Washington—Tension has eased somewhat at the old-fashioned, many cammeyed, grey stone state Yugoslav ultimatum. There con-

Superior Food Is Yours by Following Rules for Quality Canning

Ask ten women why they put up fruits, vegetables, jams, preserves, etc., and you may get ten different answers but they all add up to economy and flavor.

At present, high living costs are forcing many persons, particularly members of the so-called white-collar class, to accept merchandise of inferior quality or do without, but almost everybody can have vegetables of superior quality and flavor for there can always be gardens and, fortunately, glass jars for some canning are pre-war quality at pre-war prices. Canned foods should be seasoned, flavored, or sweetened to suit the taste of one's family. If you like corn and beans, corn and tomatoes, tomatoes and okra, cooked together, can them together—but keep in mind that a mixture must be processed the time needed for the vegetable requiring the longest time.

Own a Canning Book "But," warns Gladys Kimbrough, Home Service Director for Ball Brothers Company, manufacturer of home canning jars, "whatever you do by way of seasoning, be sure to follow the rules when canning. Every homemaker should own a good canning and preserving book."

Buy whatever new jars, caps, lids, and rubbers needed. Use regular home canning jars and beware of any which haven't the name of a reliable manufacturer on them. Examine every jar, cap, and lid before it is used and use according to the manufacturer's instructions.

Be sure—pressure cooker and water-bath canners are in perfect order. Use strictly fresh produce and use it the day it is mature enough to cook for immediate serving. Discard tough, withered, rusty, wormy vegetables. Wash all produce before breaking or cutting and wash only enough for one canner load at a time.

Don't Lose Time Waste no time between steps in gathering, sorting, washing, preparing, and canning.

Cover prepared vegetables with boiling water and boil five minutes (some vegetables, for example beets and sweet potatoes, require longer). Pour hot vegetables into clean hot jars. Don't cram them continued however to be an air of gravity as a result of the entire incident, for in diplomatic circles it is recognized that this blunt, blistering note to a more or less unimportant puppet state was aimed, not particularly at Marshal Tito and his communist regime, but at the great power which is guiding and shaping the destiny of Yugoslavia . . . Russia.

This incident served to give notice to the Russians that this nation has drawn a line beyond which we will not go, and, taken in conjunction with the stiff note to Marshal Stalin concerning the Dardanelles, marks a new high in American foreign policy setting up a point where in our dealings with the Soviet Union, Russian expansion will be met without compromise or appeasement.

The Yugoslav incident has overshadowed all other activities in the national capital and the highlight of the affair, the golden lining to the black cloud of international crisis, is the fact that the world organization of the United Nations has met its first test of world potency.

Even Russia did not dare to defy the United Nations and counseled moderation to its puppet, when the threat of the ultimatum was to hail the offending nation before the bar of public opinion before the security council of UN. Our state department has demonstrated to the world that an ultimatum with an "or else" attachment does not necessarily mean, in these days of enlightenment, mobilization of armed force.

The "or else" can and does mean that there is a new moral force, which is taking the place of armed force in our world which is more effective, more civilized and more Christian. In 1914 and again in the 1930s an ultimatum such as we dispatched to another nation almost surely would have meant war. Today even the threat of sanctions or action before the security council of the United Nations brought a blustering communist bully to his senses and forced his mentor, Stalin, to tread softly.

In diplomatic circles here the result of American action, taken as it was during the Paris peace conference, is at once a demonstration of our faith in the United Nations and our love of peace, but it is even more a dramatic illustration of the value of a world authority such as the United Nations for the prevention of hostilities or armed force.

There may be other "incidents" aimed to provoke the United States or heckle us into action. This showdown, however, which our state department met with firmness and without hesitation likely will persuade Russia and any other of her satellite Balkan

TO SPEAK SUNDAY

Dr. Duke K. McCall, of Nashville, Tenn., who will speak on The Baptist Hour over radio stations at Charlotte and Winston-Salem at 8:30 a. m. Sunday. His subject will be "When Religion Fails."

Meat broth or any clear soup made of meat and vegetable juices is a popular first course for dinner the year around. Generally it is preferred piping hot in winter and cold and jellied in summer. The following suggestions for making it to serve cold are offered by a food specialist.

When served cold, many people like a little more seasoning or more concentrated flavor. Added flavor may be given with a bit more salt, and a touch of spice, or fresh herbs. True consommé is made of several different kinds of meat which give it a characteristic blend of flavor. Many people like tomato juice and meat broth combined and jellied.

Jellied broth is most attractive when it is served clear without a trace of fat. To remove fat from meat or chicken broth, first strain the hot soup and let it cool. Then skim off the hardened fat from the surface.

states, that while we are patient, we are determined to build a permanent peace and that we are ready not only to invoke our own full power, but the power of world action through the United Nations to bring about that peace.
