LONG USEFULNESS AT AN END Some Would Have Thought Vase Had Done Good Service, but Not So Mrs. Spicer.

When Miss Ann Pickett dropped in on her neighbor, Mrs. Spicer, and found her moping over the fragments of a gilt vase, Miss Ann sympathized generously. "It must have been quite a costly vase," she said, looking admiringly at the pieces.

"No, it only cost six bits," Mrs. Spicer acknowledged. "Tain't that I feel so bad about."

"Maybe it was a gift that you prized because of associations."

Mrs. Spicer shook her head. "Jim and I bought it over in Tompkinsville a long time ago; I prized it because it was such a saving to the family. The first year we had it I kept it on the front shelf for a general ornament; then when Jim's birthday came and I hadn't anything else handy to give, I gave him the vase for his own. Next Christmas, instead of paying out good money to buy something new, he gave it back to me for a Christmas present; then I gave it to Jim junior on his birthday, and he gave it to Sue Belle on hers."

"The next spring all the kindfols got up a birthday party for old Aunt Belle Spicer, and we took her the vase; after she'd kep' it a good bit, she gave it to Jim's sister Jane for a wedding present, and afterwards Jane gave it to me and Jim when we had our china wedding. I was counting on giving it to Jim again on his next birthday, and now here it is smashed to splinters."

"I tell you, Miss Ann, it most makes me cry to think of losing such a useful family article—so near Jim's birthday, too!"—Youth's Companion.

Varieties of Honey. A sore throat and a rasping cough led the writer to call in at the stores with a view to the purchase of honey. Lemon and honey are extremely soothing, and the overplus of the latter can be used on the breakfast table. The assistant said they had plenty of honey, got it fresh every day. "What honey is it?" asked the man with a sore throat huskily. "Twenty-one cents a pound," replied the salesman, and it came out that he had no notion that there were varieties of honey. His idea was that all honey was English, and he had never heard of Irish honey, let alone that that expert quality that the Concomera bees produce, or of the heather honey or that from the West Indies. Grocers and purchasers should be educated in the various excellences of honey.—London Chronicle.

CAME BACK TO HIS MEMORY

Long Years of Captivity Had Not Effaced Early Teachings From Mind of Elephant.

The following is an instance of an elephant's good manners and of the tenacity with which an idea once resolved by him adheres in his memory.

When visiting the London Zoo, an Englishman who had seen service in India got permission for his children to ride on one of the elephants. After the ride he wished to give the beast a bun and to make him say "Please," using in this connection the phrase "Salaam kuro" (make a salaam).

The man animal regarded the man gravely for some time, eagerly eyeing the bun in his hand. At last memory came to the pachyderm's aid, and up went his trunk, and he made a most correct salaam.

The beast's keeper was much astonished, asking what the performance meant. The Britisher explained that it was a point of good manners for an elephant to raise his trunk up to his forehead if anyone was going to feed him, and that frequently elephants would ask in this polite manner for something when they encountered anyone who seemed likely to offer them food.

The keeper assured the visitor that he had never seen the elephant do this before, and that he had been in charge of the beast since its arrival from India a long time since. For 17 years this animal has never heard these words, and had always taken his food without this mark of good manners.—The Sunday Magazine.

POINT THAT ATTRACTED HIM

Vegetarian Dinners Had at Least One Good Idea That He Could Appreciate.

After steadfastly declining many invitations to public dinners a man astonished his friends by attending three vegetarian dinners.

"Are you a convert?" they asked. "I am not," said the man. "I go because the vegetarians have one custom that deserves to be encouraged. Their speechmaking precedes the dinner. Anyhow, it did at the three dinners I attended. That is a most commendable custom. It ought to be adopted at all dinners. Everybody is in a hurry to begin eating, and they don't take time to meander through a lot of dull speeches."

"I don't know why the vegetarians reversed the usual order. None of them that I asked could tell. Personally, I think it is because they are so anxious to get away and order a square meal somewhere after their appetites have been whetted by their own little snack that they can't wait for the speaking. I may be wrong. But the speeches are put out of the way first. That is the main thing."

Why They Can Spell It. "Before I went to Europe," said the school teacher, "it was one of the mysteries of my profession how every British child enrolled in our schools came to be authority on the spelling of chilblains. Teachers might hesitate over one 'l' or two, the children never. They might make orthographic mess of the simplest one syllable word, but the tiniest tot from the British isles went to the head of the class on chilblains every time. One wintery month in those same islands told me why. It is in the word they saw oftenest. In drug stores, in clothing stores, in shops of all kinds cures and preventives of chilblains are universally advertised. Owing to the exigencies of the climate there is a regular chilblains literature presented for those children's absorption, so no wonder they know how to spell their universal affliction."

ACTED AS A WET BLANKET Indignant Lady's Rebuke Sounded Somewhat Incongruous, but Playgoers Will Understand.

It was a sweet, sad play, and there was hardly a dry handkerchief in the house. But one man in the gallery, "among the gods," irritated his companions excessively by refusing to take the performance in the proper spirit. Instead of weeping, he laughed. While others were mopping their eyes and endeavoring to stifle their sobs his own eyes brimmed with merriment, and he burst into inappropiate guffaws. At last the lady by his side turned upon him indignantly.

"I don't know what brought you here," she clobbered, with streaming eyes, and pressing her hand against her aching heart; "but if you don't like the p-play, you might let other people enjoy it!"

Tomorrow Morning and for the next ten days, suppose you cut out drinking tea and coffee and in their place have a steaming cup of well-made

ODD WEATHER DEVICES

NATURE FURNISHES MANY SIMPLE BUT INTERESTING ONES.

