."

"In order to get the greatest possible amount of feed value, the barren stalks should be cut from the field while still green. They may be either fed green, or cured in the shock."

When cut at this stage the corn stalks and leaves will cure into a bright green roughage of higher feed value and greater palatability than the mature stover will be later on.

He pointed out that an analysis shows that the green cured stalks contain 3 per cent digestible protein against 2 per cent for ordinary corn stover, and the percentage of carbohydrate and fats is also higher.

"Another advantage in taking out barren stalks at this time is that fruit stalks will not have to compete with barren corn for moisture during the remainder of the growing season," he said.

ORGANIZATION WILL BRING TOBACCO RELIEF

Tobacco farmers must organize to obtain benefits of the parity prices under the Agricultural Adjustment Act.

Dr. G. W. Forster, agricultural economist at State College, says the government is in sympathy with the growers in their efforts to obtain a fair price for their product. "However, the Federal Tobacco Administration is not in a position to deal with unorganized masses."

Urging farmers to organize and form agreements to raise prices, he said that "Under the 'New Deal' as inaugurated by President Roosevelt and represented in the adjustment act, the farmers have an exceptional opportunity to get equitable treatment—the first opportunity in the history of agriculture. They should not let this opportunity slip by."

"The problem of organizing is not a difficult one, since the farmers already have a skeleton organization in their some 58 mutual farm commodity exchanges now in operation in the State. These exchanges could be used in an emergency to deal with the important problem of obtaining a fair exchange for tobacco."

He pointed out that the growers could easily join these exchanges and their representatives could jointly submit to the Federal government an agreement governing the marketing of tobacco this year and the price to be received.

"The grading problem would be difficult, but for the time being the buyers' grades might be used which could later be substituted for a uniform government grade."

GOODYEAR WILL ADD TO POWER EQUIPMENT

During the next few months, Goodyear will spend more than a half million dollars in purchase of new power plant equipment and in construction of a new power plant building, representing one of the largest major construction improvements in the Akron area since the depression.

A portion of the present power plant building, back of the general office building to be torn down and six boilers, some of which have been in service since 1910, will be dismantled.

The building itself, of conventional brick steel construction, will cost approximately $20,000 and will provide employment for 100 men during the course of erection. Award of the building contract will not be made for at least another month.

The new building will house a single large boiler capable of generating 300,000 pounds of steam per hour at a pressure of 900 lbs. per square inch and a temperature of 740 degrees F. Contract for the boiler, which will cost $250,000, has been awarded to Babcock & Wilcox, Baberton.

Coal will be used for fuel after being pulverized in a ball type mill. An interesting feature is the fact that ashes remain in a liquid state in the bottom of the boiler and are drawn off at intervals in the same manner as the molten metal from a blast furnace. The molten ashes are cooled, solidified and then broken up by action of a water spray, after which they are taken by a conveyor to cars to be hauled away. About $25,000 will be spent on the ash building equipment. Water softening equipment to remove any scale forming ingredients from water for boiler use will cost $25,000.

Approximately $30,000 is to be spent on control equipment for synchronizing the amount of water, fuel and air that is fed to the boiler. The synchronization is necessary to get the greatest efficiency from the boiler. Extremely heavy piping will be necessary for use with the boiler and the new turbine, and it is estimated the piping installation will amount to $30,000.

Steam generated by the boiler will be conveyed to a new tube generating unit costing $140,000, contract for which was recently awarded. The unit has a capacity of 10,000 kilowatts, generating at 2,300 volts.

The unit is known as a "high back" pressure extraction type turbine and will exhaust steam into a 100-pound factory steam main the exhaust steam being utilized for heating, curing, etc. It will also extract steam at 200 pounds pressure to be used to generate electric current on low pressure turbo-generating units already in use.

Additional electrical equipment, including switches, panels, controls etc., will cost approximately $250,000.

Many other small miscellaneous items will be purchased during construction. All of the work on construction of the building, erection of the turbine and boiler, and installation of electrical equipment, piping, etc., is expected to progress simultaneously; and November 1st has been set as the date for the new plant to begin operation.

All of the engineering department work will be handled by Goodyear own Engineering Department.
