The church was beautifully decorated for the auspicious event in the variegated tints of lovely springtime. The choicest of flowers, palms and evergreens predominated.

Prior to the entrance of the bridal party an enjoyable musical program was charmingly rendered by Miss Emily Harris, the organist, and Mr. Samuel Coward, violinist.

The wedding was witnessed by a large number of friends and well wishers of the couple and they began their wedded life carrying with them nothing but sunshine and gladness.

Promptly at the appointed hour the organ under the deft and skilled touch of the organist spelled out in perfect harmony Lehmann's wedding march and the guests of honor entered the church and were assigned special seats.

Down the center aisle walked the sweet little ribbon girl, Misses Lucille Dall, sister of the bride, and Sallie Miller, sister of the groom. Both were comely attired in white and were the personification of sweetness. After taking their places at the chancel, holding the ribbons, they were followed by the polite and attentive ushers Messrs. R. Lee Stewart and John W. Smith, who entered the right and left aisles respectively.

The next to enter the church were the two bridesmaids, Miss Edna O'Neal and Miss Lida Sawyer, of Beaufort, N. C., followed by the flower girls, wearing exquisite gowns of white Marquise, over yellow satin, wearing white hats and gloves to match. Their bouquets were white sweet peas. Passing on the right and left sides they separated and took their positions on either side of the altar rail.

The groomsmen Messrs. Herman Carrow and James Albertson, of Beaufort, N. C., followed. The Damsel of Honor, Mrs. James McMiller, handsomely crowned in white Marquise with hat and gloves to match and carrying a shower bouquet of white sweet peas and lilies of the valley, was the cynosure of all as she walked her way slowly down the center aisle bearing on the arm of her maid of honor, Miss Dagmar

MONUMENT FIRST MARTYR LATE CIVIL WAR UNVEILED

Raleigh, June 12.—The bronze statue of Henry L. Wyatt, of Edgecombe county, the first to fall in battle during the Civil War, was unveiled in Capital Square with elaborate ceremony and a military and civic parade down Fayetteville Street that was especially pleasing and appropriate.

The procession moved under command of Adjutant General R. L. Lein, started at 11:30 o'clock from the court house to the state house. There were in line the third regiment rank; The Edgecombe guards, the Fayetteville light infantry, and the Confederate veterans, the latter under command of Major General Julian S. Carr. Bringing up the rear were carriages and automobiles with distinguished and prominent citizens.

At the statue the invocation was offered by Rev. A. D. Betts, the venerable chaplain of the Fourth Regiment Confederate States Army. The orator of the occasion, Major E. J. Hale, was introduced by Col. J. Bryan Grimes, Secretary of State. Major Hale was a member of the Bethel regiment, The L. O. B. Branch Drum Corps stirred great enthusiasm at the conclusion of Major Hale's address with the rendering of Dixie on drum and fife, a stent for which the corps is famous throughout the South.

The statue was formally presented to the state by Mrs. F. M. Williams, president of the Daughters of the Confederacy, and State Senator L. V. Bassett, of Edgecombe, who was chairman of the legislative committee for providing the statue. Those speakers reviewed the successful movement for providing the statue that perpetuates the honor that is due to North Carolina in having made the first sacrifice of blood in the battle field for the cause of the Confederacy.

Governor Kitchin in fitting terms accepted the statue in behalf of the state and in the midst of this address the veil was drawn from about the statue by Master W. Henry Wyatt, a nephew of the hero of Bethel. The Edgecombe Guards fired a salute. Then there was martial music by the band, the placing of floral tributes about the statue and lays by Bernard Thomas, thus concluding the ceremonies.

Mr. William Mount Jr., went to Elizabeth City this morning.

TAILOR SHOOTS DEAD BOY WHO ANNOYED HIM

New York, June 12.—John Neistroy, a tailor, of No. 175 Stanley Avenue, Yonkers, shot and killed Joseph T. McMahon, aged nineteen, of No. 107 Jefferson Street, Yonkers, in that city yesterday. Soon after the shooting Neistroy was found at his home. He told Police Captain Cooly that he had fired his revolver at several youths who had molested him, but he did not know that he had killed any one.

