HELD IN TRUST

The Influence of a Newspaper Should Be Conscientiously Wielded.

The following from an address before the Men's Club of the Central Christian Church of Warren, O., by Thomas H. Deming, editor of the Warren Tribune, is worth reproducing. Mr. Deming said:

The newspaper need not seek a place in politics. It already has it. It is conceded to it, if not by divine right, at least by old established custom and precedent. It is so breasted at birth, and the newspaper that does not accept its share of political responsibility is shirking its duty and is not fulfilling its proper and legitimate mission in mundane affairs.

The newspaper has its part to play in politics just as surely as it has its part in any of the subdivisions that may relate to the public good. The newspaper has no more right to shirk its political burdens than has an American citizen to shirk the right to vote. The man who ignores and neglects his right of suffrage, who gives no thought or time of interest to the election of our public officials, has no right to complain of bad government and of dishonest officials. Neither has the newspaper which ignores questions of political and social moment any right to complain if things do not go to suit it. Newspapers which receive their support from the public, and they are all so supported, have a duty to perform in the public's interest, and they cannot evade it. The duty comes of responsibility, and newspapers have had this certain responsibility since newspapers were first started. Newspapers are made by individuals, by men who are no more capable, no more intelligent and no better informed, perhaps, than the average man in any other business. But the newspaper man does not speak for himself alone. He speaks for the community or for the large majority of the men who read his paper. This being true, it enlarges his responsibility and consequently enlarges his duty to his fellow man; therefore, since the newspaper is given its place in politics, whether it wants it or not, it should exercise its right and influence in the best manner possible and to the best interests of the great-

The Whole Country is Being Aroused

It is Creating Much Newspaper Comment Throughout the Country.

From the Charlotte News:

The longer the Root Juice demonstrations continue at this point the more remarkable seems the results of the wonderful remedy that is creating so much newspaper comment all over the country. Root Juice is making astonishing cures here. Yesterday over a dozen cases of rheumatism were reported cured, and a number of people also reported great relief in severe cases of indigestion and kidney troubles. Many of those whom the remedy has cured are well known here. The great remedy will be at Hardy's Drug Store next Saturday.

We hear a great deal about the freedom of the press, and we Americans boast of it as one of our highest and best heritages. What is the freedom of the press, and what does it mean? It is something intangible, and yet it is something that every layman demands and approves. Its abridgement, next to the curtailing of his own liberties, is the one thing that would most arouse his indignation and would make him quote the spirit of '76 and the cause of our forefathers died for. This freedom of the press means simply that we want our newspapers to have the right to print the truth, expose corruption and, if need be, help point the finger of scorn at the man who betrays his trust. This does not mean that every wrongdoer, every weak man, who falls in to be written up and his misdeeds made public property. Nobody knows better than a newspaper man how often the frailties of the human race are hidden and how often the mantle of charity and of silence is drawn between the public and some man's wrong. The freedom of the press means that we demand that our newspapers have the right to exercise their best and honest judgment in dealing with the news of the day and with matters that affect our political and social conditions. And it means beyond and above all that we believe in the integrity of the press as a general proposition and that our own opinions are largely formed by what we read in the papers. Men familiar with newspaper history know of the great influence newspapers wield, how they have carried to victory great and good questions and how they have defeated bad men for office. Of course there are bad and vicious newspapers, but our discussion has to do only with the mission and responsibility of the good ones. If our premises are true and if our conclusions are fairly tenable it is easily seen that the newspaper has its place in politics and that that place is an important one.

Since we accept the proposition that the newspaper has its part to play in politics, the inference follows that a newspaper has the right to be partisan when convinced that its party is right. A newspaper has a right to be partisan just as a church has the right to be sectarian. It is the duty of both. But, just as the sectarian should not believe that his way is the only way through the pearly gates, the partisan should not believe that his way and his party are always right.

While the prime object of all newspapers is to give the latest news and current events, the absolute necessity of having two or more political parties gives to the press broader scope, burdens it with greater responsibilities and duties and makes imperative public expression for or against governmental theories and political issues as well as social, ethical and scientific matters. This naturally leads to the questions of partisanship and partisanship, which words, politically considered, have a widely different meaning. Partisanship de-

No Reason For It

When Washington Citizens Show the Certain Way Out.

