CONSIDERATION OF OTHERS

In the busy rush of this more or less selfish world there is perhaps no one thing that is more generally noticeable than the utter lack of consideration for others that are met on every hand.

No character is wholly estimable in which there is not found an unselfish and courteous consideration of others, and yet it is doubtful if an observer passes a day without seeing in the ordinary daily routine case after case of perfect disregard of the indispensable characteristics of the innate gentleman or gentlewoman.

The Washington Post cites a rather unusual case as follows: "A young man living in a flat in New York was very ill. The doctors said he had heart trouble and recommended rest and quietness. The 10-year-old daughter of Freeman John Roth, however, insisted on practicing on the piano. The family of the sick young man explained the situation to Roth, and begged that he stop his daughter's constant practicing, but the playing went on. Finally, Roth was arrested, and the magistrate ordered that the piano be kept closed for a month in order to give the nerves of the sick man a chance to recuperate from the long strain. The closing of the piano, however, was ordered too late. The sick man died, the doctors saying that his end was certainly hastened, and perhaps actually brought about, by strumming of the little girl."

"It is a grave question as to just what one's legal rights are in this world. The persons who talk most about their legal rights are apt to become nuisances. There seems to be no doubt that the daughter of the freeman was well within her rights in playing the piano. Likewise there is no doubt that the person who persists in remaining on the end seat of a summer car is well within his rights. So is the man who cannot carry an air, and yet persists in whistling discordantly all day long.

"A little consideration for the feeling of others goes a long way toward preserving general contentment and preventing the friction that invariably follows a strict insistence on one's rights and on obtaining exact justice in a world where, if everybody had his exact due, no more and no less, fewer human beings would be at large."—Ledges Dispatch.

The Memphis Commercial Appeal says the first jackass came to this country on the Mayflower. Could he return today it would take him another lifetime to count his progeny.—Virginian Pilot.

Five thousand bottles of seized whiskey have been thrown into the French Broad river. So far, however, nobody has suggested that Norfolk go to that stream for a new water supply.—Pilot.

A St. Louis man is suing a widow for one hundred thousand dollars for refusal to fulfill a promise to marry him. The widow will have chosen the better part, even if she has to pay the full amount asked for.

The statement that there are thirty senators down for speeches on reciprocity suggests that its up to some body to call the previous question and cut off debates.—Richmond News Leader. It would be a good idea to make them all speak at once. It might raise the roof—or dome—of the capitol, but it would save time.—Virginian Pilot.

THE OLIVER

What a mystery is this! This deep...

We can't all be industrial circles. Indeed in the price we pay for knowledge...

Good intentions do not always do good. To want little is always to have plenty.

It is better to borrow than to give trouble. The average man's wit is always an hour too late.

The dressmaker's ideal is not always Nature's. Women's rights are all that some women have left.

A silk hat, like charity, covers a multitude of sins. Have you ever noticed how other people waste time? You never heard of salary-seeking the man, did you?

No man is really old until he has lost his prejudices. A clever jester is one who never jokes with his wife.

It is a wise woman that turns no offener than it has to. Some men look ahead much better than they go ahead. An artistic failure is almost as rare as a perfect success.

My idea of a liar is a man who says he is glad he is bald. Alas, that even the artificial roses should have its thorns!

The people who throw stones usually live in glass houses. A woman never feels fat when she can call it embonpoint.

There is no grave deep enough in which to bury the past. It takes a post-mortem to bring out some men's good qualities. A fault is never so offensive as when it is somebody else's.

Sobody believes the truth until he has found it out for himself. The way to Broadway runs right through Hard Work Avenue.

To decide which shoe shall marry—a rich sinner or a poor saint. It is sometimes only a step from the ridiculous to the sublime.

There are some people to whom it is not courteous to be polite. Some men are so shrewd that nobody can believe them honest.

It is not what you give, but the way you give it, that makes the gift. A woman generally gains her point, unless it is the point of a joke.

Some self-made men look as though they forgot to sandpaper the job. The man who suffers from dyspepsia never dies of a broken heart.

Self-love is the only romance that enters into the average man's life. There is a kind of fellow who would like to be kicked by a millionaire.

Most people are busy mortgaging the future in order to acquire a past. Wisdom is more to be desired than riches—and a good deal easier to get.

Some people shake your hand as though they wanted to shake you. To the paying guest at the boarding house, home is where the bath is.

Literature is the kind of printed matter that only posterity will read. A woman can get more by her weakness than a man can by his strength.

If there is anybody who deserves sympathy it is the girl who is trying it hurts less to be cheated by a rogue than by a pillar of the church. Why is it that the other fellow's errors always seem so funny to us?

Considering how good everybody says he is, this is a dreadfully wicked old world. A woman's idea of fame is to refuse to let her name be mentioned in the newspapers.
