

Many Senators Now Favoring Fulbright's "Lasting Peace"

Washington — An Associated Press poll shows that of 53 Senators willing to express their views, 42 favor the general principle of the Fulbright "lasting peace" resolution and would support it if they were called upon to vote on the measure as it stands.

Eleven definitely oppose the measure in its present form, 36 declined to commit themselves and seven could not be reached for comment, according to a report.

The Fulbright proposal, passed by a 360-to-29 vote in the House September 21, has been sidetracked in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, but Senator McClellan (D-Ark) has announced that he will offer it as a substitute for any other resolution the committee may report out.

As passed by the House it states:

"Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring) that the Congress hereby expresses itself as favoring the creation of appropriate international machinery with power adequate to establish and to maintain a just and lasting peace among the nations of the world, and as favoring participation by the United States therein through its constitutional processes."

Although many Senators seem to feel that they may never have an opportunity to vote on the Fulbright measure in its present form, only seven short of a majority say they favor its general principle.

A substantial number of these Senators display a willingness to go much further in making detailed commitments on postwar foreign policies, their general attitude being summed up by Senator Hatch (D-NM) with the comment:

"If that's all we can get, I'm for it, but it isn't strong enough."

On the other hand, several Senators are inclined to agree with Senator Holman (R-Ore), who told reporters:

"It is a good deal like voting for the Lord's Prayer but I'll vote for it."

Also in the group approving the Fulbright measure in principle are several Republicans who, like Senators Robertson of Wyoming, Capper of Kansas and Wiley of Wisconsin, say they favor the idea but think the statement made by their party's postwar advisory committee at Mackinac Island, Mich., last month is more expressive of their views. This would pledge the United States to "responsible participation . . . in postwar co-operative organizations among sovereign nations to prevent military aggression and to maintain permanent peace with organized justice in a free world."

Some, like Senator Bailey (D-NC) say they favor the principle but look to the Foreign Relations Committee for guidance. Others, like Senator George (D-Ga.), see "nothing seriously wrong" with the House-approved measure but doubt that it should be brought up at this time.

The 42 supporters of the resolution include 28 Democrats and 14 Republicans. Five Democrats and six Republicans oppose it in its present form.

The opposition views ranged from a flat statement by Senator Johnson (R-Calif.) that "I'm not for it," to a declaration by Senator Willis (R-Ind.) that if the measure reaches the floor he will move to amend it to "specify that no commitments be effective until submitted to the Senate and confirmed by a two-thirds vote."

Senator Wheeler (D-Mont) says he thinks the United States should collaborate with other nations to maintain peace but adds that he is opposed to the United States "being taken over by the British Empire."

Senator Nye (R-ND) says no foreign policy statement should be made at this time and Senator Brooks (R-Ill) declares that if the Fulbright proposal were passed "the extreme interventionists would claim to have authority from Congress which they did not yet."

POST-WAR PAY FOR SERVICEMEN PLANNED

Washington — Chairman Walter F. George, (D-Ga.), of the Senate Finance Committee, has called for postwar pay to servicemen who want to complete their education or vocational training.

His demand coincided with announcement by Selective Service Headquarters of a program to assure jobs for all persons honorably discharged from the armed forces during the war. The program will operate through local draft boards with the aid of 29-employment committees comprising representatives of national labor, farm and veterans' organizations.

George said the nation must accept the responsibility of rehabilitating youths who have interrupted their training to fight, and that money devoted to such a program would be well spent.

"They should have the opportunity to finish their training or general schooling," he said. "It would be a short-sighted policy not to do everything to give them their chance."

This man was taught not to drink water

WATER . . . just plain drinking water . . . is a mighty scarce item to American soldiers now in the North African deserts. And what little water they can find, often isn't fit to drink.

So before our soldiers were landed in Africa, they were put through a stiff course of training to wean them away from drinking water! They were taught to dip water from streams in cups, and add a dash of iodine before drinking. This served the double purpose of disinfecting the water, and of making it taste pretty terrible.

Each time, a heavier dash of iodine was added (but never enough to be dangerous), until finally the soldiers lost all desire for drinking water except in prepared drinks.

An American soldier's favorite drink

The favorite prepared drink of the American soldier is good, old-fashioned lemonade! But how were our boys to carry lemonade around with them?

The Desert Warfare Board found the answer to that one . . . in what they call Field Ration K. This provides three meals for one man, each in a separate box, with a total weight of 33 ounces, and a total value of 3700 calories.

Field Ration K provides meat three times a day . . . veal luncheon meat for breakfast, pork luncheon meat for dinner at noon, and cervelat sausage at supper time. It provides coffee for breakfast, bouillon for dinner, and a package of lemon juice powder to make lemonade for supper. Ration K also includes malted milk tablets, biscuits, a bar of chocolate, and three sticks of chewing gum.

Sounds like "good eatin'!" for those American boys in Africa, doesn't it? Makes you feel mighty good to know they're so well cared for! We'll all agree that the best of everything is none too good for our boys!

The things our fighting men need and deserve, cost money. They cost so much money that if we are to provide them, it will mean that each of us will have to invest at least 10% of his or her income in War Bonds and Stamps.

Perhaps you are already putting 10% of your pay in War Bonds every payday. But can't you boost that 10% . . . just a little? You can if you'll try . . . and you'll try all right, if you'll just stop and think how badly that money is needed!

Think, too, about what a swell investment War Bonds are. Safest investment in the world . . . and, for every $3 you invest in War Bonds today, you get back $4 ten years from now!