There can be no just reason why any reader of this will continue to suffer the tortures of an aching back, the annoyance of urinary disorders, the danger of diabetes of any kidney ills when relief is so near at hand and the most positive proof given that they can be cured. Read what a Washington citizen says:

Romulus S. Butler, 219 Harvey st., Washington, N. C., says: "I am well pleased with the results that followed the use of Doan's Kidney Pills in my case and can earnestly recommend this remedy to other kidney sufferers. I was subject to dull pains in my back, accompanied by sharp twinges through my loins. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at the Washington Drug Co., removed my trouble and benefited me in every way."

For sale by all dealers. Price, 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

That dreadful burning, itching skin, whether caused by sunburn, tetter, salt rheum, weeping skin, scald head, milk crust, psoriasis, or what it may be, there's just one remedy in all the world that can stop it forever, and that's Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. Because it removes the cause, because it cleanses and purifies the blood, Hardy's Drug Store.

Packing Eggs for Market.

Instead of packing eggs in oats, saw dust or bran for transportation to market, try packing a newspaper on the bottom of the box or basket. Put in a layer of eggs, laying them closely so as to prevent moving about. Over this lay two thicknesses of newspaper, then another layer of eggs, and so on till the receptacle is filled. Cover the top layer with a blanket or shawl. This will be found more satisfactory than the old way.

Notes.

If your hens are not getting along in their moult as fast as they should, give them some kind of tonic and food that will help the growth of new feathers.

maads loyalty to the fundamental principles or paramount issues of one's party and the independent expression of that loyalty at the ballot box. However, it does not always necessarily mean loyalty to the party nominee, for it is possible that he may be totally incompetent, unworthy and in no manner a true representative of the vital principles of the party. Partisanship, on the other hand, often implies "stick to your party, right or wrong." This is loyalty to the nominee, but if persisted in it will ultimately destroy the party. Corruption and graft are liable to find their way into all political parties, but this does not justify a newspaper in deserting its party. It should expose and fight the corruption and graft from its own breastworks, strive to purify its party from within and send to his political grave every public man and official who proves untrue to the sacred trusts imposed on him by his party. The force or power to purify a party and to keep it pure is within and must be exerted by the party itself, and this force should first and at all times manifest itself in the conventions or primaries that nominate the candidates for the various offices to be filled. None but good and well qualified men should ever be named for office, and when such men are nominated no voter or newspaper can be justly accused of undue partisanship by working hard and faithfully and voting for the party nominee.

Political rings and bosses too often name the candidates. The press should in no manner be an organ or agent or representative of any ring or boss, but should always be free to criticize and courageously to point out the defects and shortcomings of the bad as well as to eulogize the virtues and qualifications of the good candidates for office.

An honest press is the greatest detective force in the world. It has done more to lay bare the shortcomings of officials and ferret out corruption and graft than any other agency that has ever been devised. As newspapers are to a very great extent molders of public sentiment and public opinion and have more or less influence in shaping legislation, both national and state, it is extremely important that the directors of their political policy should not only be close students of the science of government and the history of different governments, but should closely scrutinize the workings and effect that different governmental and political policies have had in the past in shaping and working out the greatest individual and material prosperity for the United States. Although political issues change and with our rapidly increasing population and advancing commercial and industrial interests new issues arise, yet there is no better way of judging of and for the future than by the study of the past.

RAILWAY SIGNAL SCHOOLS.

Apprentices Take Three Year Course in Block Signals.

The Pennsylvania Railroad has established signal schools on the divisions of its line east of Pittsburgh to train men for the signal service of the system. This is due, says the Bookkeeper, to the rapid growth of block signaling which is in use along these lines. There are some 12,408 signals east of Pittsburgh, covering 3,385 miles of road.

The railroad has appointed six signal apprentices who will be trained as engineers to direct and plan signal installations. Apprentices in these schools will serve a three years' course. The first year will be given to mechanical work with the repair and construction gangs, the second year will find them in the office of the supervisor of signals, and the third year will be devoted to outside work on electric and electro-pneumatic appliances.

Missionaries of the Sudan.

"Missionaries wherever they work have many difficulties to encounter and many hardships to contend with, but I doubt if there is any part of the earth where the missionary has a harder time than in the Sudan," said Dr. A. C. Hudson of Los Angeles, who spent several months in that country.

"Despite the effort of the Government to stamp them out, cannibalistic practices are still prevalent in the Sudan. The Government is adopting strong measures to punish those responsible for such inhuman practices. The worship of their ancestors, witchcraft and the employment of witch-doctors and fetich worship are among the obstacles that confront the missionary, but notwithstanding these and other difficulties the work of evangelization is producing encouraging results, and in Africa to-day there are more than 3,500,000 Christians."
