Mr. Royden

An Episode of a Stranger's Entrance to New York Society

By GEORGE L. SYINGTON
Copyright 1915 by American Press Association.

"There's Miss Van Vechten again, wearing a lady in the diamond circle, who is days gone by had phoned before the footlights, with that 'ro-gon' in her hair. He's been there every night this week. I wonder if she is going to marry him."

"If she does she'll lose her social hold. The Van Vechten haven't money enough to do what they please in society," said the Countess of a brewer, who sat beside her.

"Where did he come from anyway?" asked the first speaker.

"Australia or Canada or New Zealand. He's British, you know."

"What's he doing here?"

"But the orchestra drowned the reply. While Miss Van Vechten was talking up Mr. Royden had originally sprung from a natural feeling of a refined woman to take the part of a stranger against operators. There was that in the man which soon caused her to forget her motive in the interest he inspired in her. A fairly intelligent young woman, she was able to appreciate his knowledge of many subjects which go to make up the intellectual world. He had made a study of history, philosophy, political science, the formation of nations, governments, constitutions—included such information as might be beneficial to one who aims to follow public political life. International law seemed to be his hobby. Miss Van Vechten was disposed to draw him out on these subjects, which he presented to her in a way to insure her understanding of them. She did not wonder that a man who possessed such treasures within himself should be indifferent to the glided circle."

"It was in this way that Mr. Royden won his way, if not to Miss Van Vechten's heart, at least to a feeling that she would like just such a man for a husband. She encouraged him to ask for her, not that she would or would not accept him, but that she might have the choice of doing either one or the other."

"Now, all this happened within the short space of a few weeks. Mr. Royden's stay in Gotham was coming to an end. No one knew it except himself, but he knew it very well. One day he announced his coming departure to Miss Van Vechten."

"Mr. Royden had been very uncommunicative, even to Miss Van Vechten. When he said he was going she knew no more about where he would go than when he had come from. But she was too well bred to ask him. Nevertheless, he told her the story. More over, he asked her to be his wife."

"The day before Royden left New York he was sitting in the lounge room of the U. S. club reading a newspaper. Near him at a table, partaking of refreshments, were several of the members of that party who had discussed him when he had entered the building several weeks before. Among them was Skinner, the cotillon leader.

"There's that fellow, Royden, over there," remarked Skinner. "He doesn't seem to have made much headway in society. I seldom meet him anywhere."

"How do you know he came to be met?" asked another.

"I don't."

"Nobody seems to know anything about him," remarked another. "Mrs. Tracey can't find these people on society as she once did. She's failed at that."

"At that moment a stranger entered the room and, catching sight of Royden, rushed up to him with extended hand.

"Hello, Bob," he cried. "I haven't seen you since we left Oxford. I'm mighty glad to meet you, old man, and to congratulate you on the position you have attained. Why are you not in Washington?"

"Going tomorrow; have been waiting for the minister."

"The man who had entered, seeing a friend in Skinner, nodded to him and after a brief talk with Royden beckoned him to join them. Skinner did so and was introduced to Royden.

"This is my friend the Marquis of Hamilton. He is on a diplomatic mission to settle some matters about fisheries or something."

"Mr. Skinner bowed obsequiously.

"I have heard of the marquis as Mr. Royden," he remarked.

"What's that?" said the introduced "Ben going loco, Bob? Using your own name instead of your title?"

"I have been obliged to do so for reasons connected with the diplomatic service."

"I see."

"Then Mr. Skinner asked the marquis if he could not be of some service to him during the rest of his stay in New York, to which the marquis replied that he was leaving the next day.

"That evening the news spread among the glided circle that the oldest son of a British duke and a prominent diplomat had been in New York, and no one knew who he was, and Miss Van Vechten, who didn't had had the honor of entertaining him. Everybody blamed the former for not making known the rank of the man who had introduced, and nobody believed her. But Miss Van Vechten knew all the while who she was entertaining. Mrs. Tracey expressed herself in the statement that a prominent scientist whom she had introduced and whom society had never heard had given the marquis a letter to her, at the same time advising him to visit New York first.

"Then came the news of the engagement of the marquis to Miss Van Vechten. If the woman were worth as being deprived of the honor of entertaining the diplomat, the former would be justly entitled to think that she had been deceived and that the man of her acquaintance had been a swindler.

FOR TREASURER.

This is to announce my candidacy for re-nomination for the office of Treasurer of Beaufort county, subject to the action of the Democratic primaries.

Thanking the Democratic voters for their past favors, and asking them to turn out at our primaries and give me their support, I am

Yours truly,
JOS. F. TAYLOR.

FOR SHERIFF.

Two years ago I entered the contest for the nomination of Sheriff of Beaufort county. I found, at that time, that there were many in the county who felt that the present incumbent, Mr. Ricks, should have another term, making him in all about five years in that office. I was advised by my friends, also many who were supporting Mr. Ricks, to withdraw from the contest at that time, they all assuring me of their entire support two years hence, or at the present time, in view of which I hereby announce my candidacy for the office of Sheriff of Beaufort county, subject to the Democratic primaries and convention to be held for the nomination of county officers.

My policy is two terms for all county officers.

Trusting that I may receive your support, I am, very respectfully,
JAS. H. HARRIS.

FOR SHERIFF.

To the Democrats of Beaufort county: I take this method of thanking you for your loyal support in the past and to ask a continuance of the same in the coming primaries in renominating me for the office of Sheriff of Beaufort county. If I have served you well and given satisfaction, I feel sure that I can give you even better service in the future; as the records show an improvement each year, the insolvent list for 1909 being less than 2-1-4 cent. I have worked for the best interest of the county at all times, and if renominated I will give you the best service I can, and at all times try to improve. Thanking you in advance I remain very respectfully,
Your servant,
GEO. E. RICKS.

FOR REGISTER OF DEEDS.

To the Democrats of Beaufort County:

As a life-long Democrat and a worker who has never held office I hereby announce my candidacy for the nomination by the Democratic party for the office of Register of Deeds for Beaufort county.

Democracy means an equal chance for all and no monopoly for any, either in office or otherwise. Believing that upon observance of this doctrine depends the success of our party, I shall ask for no more than two terms if nominated. Respectfully,
JNO. W. MAYO.
Aurora, N. C.

GILBERT RUMLEY.

WILL NOT WITHDRAW.

I desire to say that I shall not under any circumstances withdraw from the contest for the nomination at

BOARD OF ELECTIONS.

The State Board of Elections have appointed Messrs. H. E. Harding and W. E. Windley, of this city, and Jno. W. Chapin, of Aurora, as members of the county board of elections.

FOR COSTABLE.

I am a candidate for constable in Bath township. If elected I will endeavor to fill the office to the best of my ability and to the satisfaction of all. Would thank all to give me their support at the coming primary.

WILLIAM S. BURBAGE.
Bath, N. C.

CHIVALRY.

Be chivalrous. In nobility of spirit, high courage, magnanimity and gallantry there dwells chivalry. Exercise it. Wherever a child can be helped, wherever a stranger can be guided or a friend who is shy set at ease, wherever a weak brother can be saved from falling and shame, wherever an old man's step can be made easy, wherever a servant's position can be dignified in his eyes, is the chance for chivalry to show itself.

THE PRESENT.

We should be blessed if we lived in the present always and took advantage of every accident that befalls us, like the grass which confuses the influence of the slightest dew that falls on it, and did not spend our time in stooping for neglect of past opportunities, which we call doing our duty.—Theresa.
