

THE WEEKLY SOUTHERNER.
TARBORO, NORTH CAROLINA.
"THE LOYALTY IN A CITIZEN, IS FIDELITY TO HIS STATE."
THURSDAY, - - - DECEMBER 13, 1866.

From a Raleigh letter, by the Editor of the Wilmington Journal to his paper, dated Friday last, we learn that a caucus of the Radical clique in North Carolina, had been held, and a Committee appointed to proceed to Washington in the effort to induce Congress to depose the Governor, and establish over the State a Territorial government.

This action on the part of the "unmistakably loyal" is in concert with similar movements in the other Southern States.

These men who arrayed themselves so formidably against their State and section, from the hour when the fortunes of the South began to waver, or when they were individually called upon to endanger their personal safety in defence of the cause, have debased themselves until they are the willing tools of the disorganizing factionists in Congress, and the utter contempt which good men have manifested for them, prove in every instance, to have been well merited.

The most eminent of these, and perhaps the man who of all others, furnishes to the world the most vivid picture ever drawn of a Judas, ex-Governor Wm. W. Holden, accompanied by Col. Harris, of Rutherford, is said to have left Raleigh on Saturday, for the new scene of his labors.

Hon. G. W. Logan, once a member of the Confederate Congress, whose object there was doubtless to embarrass the country, R. P. Dick and the Hon. Thomas Settle, are said to be of the Committee to go to Washington.

These gentlemen are known to be of the most violent opponents to the present State government; and by their own record we undertake to say, they are this moment treacherously seizing an opportunity to stab the government they profess to serve.

We are somewhat inclined to think the announcement of their being on the eve of departure, to say the least, premature. We cannot say, however, whether they are taken otherwise, neither for their own reputation or our good. They have sacrificed their honor, debased their manhood, and are no longer worthy either the sympathy or countenance of gentlemen. Their power to do us harm was exhausted in their treachery to the Southern Confederacy, and we have for them neither respect or fear.

The government for which we have ever cherished an affection, no matter what may have been our efforts at establishing another, has not yet passed through all the perils that beset a Republic. It is but now entering upon the darkest hour of its existence.

The resolution of Mr. Sumner, declaring the principles of reconstruction; the Jurisdiction of Congress over the whole subject; the illegality of existing governments in the Southern States, and the exclusion of such illegal governments from representation in Congress, and from voting on the Constitutional amendment, plainly indicate that the storm of fanaticism is not yet over, and we can but say, God help the old ship of State.

With the whole matter we have little to do. We can but watch and wait.—We have done our duty; but in the hour of extreme peril, we are not wanting for examples to imitate. May we also be not wanting in those virtues of heroism, which have rendered the name of Southerners illustrious for all coming time.

Treasurer's Report.

We have received a copy of the Report of Kemp P. Battle, Public Treasurer, which is full of many valuable statistics. From it, we learn that the present total debt of the State, amounts to $13,033,000.

He calls upon the State to redeem her obligations in the following forcible manner:

I know you will realize the importance of an early return to a prompt fulfillment of our obligations. By every consideration of enlightened public policy, by regard to the pecuniary and social standing of our citizens, wherever in the civilized world, the pursuit of business or pleasure may lead them, in respect to the fair name of North Carolina, whose pledged word only the sternest necessity, has ever been able to renege, we are bound as soon as God gives us the strength, to redeem our Congress met last week, and on Monday was welcomed to the city of Washington, by a large concourse of citizens. It proved a fit occasion for all the most ultra men of the county, both North and South, to vent their spite and venom upon the devoted head of the rebellious States, and most manfully did they make use of the opportunity.

A tirade of abuse, threats and denunciations, constituted the whole character of the proceedings, each speaker endeavoring, as far as lay in his power, to excel the last in pouring out the vials of his wrath upon our unprotected section.

We noticed among the speakers, the names of several who figure prominently in the halls of Congress, and upon whom devolves the restoration of harmony, or the continuance of the present distracted state of the public mind.

With her fate resting in their hands, the South must expect no mercy, justice or magnanimity on the part of those now controlling her destinies.

As a Southern man we are surprised and shocked to find, that the sentiments uttered in this assemblage of inhuman beings, should have an echo and vent through the columns of a paper professing to express the voice and opinion of any portion of the Southern people.—Thank God that number among us is few, who, viper like, now turn and sting the hand that fostered, and at one time honored them.

The following toast, which was received with much applause, may serve as a specimen of the rest.

THIRTEENTH TOAST.

13. The Rebel States: By their attempts to destroy the Government they forfeited the rights conferred by it, and cannot claim the positions and privileges of the loyal States. Let their traitorous inhabitants take back seats or do without seats.

"The South can gain a thing by refusing to recognize the power of the will of the governing States. If unable to reconcile itself to the propositions now before it, its duty and interest alike dictate the expediency of showing its willingness to do something, and also of showing specifically what it is prepared to do. In no other way is it able to free itself from the imputation of sultriness and obduracy.—In none other can it establish its readiness to satisfy the general demand for guarantees which lies at the bottom of the Congressional movement."

