HONOR WHERE HONOR IS DUE

The best place to learn of a man's worth, how he is esteemed, is not in some distant state or city, but right where he lives—his home. That this is true was clearly demonstrated in Washington yesterday.

Hon. John H. Small representing the First Congressional district in the United States congress was accorded a welcome such as is rarely tendered to any man either in public or private life.

We venture the assertion that were all the school children in the City of Washington asked the question who had done the most for the schools of the city and for the advancement of the cause of education in general and who is the most popular man in Beaufort County?

That ninety per cent of them would unhesitatingly say Mr. Small. We do not mean by this that Mr. Small has no enemies, because there is no man who can retain the friendship of everyone and more especially is this true of a person in public life.

Yesterday's reception was some what a repetition "on an enlarged scale" of the reception given him in August, 1898 when he was first nominated for congress at a time when Democratic defeat was almost conceded.

Mr. Small has no doubt represented the First District in a manner more satisfactory to his constituents than has any other man who has been entrusted with the duties and responsibilities of this high office.

He has not only secured legislation contemplating the completion of an inland waterway from Norfolk to Beaufort but he has represented the interest and looked after the welfare of his people in every particular.

Through his efforts public buildings have been secured for Washington, Elizabeth City, Greenville and numerous appropriations have been secured for work on Pamlico and Tar Rivers.

Farmers institutes have been held and government experts secured through his efforts and he never loses an opportunity to secure such legislation as is necessary for his people.

He has ever been active in the cause of education and for years has been chairman of the school board of Washington Public Schools.

His record in Congress for the past decade is one of which he can truly be proud. The result of his efforts can be seen all over the district.

Herein lies today his popularity and this faithful service was what prompted his friends and neighbors in Washington to gather an extend to him such a welcome as can never be forgotten.

Washington people are appreciative and never fail to reward merit and service and when it became known yesterday morning that Mr. Small was on his way from the Capital city to his home it was immediately decided that he should receive a warm welcome by those among whom he has lived.

The greeting was one of friend to friend and neighbor to neighbor. It should be and no doubt was one of the proudest moments of Mr. Small's life. We are proud of him and the Daily News believes his day for greater usefulness to his people have just begun.

CHEAP (WORTHLESS) INSURANCE Insurance commissioner Young says he has received inquiries from different parts of the State as to the standing of certain mutual insurance companies and whether they are licensed to do business in the State.

Won't you come and live near us down by the river shore?

Tis really so delightful, enchanting, yes and so more. T'will give you rest and comfort and much improve your health— That's vastly more important than a little of your wealth.

are flooding the state with circulars, asking merchants and manufacturers to give them their insurance, and making all kinds of promises, none of which they can be forced to carry out.

The Commissioners says that none of these companies or brokers are licensed to do business in North Carolina, and any contract issued by them here would be null and void under our law, and not enforceable in our courts.

Commissioner Young says if companies are worthy of confidence and patronage of our citizens they generally show it by complying with our laws when they desire to do business in our state.

Anyone who thinks those millionaire woolen trust magnates at Lawrence, Mass., are increasing the salaries of their men, women and children mill workers out of the generosity of their hearts—and out of their own pocketbooks—is mistaken.

They are making the American people pay not only the amount of the increased wages, but every penny of the expense of the long strike.

Before any wages were increased, the woolen trust magnates, who have been making profits of from 6 to 75 per cent on their investment, decided to advance the cost of clothing.

And as a matter of fact, the consumers began to actually pay increased prices for woolens and cottons in anticipation of the increased wages to be paid by the woolen trust, before the announcement of the increased wages were made.

Cotton prints, calicoes and the like have risen in price at wholesale in New York City a quarter of a cent a yard in the last ten days, and mill agents predict the increase will reach two cents a yard.

This will make a difference of five cents in an apron, and 25 cents in the housewife's dress. Men's clothing is going up, and women's and children's and children's dress goods are declared to be the next in line.

The increases, it is estimated, will bring approximately $12,000,000 into the coffers of the woolen trust within a year. Thus an accommodating public will bear the cost of the strike and the increases in wages.

The men who work such games on both public and employes are but a handful in number. They are just a few rich men who own or control the majority of the stock of the woolen trust. It is practically these few men, and their agents, who are the beneficiaries of the strike.

Again the query: How long are $2,000,000 American citizens going to stand for a wool tariff which takes them outrageously on every article of clothing they use in order that a few greedy woolen trust magnates may be still further enriched.

Queer Audience Views Comedy. A four-act comedy recently given by the New York School for the Hard of Hearing, created a singularly weird impression amongst those present who were not familiar with lip reading and the sign language.

Words were used, but they were not meant to be heard, for the players and most of the audience were deaf. Cues and clever lines alike were read, not heard, and the lips of the silent speakers were the media. Even the hand-clapping, with which some of the audience, unfamiliar with the conventions of the lip-drama, were prompted to express their applause, was discouraged by the knowing ones, who seemed to manifest their approval by an airy wave of the hand aloft.

The Wrong Pick. "I've picked a girl for you, my dear fellow, to go through life with you, who is a live wire." "Ah, but my journey through life is via wireless."

What Love Can Do. "And do you really love me, George?" she asked. "Love you?" replied "Dear" George fervently. "Why, while I was bidding you good-by on the porch last night, my angel, the dog bit a large chunk out of my leg, and I never noticed it till I got home."

The Superlative Degree. "Can you give me any idea of the mean temperature in this place?" asked the traveler who had just arrived at Devil's Lake, N. D. "We ain't got any mean temperature here," replied the old settler. "It's all meanness."

After Seeing the County Treasurer. Man With the Bulging Brow (raising his voice)—I'm a good citizen, but— Man With the Bulbous Nose—But, like all the good citizens I know, you do hate like thunder to pay your taxes!

Time to Light Out. The Maiden—Be reasonable, papa. Tom is the light of my life. Her Papa—That may be, but I object to having my house lit up by him after eleven o'clock.

The Climate. The universe is passing. The earth shakes, in good omen! The solar system's gasping! For Baby's cut a tooth!
