WILL FAIL OF EFFECT

PROTEST OF STEEL CORPORA-TION IS ABSURD.

Workmen Have Not Been Benefited,
but the Reverse, by the Operations of the Giant Company—
Figures Prove It.

Mr. Gary, of the United States Steel corporation, is a wonderful business executive, as also is Mr. Carnegie, but at times both make some exceedingly wise utterances. Subsequent to the suit against the corporation Mr. Gary was quoted:

"If any harm results, it will fall upon the stockholders and employees, aggregating a very large number, and any loss to them must be deplored." Neither was it especially original in Mr. Carnegie to express solicitation for the stockholders when the even tenor of $15 rails and 90 per cent. of the steel trade generally was disturbed. Professed consideration for stockholder and employe has long been a clause in the trust's catalogue. Hence the criticism of these gentlemen's comments as trite. Somehow or other this worry over what will happen to the employe vaguely reminds us of the familiar shibboleth, "Let us alone," which was last expressed by Mr. Morgan's man, Perkins, in his Big Business speech at Detroit.

But to return to Mr. Gary. In the one sentence quoted may be found the kernel of the nation's protests against the trusts and the tariff from which they have sprung. Shifting the blame, shifting the burden, shifting the loss—are familiar enough to require no comment. Each time the tariff has been threatened or an effort made to enforce the Sherman law, the placard—"remember the workmen"—has been held up in warning. It is of close kin to the Standard Oil lines of several years ago, when retail prices were raised in keeping with the court's sentence. It ranks with the American Tobacco company's solution of the Spanish-American war tax—a reduction in the size of the packages, which size has never been restored.

And the tariff, surely, by this same reasoning, is for the benefit of the workmen—for the trusts' employes especially; that is why the trusts have clung so tenaciously to the good old standard schedules. That the trusts themselves prospered, of course, merely incidental. Now comes the employe as the great sufferer by trust dissolution. The United States Steel corporation points to its system of profit sharing and pensioning, to its beneficent treatment of the thousands on its pay roll. Yet in this connection we recall the findings of the so-called Pittsburg Survey, published last May by the Russell Sage foundation. This report showed that from the time of the corporation's inception the cause of labor, organized and open, had been losing; that working hours had been lengthened and that the wage increase boasted of had fallen below the increase in the cost of living. The steel trust was not organized for the benefit of its employes, Mr. Gary notwithstanding.—Indianapolis News.

A Washington dispatch refers to the wishes of the "southern Republicans"—meaning, of course, the little handful of federal office holders in the south.

Defenders of Tariff of 1909. The tariff act of 1909 has been investigated by several competent and disinterested persons. The results of their investigations may be found in Miss Tarbell's "Tariff in Our Own Times," in Professor Taussig's "Tariff History of the United States," in Professor Coman's "Industrial History of the United States," and in various magazine articles of importance, including Prof. Willis' articles in the Journal of Political Economy, and an exceptionally thorough study in the Review of Reviews.

All of these investigators agree that the revision was farcical. The only defenses of the act have come from such sources as members of the ways and means committee and the wool trust, which prints an elaborate puff of schedule K in the current issue of the Outlook—as an advertisement.

CHURCHES TURN TO PAPERS

Action of Religious Denominations a Striking Tribute to Efficacy of Advertising.

It is a striking tribute to the efficacy of newspaper advertising that one after another great forms of industry or thought which seek to secure the widest publicity turn to it as the ideal medium in securing the attention of those they aim to reach. This holds true, says the Philadelphia Record, of those who have wares to sell, such as merchandise, insurance or services, but also of those who address themselves more especially to the emotional or religious nature of men and women.

It is not strange, therefore, to find that the churches are appreciating more and more the value of newspaper advertising, especially in their mission work. The United Presbyterians, for instance, have been so impressed by the results of a campaign of newspaper advertising that they have decided to continue it as part of their methods of raising money for mission work.

Other denominations have taken up the subject, one interdenominational official group planning to spend $50,000 within six months in newspaper advertising. Another group of business men interested in foreign missions decided to devote another $50,000 to a year's propaganda of this phase of church work. At the same time, in connection with the Men and Religion Congress in Washington next April, a Publicity Commission, on which are experts in newspaper advertising as well as publishers and editors, is making a scientific study of the whole subject of the churches and the newspapers.

What benefits the churches in the way of publicity will help the business man even more, for the results are likely to be more tangible and direct.

Urges Advertising the Gospel. Rev. Aquilla Webb, pastor of a Presbyterian church of Louisville, Ky., told the ministers attending the Presbyterian Home Mission conference at Kansas City the other day, that he is a strong believer in advertising.

"I had been having some difficulty in getting any number of people out to my Sunday evening service," he said. "I decided to advertise."

"With the help of the newspapers and by preaching truth harnessed to life on live topics I succeeded in packing my church every night."

Plan to Brand Advertising. Official branding of advertisements, thus guaranteeing their trustworthiness, is being considered by the Advertising Men's league of New York, at the suggestion of E. F. Trefl of Chicago. No details as to how the scheme is to be brought down to a practical basis have been prepared, but the idea of some system whereby the brand of reliability may be placed officially upon such advertising as is found deserving has met with widespread approval from advertising men.

Competition Eliminated. The eleventh-hour resolution of the Steel Trust to divest itself of a part of its ore holdings was a confession of guilt. The Steel Trust dominates the markets for billets and other basic steel products, rails, steel plates, tinplate wire, and structural iron as completely as the Oil Trust dominates the market for petroleum and its various derivatives. Petroleum prices are fixed by a few men, who meet occasionally in a tall building on lower Broadway; steel prices are discussed and arranged at Gary dinners. Competition has absolutely nothing to do with the matter; it is completely eliminated.—Philadelphia Record.

Kindred Glooms. Says the Chinese emperor in an imperial edict: "I have reigned three years, and have always acted conscientiously in the interests of the people. But I have not employed men properly, as I am without political skill. I have employed too many nobles in official positions. The people are grumbling, yet I do not know. Disasters loom ahead, but I do not see."

Of what other distinguished head of a government do these utterances remind you?
