

THE LARGEST PAID SUBSCRIPTION OF ANY PAPER PUBLISHED IN EASTERN NORTH CAROLINA

LAST PERIOD CONTEST BEGINS NEXT WEEK

Many Hopeful Candidates, but Race Is Not Yet Won —Important Information—The Mission Of The Daily News.

Tonight at 9 o'clock the third period of the European contest closes for all city candidates. Out-of-town candidates will be allowed the usual extension of time—Monday's mails—in which to get their period vote values on subscriptions. The special values on new subscriptions makes this period one of inducements.

The fourth and final period of the contest begins with the closing of the third period. The fourth period marks the close of the contest, and at promptly 10 o'clock on the night of November 14, the ballot boxes will be sealed in the presence of the judges and no more ballots or contest subscriptions will be received.

Out-of-Town Candidates
Candidates outside of the first district are especially urged to give the most careful attention to this announcement that they will not be allowed the usual extension of time on the closing of the last period. The contest ends FOR ALL DISTRICTS Monday night, Nov. 14, at 10 o'clock promptly, by the Daily News' office clock. Please remember this and be on time. One minute late might mean the loss of the year after all of your efforts. This rigid rule is necessary or it would not be made.

Grand Jury's Report
The grand jury submitted their report for the term and is as follows: To the Honorable Superior Court of Beaufort County:
The Grand Jury for this term of the said court, having completed its business, through its foreman, respectfully reports to the Court:

We have carefully examined and inspected the various county offices and find the business of each carried on in a neat and efficient manner and the affairs of the same conducted politely and satisfactorily to the public.

We also have visited and inspected the county jail and find the same well kept in a cleanly manner, the welfare of the prisoners carefully looked after and the premises kept in good condition, no complaints of any kind having been heard.

The county home received our careful and diligent inspection and we found its condition in very good order and the same careful attention given to the management there as we found in the other county institutions. The inmates were well fed and looked after and we heard no complaints of any moment of neglect or mismanagement and they all seemed to be satisfied. The houses and grounds are kept in a neat and clean way which showed the efficient and careful management of the keeper.

We would earnestly recommend that a telephone be placed at once in the county home.

Respectfully submitted,
J. K. HOYT,
Foreman.

THEY HAVE HIGH WINDS

Aviation Field, Belmont Park, N. Y., Oct. 28.—General dissatisfaction prevailed among American aviators at Belmont Park today over the fact that Glenn H. Curtiss was practically thrown out of the team selected to take part in the international race, scheduled for tomorrow.

Curtiss won the international cup last year and brought it to this country. He confidently expected to be chosen this year, and had built a new type of machine especially for the purpose of making part in the international race.

A committee of the Aero Club of America, however, ignored him when it selected the American team to defend the cup won by Curtiss.

This committee appointed the cap defenders and their substitutes as follows:
Defenders: Walter Brooks, J. Armstrong Drexel and Charles K. Hamilton.
Substitutes: J. C. Mars, J. B. Moisant and Arch Hoxsey.

It was originally planned to hold elimination races and select the American defenders from among the three fastest competitors. But there was too much wind for the elimination contest yesterday and so the Aero Club committee decided to appoint the defenders. Then Curtiss was ignored.

Time Chancel.
On account of the second number in the Lyceum course the bazaar to be held in the Blount building under the auspices of the ladies of the Episcopal church, will be conducted on Tuesday and Wednesday nights of next week instead of Wednesday and Thursday nights as first announced. This bazaar promises to be one of the most attractive social functions of the season. As it is for a worthy cause it should be most generously patronized.

The Two Revivals.
There is no conflict in the meetings going on in the Presbyterian and Baptist churches at this time. The arrangement for these meetings was part of a concerted plan to have simultaneous meetings in all the evangelical churches.

Owing to certain conditions all the plans have not materialized. However, these two churches will work in harmony during the meetings and it is hoped the other congregations will join heartily in the work.

No League Meeting.
On account of the Memorial services of the Improved Order of Red Men Sunday afternoon at the Elks Hall at 3 o'clock there will be no meeting of the Young Men's Christian League Sunday afternoon.

