A STAGE SENATOR

Opening his campaign for reelection in Indianapolis last evening, Senator Beveridge was at his best, and also, we regret to say, at his worst.

It is unfortunate that a man so able and so courageous as Mr. Beveridge proves himself to be should be so powerfully inclined to exaggeration, sensation, sentimentality and stagginess.

He assails the Democratic party with vigor, but he does so in a way to suggest a mere balancing of accounts.

While plain speech is desirable in these days, sober speech and truthful speech are imperative.

Mr. Beveridge is brave in his emotionalism. If he could be fearless in candor and reason and wisdom he would command more attention.

TOM WATSON'S HOWL

Several months ago when that eminent agitator and populist, Tom Watson, announced his return to the Democratic fold there were premonitions that the time would soon come when a barbed fence would not keep him on the inside.

He was not long in justifying all apprehensions as to his absolute inability to lead a quiet life, and the Baltimore Sun tells of his capers as follows:

"His bitter fight against the re-nomination of two congressmen resulted in their polling a substantial majority. But he thrives on defeat.

He was kept so busy in the congressional fight that he was unable to throw his whole strength against the nomination of Hoke Smith for Governor.

But since Smith has been nominated and Mr. Watson has had time to get around to his case, he has been doing the subject full justice.

"Attacking him personally and politically, he has poured a constant fire into the candidate for Governor. In Georgia for a generation the Democratic nomination has been equivalent to election.

But when Watson starts into a fight colossal majorities do not deter him. He goes up against a stone wall with the same joyous audacity that he attacks a straw man.

He projected a hall in Atlanta to hurl his projectiles at close range. The friends of Hoke Smith poked the meeting and he couldn't be heard ten feet. He tried it again and they almost blew the roof off the house.

Watson says he will have his say if the whole world howls, while the Hoke Smith 'rooters' announce that previous disturbances are mere summer squalls compared with the performance they are prepared to put up.

"As far as all outsiders are able to 'make out' amidst the fearful din that arises from Georgia, Mr. Watson is accusing Mr. Smith of 127 offenses, ranging from running a saloon to wearing No. 10 shoes.

He is incidentally preparing to launch an independent candidate for Governor and bury Smith under an avalanche of votes. The great difficulties he has are: (1) Finding a candidate who is willing to take the risk of coming out of the contest alive; (2) securing enough votes to elect said candidate.

AN EDITOR'S DREAM

"I had a dream the other night," said Bert Walker, editor of the Osborne Farmer.

"Unburden your soul, was the invitation extended.

"I sat in my chair and closed my eyes," replied Bert. "It had been a hard day and the poor editor, gotten his a hundred fold, I prayed for for that land over yonder where the surges cease to roll.

An unaccountable calmness came over my nerves and the world appeared to grow brighter and people actually smiled upon me. In walked a man to pay his subscription.

"My dear editor," he exclaimed, on being told how much it was, "you are certainly mistaken. I know I owe you twice that much. Your paper is worth three times what you charge for it. It is the best paper I know of in the world.

My family could not get along without it. The children crop for it and we always believe every word we see in it. You are so fair, and so honest and so charitable. That job work you did for me was perfect. Here, smoke a ten-cent cigar on it. Any time I can do you a favor let me know. I will send you a big turkey for your Christmas dinner. This community could not get along without you. Goodbye, my honest friend.

"There was a crash, and a great voice shouted: 'Hoh again!'

I awoke. The foreman had dropped a page on my type of the conference minutes on the floor and the work had to be done all over again."

Electric Bitters
Succeed when everything else fails. In nervous prostration and brain weakness, they are the positive remedy, as thousands have testified.