Neistroy's tailor shop is at No. 92 Ludlow street. His place was entered by burglars several times, so he bought a revolver and kept it in his store. He was on his way back to his store after midnight, having forgotten to fasten the rear door, when McMahon and three companions appeared. Neistroy asserts that they jostled him and that they followed him into his store. When he got his revolver they ran out of the store and he followed them, discharging the pistol as soon as he got outside the door. He then put the revolver in the store and went home.

McMahon was hit in the back, the bullet going through the heart. McMahon's companions said at the coroner's inquest yesterday that neither they nor McMahon had followed the tailor into his store, but two of them admitted that McMahon had annoyed Neistroy.

Neistroy said he thought that the men were going to rob him. He was held without bail on a charge of murder in the first degree. He has a wife and three children.

ALL ARRANGEMENTS PERFECTED FOR THE CHICAGO CONVENTION

Finishing Touches Are Now Being Made to the Coliseum Where The Republicans Are to Name Their Standard Bearer.

Special to the Daily News. Chicago, Ill., June 12.—Practically every detail has been arranged and the finishing touches are being put to the Coliseum for what promises to be the most perfect of national conventions, as far as environment is concerned.

The advance guard of delegates and visitors has put in an appearance. A mighty throng, with brass bands from every section, will follow at the week's end and at the beginning of next week to observe what is expected to be the most spectacular quadrennial session that the Republican party has held in years.

For the third time since its erection, thirteen years ago, the doors of the Coliseum will be thrown open on the forenoon of next Tuesday for the accommodation of a Republican national convention. In 1904 the Republicans nominated Theodore Roosevelt for President in this building, which experts declare to be the acme of convention halls, and four years later, under the same roof William H. Taft was chosen as the party's standard bearer.

For weeks men have been working a metamorphosis under the steel girders that span the building. Forty thousand dollars has been spent in making the needed changes, installing platform and seats and in the elaborate decorations. Practically every available foot of space in the interior of the big hall is being draped with flags and bunting. The national colors predominate in the decoration scheme. The wall's surface at the south end of the hall, directly back of the speaker's platform, is a tower of American flags, with a large President's flag as a centerpiece. Draped from this are long strings of bunting. These streamers are being placed entirely around the hall and, at regular intervals, will be caught up by shields or other emblems.

The speakers' platform will occupy the same position as four years ago—at the south end of the main auditorium. Back of the platform is a terraced stage for 2,000 distinguished guests. Two stands abutting on both sides of the speakers' platform will furnish accommodations for 500 working newspaper men. The arrangements make every seat in the building desirable. The seating capacity is 12,000 in round numbers. In front of the speakers' platform and on one level will be seats of the 3,080 delegates and alternates the latter to be seated directly behind their principals. The remaining seats on the main floor and those in the mezzanine boxes and galleries will be for the general public—or if it fortunate enough to get tickets, which have been divided between the National Committee and the local Convention Committee.

The platform, aisles, and all open spaces have been covered with matting to insure the maximum of quiet while the convention is in session. Five hundred public telephones and a large number of telegraph instruments are being installed in various parts of the building for the accommodation of delegates and the public. Especial attention has been paid to the arrangements for the comfort of the convention guests. In the basement there will be a fully equipped emergency hospital in charge of a corps of physicians and Red Cross nurses. There will be numerous rest rooms for men and women in the annex. A soft drink emporium will be located just outside the main hall.

Arrangements for the policing and offering of the convention have been made under the guidance of years of experience. The seating of the hall and the general supervision of the thousands of onlookers will be in charge of several hundred assistant sergeants at arms and ushers under the general direction of Sergeant at Arms William P. Stone. Uniformed city police will be present for emergency only, subject to the call of the convention officer.

Arrangements regarding entrances and exits have been given especial attention, as well as measures of precaution for the safety of those in the hall in case of fire. Although the building is fire proof, having a main facade of Gothic stone and arches of steel, no chances are being taken. Eleven entrances have been arranged for, six of them leading into Wabash Avenue and the others into the alley in the rear of the building. To guide visitors to their seats big signs will be placed above all the entrances, which will notify them at which one to present their tickets.
