Many At Hearing On Co-Operative Levy Proposal

Anti-Fireworks Measure Passed By North Carolina Senate

By Staff Writer

Raleigh-(Special) - With the exception of senate passage of a rigid anti-fireworks bill, the legislature worked principally in committees the first of the week and made what its leaders considered good headway.

Hearings were concluded on a highly controversial wildlife bill, which would separate the division of game and inland fisheries from the department of conservation and development. The house committee planned to vote on the measure tomorrow; the senate committee, later.

Cooperatives Tax Proposed levy of income and franchise taxes on farmers' cooperatives Monday occasioned the largest public hearing in North Carolina's legislativé annals.

Over 3,000 proponents and op-ponents of a proposed amendment to the revenue bill, which would tax co-operatives the same as pri-te enterprises, attended the hearing before the House Finance Committee in Memorial Auditorium.

Chairman Kerr Craige Ramsey, Representative from Rowan, allotted each side one hour.
Willard L. Dowell, executive secretary of the North Carolina Merchants' Association, supported the bill which, he said,, was aimed at "giant money-making cooperatives who're' doing big business and are able amply to pay taxes."

He quoted Representative Hen-yn C. Fisher of Runcombe's esti-mate which placed co-operatives' business between $50,000,000 and $75,000,000 annually. "By 1950, co-operatives will capture at least $100,000,000 of North Carolina's business volume." Fisher spon-sored the bill

Leaders Hope To Continue School Lunchrooms Here

Federal Funds Allotted For Projects Will Be Exhausted Soon

Alleghany county children as well as any others may be eating cold biscuits at noontime instead of the usual appetizing hot lunches served in the school lunchrooms, if some plans are not worked out to continue the present system, by the end of this

Miss Clyde Fields, county sup-erintendent of schools, along with others in the State, has received an announcement from the State office pointing out that because of the limited allotment for lunchrooms and the greatly increased number of lunches served, there will not be sufficient funds in the present allotment to continue the program much longer after the end of this month.

The State office has suggested various plans for continued operation including the raising of prices and the cutting down of the number of school lunches

Because of the number of chil-dren now included in the lunchroom program and the benefits derived from it, Superintendent Stills Captured Fields said she hoped plans for its continuance throughout the school year could be worked out.