BURIED UNDER CLAY WALL

Atlanta, Oct. 27.—A clay wall on one side of an excavation being made for the foundation for a new skyscraper hotel, at the corner of Pryor and Houston streets, caved in this afternoon, burying one white man, four negroes and a team of mules.

The white man and one negro were rescued alive. The others were dead when uncovered, all being horribly mangled.

Matter Worth Our Attention
Washington, N. C., Oct. 29, 1910. To the Editor:
Will you please call the attention of the Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company, operating a telephone exchange in this town, to the following: On November 26, 1895 the town of Washington granted a franchise to the Southern Telephone Company to operate a telephone exchange in the city of Washington. Places of business were to pay thirty dollars per year and residences to pay fifteen dollars per year. That was for the first year, and it was stipulated by said telephone company that the above mentioned charge would never be raised, but if other towns in this state, the size of Washington or lower rates than that which Washington was paying, that Washington should get the benefit of it.

On February 10, 1896, J. Havens, mayor, and a committee appointed by the Board of Town Commissioners were ordered and empowered to make contract, the same as November 26, 1895 with any telephone company which would comply with the regulations stated that the charges for telephone rent should never be increased from fifteen dollars per year for residence and thirty dollars per year for places of business.

On April 6, 1896 the Washington Telephone Company was released of their bond, having sold their interest to the Thomas Telephone Company, composed of gentlemen from Tarboro, which I believe to be the predecessor of the Carolina Telephone and Telephone Company, now operating a telephone system in this town and who are now charging twenty-four dollars per year for telephones in residences in Washington, instead of fifteen dollars as the original franchise stipulates.

This matter is worth looking into as it will mean nine dollars per year to every household having a telephone in his residence.

Let the light be turned on.
Yours truly,
GEO. J. STUDDERT.

A CURIOUS MOMENTO

THERE ARE EIGHT STANZAS, AND THE WORDS INDICATE THAT THE WRITER MUST HAVE BEEN UNDER STRONG EMOTION AT THE TIME OF COMPOSITION.

The following was handed the Daily News by Captain J. M. Wallace a former resident of this city. No doubt it will prove interesting reading to the people of this section:

Representing nothing on God's earth now,
And naught in the waters below it;
As the pledge of a nation that's dead and gone,
Keep it dear friend, and show it.

These lines form the first stanza of an elegy that was written a half century or more ago on the back of a five-dollar Confederate bill. There are eight stanzas in all, yet they cover a space not more than three inches square on the back of this old bill. Although the handwriting is so diminutive that one cannot read it readily without the aid of a powerful glass, it has been executed so well that each letter looks as though it had been engraved instead of written by the hand of one who must have been overcome with emotion.

For upward of forty years the old bill has been in the possession of George P. Merrill of the Brooklyn Club. So long ago did Mr. Merrill acquire the bill that he does not remember whence it came. The other day he showed it to a number of fellow members in the club, including George W. Chauncey, the president, and C. G. Balmanno, vice president of the Mechanics Bank. It created both the interest and curiosity of all who examined the bill. Mr. Balmanno, especially, impressed by the pathos of the elegy written upon it, that he persuaded Mr. Merrill to part with it, and he now intends to add it to his collection of curiosities.

The bill is of the issue of 1864 and bears the signatures of H. E. Wingate, for the registrar, and L. Holmes for the treasurer of the Confederate States of America. Across the top of the bill was a notice to the effect that the bill would be redeemable two years after a treaty ratifying peace between the Confederate States and the United States should be signed. But, as is well known to every student of history, the Southern evidences of indebtedness were all repudiated by the national government, and this bill, as well as every other one issued by the Confederates became just so much worthless paper.

Although Mr. Merrill has endeavored many times to find out who was the author of the lines inscribed on the back of the old bill, he has never succeeded. In the opinion of Mr. Chauncey, they are the finest he has read in many a long day. They are as follows:

Representing nothing on God's earth now,
And naught in the waters below it;
As the pledge of a nation that's dead and gone,
Keep it dear friend, and show it.
Show to those who will lend an ear,
To the tale that this paper can tell.
Of liberty born of the patriot's dream
Of a storm-cradled nation that fell.
Too poor to possess the precious ore,
And too much of a stranger to borrow.
We issued today our promise to pay,
And hoped to redeem it on the morrow.
The days rolled by, and weeks became years,
But our coffers were empty still,
Coin was so rare that the treasury'd quake
If a dollar should drop in the mill.

