DEMOCRATIC OPPORTUNITY

For several months, some of the most prominent stand-pat Republican senators have been saying more or less emphatically that a democratic congress was a foregone conclusion. This was a confession of weakness in the masses of their party...

The representatives elected Tuesday will not take their seats until December 1911. This is a long way off. There will be ample time in the interim to formulate a definite line of policies to be pursued when they take charge.

The Democrats have done their feeble best in the present Congress to prevent the barbaric extravagance of their opponents. In this they have served the country well. But more is expected of the powerful than of the puny.

As the lower house of the sixty-second congress impresses the nation, so will the nation vote in the presidential campaign of 1912. With a hostile Senate and a president of temporary faith it will be difficult to pass any far-reaching reform measures.

This may be accepted as an absolute certainty. The amiable gentleman who occupies the White house will not veto bills that are backed by a demand that is practically general. He has learned his lesson.

Now has the popular judgment been so sane as at present. Reactionaries are just as desirable as radicals are just as undesirable. The people want neither. The people want that their lives are made more comfortable as Congress directs. They are thoroughly aware that every governmental extravagance comes out of their pockets.

It is not inconceivable that the Democrats should control the government in 1913. The republicans are powerless to prevent it. The fate of Democracy for years to come is in the hands of the Democrats who were elected to Congress last Tuesday.

They have some of the left over trouble, just as Cleveland had during his last term, but the country is wiser now and does not blame men for what they cannot help. The country has demonstrated its willingness to trust the Democrats, now it is for the democrats to prove that they can be trusted.—Ledger Dispatch.

Saves an Iowa Man's Life.

The very grave seemed to yawn before Robert Madson, of West Burlington, Iowa, when, after seven weeks in the hospital, fear of the best physicians gave him up. Then was shown the marvelous curative power of Electric Bitters. For, after eight months of frightful suffering from liver trouble and yellow jaundice, getting no help from other remedies, he took a few bottles of the matchless medicine, completely cured him. It positively guaranteed for momentary relief. Every day
