BY MRS. S. H. ROSSER.

Junior-Senior Banquet.

There is probably no event in the school lives of high school boys and girls which is looked forward to with more pleasure than the Junior-Senior reception. This year it was held in one of the rooms of the new extension in connection with the Home Economics Department. This year the idea of Robin Hood and his merry men was carried out in decorations and table appointments. The room was converted into a forest scene by the use of pines, honeysuckle and other green from the woods. This formed a beautiful setting for the tables arranged for around 55 guests, including the Senior class, the Junior class, members of the H. S. faculty, Mrs. J. H. Taylor and Miss Noell. The senior class colors, rainbow colors, were effectively carried out in vari colored sweet peas and mints. Green tapers furnished the only light. The following boys and girls dressed in green, characteristic of Robin Hood's Merry Men served as waiters: Johnnie Thomas, head waiter; Edgar Lett with Ruby Briggs, Marcus Hunter with Gotes Hunter, Harry Thomas with Mary Carroll, Forest Stevens with Annie Laurie Harrington, Harold Badgett with Beulah Lee Thomas. The menu was as follows:

- Grape Fruit
Bawed Chicken, Dressing, Beans, Potatoes, Parsley, Egg Salad, Pickles, Rolls, Strawberry Tart, Iced Tea, Mints.

Little booklets in the shape of green hats contained the following program: Welcome—Clarence Chandler, toast master.

- Toast to Seniors—Attie Hunter. Response—Jordan Sloan. Vocal Solo—Virginia Gunter. Toast to Faculty—James Kelly. Response—J. H. Taylor. Released Moment—Eunice Thomas. Adieu—Hal Briggs.

Flower Garden.

No improvement made in the past few years has added more to the appearance to the Town of Broadway than the beautiful flower garden being longed to Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Chandler situated on the lot between the homes of Mr. Chandler and Mrs. C. A. Gray. Since it is on the lot facing the street friends and neighbors as well as the general public enjoy its beauty in passing. Paths lead from the street directly to the garden as well as from the two homes, making it even more tempting to the public. Four paths lead directly to the center of the garden which holds the center of interest, a lilly pool. These paths are bordered by rose beds which in turn are bordered by boxwoods. Although this is their first year, the roses are unusually beautiful. Among the roses blooming now are the double Red Radiant, Pink Radiant, Betty Upchurch, Sunburst, two toned tinted Talisman, and yellow Druschi. Beyond the rosebeds are round beds of digitalis, sweet Williams, columbine, ronge button chrysanthemums, painted daisies, yellow alyssum, and many other colorful plants. The outside of the garden is bordered with tall growing evergreen shrubbery.

Returning to the pool we find beside a number of gold fish a quantity of water plants including water lilies, water hyacinths, lotus, etc. Located a few yards south of the pool is a large gazing bowl which reflects the beauty of the garden from all sides. Two large spot lights on make it possible to see the flowers at night as well as daytime. Four pergolas also add to the attraction as well as comfort of the garden. Lawn furniture is placed between the garden and the house where one may rest and still see the garden from a distance. This garden is open to the public at all times and everyone is invited to come and see it.

A number of others have made improvements in the appearance of their lawns and garden this spring. Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Burgess have constructed an informal pool on their lawn which is unusually attractive in structure and design. Mr. and Mrs. S. V. Stevens have constructed a rock wall along the front and sides of their home which gives dignity as well as beauty to this already beautiful home. Also, a large pergola with an arch for wisteria is being built. Also, a number of people are remodeling their buildings and painting, which adds much to the looks of the town and the comfort of the people.

That wholesale killings of fish by poisonous waste material discharged into streams by industrial plants can be prevented by treatment of the waste has been strikingly demonstrated by results obtained in a year's trial of a system installed by Chevrolet plant at Flint, Mich. in cooperation with the Michigan State Department of Conservation and Stream Control Commission.

The success of method of treatment and the careful operation your personnel has given it are made evident by the recent absence of wholesale fish killings in the Flint River below Flint." The Stream Control Commission stated in a letter addressed to Arnold Lentz Chevrolet assistant manufacturing manager who installed the system under the direction of M. E. Cole, president of Chevrolet. Killings have frequently occurred in various Michigan streams, according to the Stream Commission, because of the large number of plants in which metal cleaning or plating operations are necessary. Either of these processes requires the use of cyanide solutions. Investigations of the University of Michigan Institute of Fisheries Research have shown that even as little as one part of cyanide to two million parts of water is toxic to fish life. The system used at the Chevrolet plant believed to be the first adequate installation in Michigan is to accumulate the poisonous waste and then treat it to remove the cyanide; the remaining liquid is then allowed to discharge very slowly into the river. The treatment in the storage tank reduces the cyanide content in the undiluted solution to less than one part in one million. When this weak solution is allowed to mix gradually with the great volume of the river itself, the waste is immediately diluted to complete harmlessness.

In the operation of the system, accumulated waste is run into a rubber lined steel tank 40 feet long, 5 feet wide and 4 feet deep. Recently 4,500 gallons were treated at once by the addition of more than two tons of sulphuric acid, followed by aeration for 16 hours. The released gases are collected under a hood and discharged into air under forced draft through a stack 60 feet high.

Before being treated each gallon of waste solution contained, 2.8 ounces of copper cyanide and 1.1 ounce of free cyanide. After treatment the analysis showed less than one part per million of free cyanide, with quantities of copper sulphate and sulphuric acid so small as to be harmless when gradually discharged into the stream over a period of two days.
