VOLUNTEERS

ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR/WRITER(S)
The Front Page needs a person, or persons, to write up what's happening in clubs in the Carolinas. We need someone enthusiastic but impartial, able to write well and handle a camera (it would be great if it was your camera, too, we don't have one). We've been trying to get a regular column off the ground of years. Can you make it happen? Call Jim at (919) 829-0181.

THE NEWSLETTER
can always use a few more women to be part of the coordinating group or to offer their skills in typing, graphics, or coalating. Call Laurie in Durham at 682-3616.

LIBRARIAN
Help! Help! We're up to our armpits in clippings at The Front Page! Anyone out there in the Triangle who'd like to get things in order around here? Anybody for whom filing is a way of life? I'm dreaming, right? Call Jim Baxter at 829-0181.

MEN LOVING MEN

The freedom to share caresses — verbal and physical. So many times, we do it only when we're making a sexual advance. That's what we've learned as men. You've experienced it at bars — afraid of talking to others because of self-doubt. And at dinner parties and dates. Perhaps even with lovers.

Gay and bisexual men can break that tiring old pattern by learning new levels of self-esteem — even those who already feel they've mastered it. That's what happens at Connections workshops. The techniques are no secret. In a safe, nurturing environment, they totally encourage learning and practicing self-esteem and nonthreatening intimacy.

Freedom is the payoff. Freedom to be who you are — and to love who you are, possibly for the first time. New freedom from paralyzing fear of rejection. Wonderful freedom to communicate and interact truthfully, nonjudgmentally.

Sample it. Come to an introductory workshop. Two hours of your time. Then judge whether a Connections weekend can make a profound difference in your life.

Introduction to CONNECTIONS workshops: Mondays, 7:30 p.m.

Level 1 (no nudity): Dec. 13-14.

Level 2 (some nudity): Dec. 5-6-7.

For price and registration details, call Clay Felts, 704/553-0735.
