"The Watched Pot Never Boils"

In the way of the old proverb, "The watched pot never boils" is the way the new general case. Well, what if it doesn't? Can you buy protection and peace of mind at any cheaper price than the cost of a good policy? If you can, we'd like to know it.

The Children

At Naples the tramway workers had struck; there was a long row of empty cars in the Riviera Chials, while on the Piazza di Trionfo a crowd of drivers and conductors had assembled. It was a noisy, boisterous crowd of Neapolitans, as lively and mobile as quicksilver.

Higher than their heads, behind the garden fence, the glistening lot of a fountain hung in the air like a sword. The tramway workers were surrounded by a larger crowd who wanted to go by tram car to the various parts of the town. All these, clerks, artisans, petty traders, seamstresses, denounced the strikers in a loud and angry tone.

The strikers looked gloomy, and pressed against each other, hardly responding to the angry shouts of the crowd. They climbed upon the railings and cast restless glances into the streets over the head of the people. The strikers resembled a pack of wolves surrounded by dogs. It was clear to everybody that these people, wearing the same uniform, were bound together by a firm resolve not to give in; and this infuriated the crowd still more. There were, however, philosophers in their midst who, while smoking away at their pipes, tried to pacify the more violent opponents of the strike.

"Oh, Signor! What is to be done if there is not enough money to buy macaroni for the children?"

Wrangling, jeers, reproaches and admonition were suddenly cut short; a new current swept the crowd as if recoiling; the strikers looked gloomier still, and pressed closer together. Voices in the crowd called out:

"Soldiers!"

With a light, dancing step from the Santa Lucia Quay came little gray soldiers, stamping their feet regularly, and mechanically swinging their left arms. They seemed to be made of tin, and as frail as factory-made toys. The crowd drew back from the cars; the soldiers, like gray beads, became scattered alongside the platforms.

The man in the silk hat and some others who surrounded him, among their arms whirly and shouted:

"The last time... Ultima Volta! D'you hear?"

The officer, twisted his mustache, his head drooping. A man waved his silk hat and ran up to him, saying something in a hoarse voice. The officer looked at him skance, standing erect, and gave the word of command in a loud tone.

The soldiers in twos and threes began to jump on the platforms of the cars. At the same time the drivers and conductors were pushed off.

This seemed to amuse the onlookers, who broke out into laughter and whistling, which, however, only lasted for a moment.

People drew back from the cars, their faces wearing a longer and older expression and their eyes wide open with astonishment. They all pressed forward toward the front of the car.

Within a yard or two of the wheels a gray-haired driver with the face of a soldier could be seen, his cap off, lying on the rails. He lay on his back, his long mustache shooting upward. An adroit youth, with the movements of a monkey, laid himself down by his side; a number of others followed their example.

The man in the silk hat cried out something, the driver looked at him and shrugged his shoulders. He must replace the tramway drivers by soldiers, but he has no orders to wrestle with the strikers.

Then the owner of the silk hat, surrounded by people willing to please, rushed toward the strikers. The latter set off, approached those lying on the rails and attempted to lift them.

A struggle ensued. All the dusty crowd of spectators made a turch and howling, rushed to the rails. The man in the Panama hat pulled it off his head, threw it up in the air, and was the first to lie down by the side of a striker; he patted him on the back, and shouted something approvingly right in his face.

After him some gay, noisy people who had just come upon the scene began to throw themselves down upon the rails. They lay down laughing, making faces at each other and shouting something at the officer who, waving his gloves above the head of the man in the silk hat, was telling him something, shaking his hand some head.

Others threw themselves down upon the rails. Women deposited their baskets and bundles, boys lay down laughing, doubling themselves up like cats trying to keep warm, rolling

Know It Was an Idle Threat

"Then," he cried tragically, "then you reject me? And for my hated rival?"

"No," she answered, coldly, but colorfully. "Yes to both questions."

"Then I owe the fellow a grudge. I have long loved him $10. And now I will pay both debts at once and he will fall dead!"

Lighting his cigarette at the hall gas jet, he departed with a mocking laugh. But the beautiful girl was not alarmed. She knew he could never carry out his devilish scheme. For she knew that he never had $10 at once in his whole life.

QUEEREST PRISON IN WORLD

Arizona County Jail is Blasted Out of a Mountain of Solid Quartz Rock.

When the authorities of Graham county, Arizona, decided to look about for a place in which to confine criminals, they found a natural depression in the side of a hill. This was enlarged into what might be called an artificial cave, divided into four compartments. The cave was excavated parallel to the side of the mountain in which it was made, and daylight admitted by holes blown out of the wall with explosives, the windows being guarded by a network of heavy steel bars. The entrance to the depression was also closed in the same manner, and a well-built porch of masonry built out from it to provide quarters for the sheriff and his assistants. This vestibule is also divided into compartments, which are connected by gates or steel bars. The only way of entering the prison is through the vestibule of masonry, and in order to escape the inmates would have to cut their way through three sets of bars which are an inch in thickness, as the windows are so high up above the rock forming the floor of the cells that they could not reach them. It is necessary, however, to have a very secure place, as the criminals in this part of the country are of a most desperate class, and the inmates frequently include murderers and highwaymen. The mountain which has thus been turned into a prison is composed of solid quartz rock, and the excavation was made principally by the use of explosives. The jail is located in the town of Clifton, the county seat.—Wide World Magazine.

Home Endorsement

Hundreds of Washington Citizens Can Tell You All About It.

Home endorsement, the public expression of Washington people, should be evidence beyond dispute for every Washington reader. Surely the experience of friends and neighbors, cheerfully given by them, will carry more weight than the utterances of strangers residing in far-away places. Read the following:

R. S. Butler, 219 Harvey St., Washington, N. C., says: "I suffered from dull pains in my back and finally I procured Doan's Kidney Pills from the Hoyt Drug Co. They certainly gave great relief and after taking them my condition was much better in every way. I publicly endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills at that time and now I am pleased to say that the benefit I received has been permanent."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-McIlburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.