BLEW OUT THE PANELS

New York, Oct. 28.—Four Irish families were initiated into some of the outer mysteries of the Italian black hand society early this morning when a bomb was touched off in the hall way of the three story tenement at 798 Washington street. The infernal machine blew out the panels of the front door, partly wrecking the stairway and shook out window panes on the second floor and banished sleep from the neighborhood for remainder of the night.

The building is the scene of this morning's explosion is the property of John Romano, an Italian commission merchant.

Romano declares that it is his belief that the black hand intended the bomb for his benefit although he says he has not received any letters of warning of threatening import since he lived in New York.

Breaks Wrist.
Mrs. J. M. Gallagher met with the misfortune to break her wrist last night at her home on East Main street.
Yesterday afternoon about twilight she had occasion to go in her back yard for fulfilling her usual chores and tripped over a piece of wood causing her to fall to the ground. As a result of the fall she broke her wrist.
Although suffering much pain today she is getting on very nicely. Her many friends wish for her a speedy recovery.
But he faith that was in us was strong indeed,
And our poverty well we discerned;
And these little checks represented the pay
That our suffering veterans earned.
We knew it had hardly a value in gold,
Yet as gold the soldier received it;
It gazed in our eyes with a promise to pay,
And each patriot soldier believed it.
But our boys thought little of price or pay,
Or of bills that were overdue;
We knew if it bought us our bread today,
'Twas the best our poor country could do.
Keep it, it tells all our history over,
From the birth of the dream to its last;
Modest, and born of the Angel Hope,
Like our hope of success it passed.

"PECULIARLY MY DUTY"

Returning to the United States this 18, Mr. Roosevelt said in reply to Mayor Garrison's address of welcome:

"I have thoroughly enjoyed myself and now I am more glad than I can say to get home, to be back in my own country, back among the people I love, and ready and eager to do my part, so far I am able in helping solve the problems which must be solved if we of this great democracy upon which they have ever shone are to see its destined rise to the high level of our hopes and its opportunities.

"This is the duty of every citizen, but it is peculiarly my duty, for any man who has ever been honored by being made president of the United States is thereby forever rendered a debtor of the American people and is bound throughout his life to remember this as his prime obligation, and in private life as much as in public life so to carry himself that the American people may never have cause to feel regret that once they placed him at their head."

It is "peculiarly my duty" to help solve the problems of "this greatest democracy upon which the sun ever shone," and this is the way he performs that duty—this is the way he helps a great democracy solve its problems:

1. He enters upon a campaign to make himself President of the United States again in 1912.
2. He plunges into a nation-wide intrigue to discredit the Taft administration and to destroy Mr. Taft politically.
3. He assails the justices of the United States Supreme court as "fossilized mind," accuses them of deciding great constitutional cases

"against the democratic principle of government by the people" and demands that the court decide cases not according to the law and the Constitution but according to what he calls "the spirit and need of the times."

4. He launches his New Nationalism, with its scheme for the most despotic system of centralization that was ever inflicted upon a free people.
5. He makes himself the most arbitrary boss the Republican party in New York has ever known, while pretending to fight the bosses.
6. He nominates one of his own political puppets for Governor in order to control state patronage and insure to himself the New York delegates to the Republican National Convention in 1912.
7. He calls the tariff a "moral issue" in the West and then endorses the Payne-Aldrich tariff in his Saratoga platform.
8. He pleads for campaign-fund publicity both before and after election at Oswatimie and suppresses any reference to the campaign-fund publicity in his Saratoga platform.
9. He advocates an income tax at Oswatimie and suppresses any reference to the income tax in the Saratoga platform.
10. He urges corporation publicity at Oswatimie and suppresses any reference to corporation publicity in his Saratoga platform.
11. He declares himself in favor of short-term franchises in his Saratoga platform.
12. He tells the people of New York that he tariff is not responsible for "advances in the cost of living" and then refuses to open his lips again in regard to this most important economic issue which affects