Such is the advice given us by Raymond, of the New York Times, who is supposed to represent the sentiment of the moderate Radicals more perfectly than any other public man at the North, and who should be, and is fully aware of the great sacrifices we have already made to Northern demands; but, blinded by that inordinate desire to exact to the uttermost farthing, which always actuate, those suddenly invested with undeserved power, we are advised, nay commanded, to bow the knee still lower, to kiss once more the rod that smites us.

Having promptly complied with all the conditions required of us as the necessary means for our readmission in the Union, we are now told that sultriness and obduracy on our part from the drawback to the accomplishment of that end; that we have done nothing and still intend to do nothing towards it.

We choose the arbitration of arms, and in the struggle have been worsted; such being the result, we should accept it in all its conditions, and endeavor to bear with patience whatever the conquerors may see fit to impose; but why add to the already heavy burden by any gratuitous act of our own, hoping thereby to appease the insatiate cry for blood.

The decree for our continued subjection has gone forth; and nothing we can say or do will alter that resolve. The result rests alone in the hands of an All Seeing Providence, "who directs all things well."

We regret that want of space prevents us from laying before our readers, the able, temperate, and to us, unanswerable report of Hon. J. M. Leach, and others in the General Assembly, against the adoption of the Howard amendment. It well represents the calm and dignified policy of our people, and the firm conclusion, if we are to be disgraced and ruined, we will not voluntarily participate in our own degradation.

We notice the name of our worthy representative and townsman, Gov. Clark, is attached to the report, a sure guarantee that the rights and honor of the State will not be sacrificed. One passage we quote, as showing the tone of the report:—"But if this and other degrading disabilities, must be imposed upon so many of her citizens, how can North Carolina herself, while she retains any sense of honor or self respect, assist in imposing it?—How can those now controlling the destinies of the Union, ask or expect her to do so, and thus set the seal of her own disgrace? How can they expect or even desire that her Representatives either now or hereafter shall assist in the work of her own degradation?—Proud of her sons who have died for her, she cherishes in her heart of hearts, the living children who were ready to die for her, and she loves them with a mother's warm affection.—Can she be expected to repudiate them? No! it would be an act of an unnatural mother. She can never consent to it, never."

North Carolina Legislature.

RALEIGH, Dec. 10.—In the North Carolina Legislature to-day, a resolution was offered regarding the interest on the State debt, which will probably be funded.

A resolution was passed asserting the loyalty of the people of the State, and denying alleged persecutions. The Legislature on Monday, elected the remaining four Councilors of State, three having been previously elected. Those elected on Monday were Giles Melbane, E. Q. of Alamance; Judge J. G. Shepherd, of Fayetteville; Dr. Henry Joyner, of Halifax, and Hon. Thos. S. Ashe, of Anson. Those previously elected are Wm. A. Wright, Esq., Wm. Eaton, Jr., Esq., and E. W. Jones, Esq. The House of Commons passed its second reading of the bill leading State aid to the N. C. Western Railroad—aye 57, nays 25. The House also passed a bill releasing the city of Raleigh from its subscription to the Charlotte Railroad. Mr. Osceola (by leave) introduced a resolution that the Finance Committee inquire as to the expediency of issuing Treasury notes for the payment of the non-funded interest on the debt of the State, also the exchange of Treasury notes for State bonds.—Adopted.—Mr. Holderby (by leave) a resolution that the Judiciary Committee inquire as to the expediency, propriety and Constitutional-ity of the enacting a law suspending the sale of property under the execution, or conditional exposure for a limited time.—Adopted.

Congressional.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—In the Senate quite a lengthy discussion ensued on the suffrage bill, particularly on the clause disfranchising those citizens who left here to join the Confederate cause. This prohibition was strenuously opposed by Mr. Wilson, of Massachusetts, among others, who said it was too small a matter to make a difficulty about.

Mr. Cowan said that any citizen of the District who joined the Confederate army was guilty of treason. He did not apply this to people of Southern States. But here there was no doubt of the form of government, and no one could doubt where his allegiance was due. He moved to extend the privilege of the bill to females, and contended that if negroes had a right to vote women had also.

The House adjourned without a vote on the amendment.

The committee on Reconstruction have before them a bill providing that Chief Justice Chase shall appoint, for each of the Southern States a Provisional Governor and all other Territorial machinery, and prescribing regulations for holding Conventions for the adoption of Constitutions securing to all men their rights irrespective of color.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Mr. Ward's bill guaranteeing a republican form of government for the Southern States, authorizes the appointment of Provisional Governors by the Chief Justice, and provides for State conventions to remodel the Constitution; delegates to which shall be elected by native men, except those participating in the rebellion, who are excluded from the polls and offices.

WASHINGTON, December 11.—Wilson's bill provides that until the law-making power declares several portions of the United States heretofore, but not now, represented, restored to political relations, they should not be represented in the electoral college. This bill is the special order for Thursday.

The Raleigh Progress states that it is rumored that Hon. G. M. Leggett, a Holdenite member of the Legislature, has gone to Washington to demand that the State of North Carolina be again placed under a provisional Governor.