Swiss Weather-House, a Common Toy, Quite Trustworthy — Chameleon Barometer a Curiously-Simple Test for Humidity.

One of the oldest and simplest ways of telling whether the air is dry or moist is to suspend a piece of seaweed out of doors, or even in an apartment where there is no artificial heat. The weed is crisp and dry at the approach of fine weather, while it is flabby and moist when rain is likely.

A common toy, the Swiss weather-house, is really quite trustworthy in its forecasts, says the Strand. The woman, of course, emerges from the little house in fine weather, while the man comes out when wet conditions are to be expected.

In a medium state of the atmosphere both figures stand just inside the house. The movements are due to the twisting of a cord of catgut, a substance which is highly sensitive to changes in the humidity of the air.

Two very singular weather devices are those in which a frog and a leech are employed. In the former case a glass jar is filled to about two-thirds of its capacity with water. A little wooden ladder is constructed, and this is placed inside the jar.

A frog will live quite happily in such a position for a few weeks, and it will be found that in fine weather the creature will climb up to the top of the ladder. In stormy weather, however, the frog prefers to remain under the water.

Even more reliable as weather prophets are leeches. A single leech is placed in a broad glass bottle with a piece of perforated bladder or leather over the mouth. On the approach of fine or frosty weather the leech remains almost motionless, curled up at the bottom. When rain or wind is coming the creature rises to the surface, while a coming thunderstorm will cause it to be much agitated; at times the leech will even leave the water altogether, so sensitive is the animal to an electrical disturbance.

The chameleon barometer is a curiosity which has puzzled many people, but its construction is really very simple. The animal changes color according to the weather, being pink in damp conditions, purple in a variable state, and bright blue when the air is dry.

A cardboard mount is prepared, and this may be lettered in sections, Fair Storm and Change. The chameleon is sketched out on blotting-paper, and then immersed in a solution of chloride of sodium and gum arabic. Any chemist will make up the mixture.

A more beautiful chemist hygroscope is formed of a flower made of white blotting-paper which has been immersed in the cobalt mixture. The blossoms show many varying shades, from bright pink to sky blue, with the changes in the degree of dampness in the atmosphere.

A somewhat curious storm-glass was introduced by the late Admiral Fitzroy. This is formed of a glass tube, stoppered, but with a small hole through the cork. Into the tube has been poured a mixture of camphor, nitre, sal ammoniac, alcohol and water. The changes in the state of the atmosphere are indicated by the production of feathery growths, these extending upward at the approach of a storm and retreating to the lower part of the tube in quiet weather.

Spiking Obsolete Nowadays. One reads in the war news that the Italians found that guns in the Tripoli forts "spiked." If that is meant literally they must have been guns of mainly antiquarian interest.

The expression, "spiking guns," is a survival from the day when all that was necessary to put a gun out of action (provided, of course, that you had access to it) was a large nail or spike and a hammer. You simply drove the nail into the touch-hole at the breech. If the nail was long enough to turn round at the end, on the bottom of the bore, so much the better.

It is just as simple, perhaps simpler, to put a modern gun out of action. All you want is a hammer. The breech block of the modern gun is held closed by screw threads, after the breech block is shut on the shell, a turn of two or three inches engages the threads. By knocking a burr on these threads you prevent them engaging. Any attempt to fire the gun without the breech block being perfectly closed would, of course, be of material assistance to the enemy.

Protest. "The boys seem discouraged about makin' garden," said Mrs. Cornstout. "Yep," replied her husband. "They turned up a few square feet of dirt an' then held a meetin' an' passed resolutions to the effect that it was a shame to spoil such a fine fishin' worm pasture by plantin' it full o' potatoes an' sweet corn."

The No-Rim Cut Tire is Here

YOU have read much about the No-Rim-Cut tire. It is here. Come and let us show you. Let us explain the No-Rim-Cut and 10 per cent oversize features. Let us show you how it cuts tire bills 48 per cent. Men, at first, were slow to adopt this tire. Now over 1,000,000 have been used—tested out on some 200,000 cars. Now the demand is greater than ever before. Six times that of two years ago. Men everywhere are now accepting No-Rim-Cut tires.

We were slow to take up this tire. We made a thorough investigation and comparison. The evidence became overwhelming. We were convinced. The tires are now here. We recommend them to you. You should use them. Here's the evidence—

Can't Rim Cut With No-Rim Cut Tires the side rings are used with the smooth, curved side next the tire. The hooked side is turned away. Then wholly deflated, from neglect or accident, it rests on the rounded side of the rings. Thus you see rim cutting is impossible. That, it is estimated, saves 23 per cent—that's what rim-cutting costs. 10 Per Cent Oversize When a car is overloaded, as most cars are at times, the tires are subjected to excessive strain. No-Rim-Cut tires are made 10 per cent oversize to cover the overload. This gives 10 per cent more air—10 per cent more carrying capacity. It's the air that carries the load. This oversize is permitted by the No-Rim-Cut construction. That saves overloading. Prevents blow-outs. It cuts probable tire cost 25 per cent. 10 per cent oversize saves 25 per cent. No-Rim-Cut feature saves 23 per cent. Both together save 48 per cent on an average. Isn't it reasonable for men to prefer this tire? Don't you see why we so strongly recommend it? Don't you think you should use GOOD YEAR? Come and let us show you.

ROASTING

There is a difference between meat roasted in a GAS oven and that by any other method.

"The lower oven is used for all roasting purposes and broiling, the upper oven for baking purposes; both ovens being heated at the same time and with the same flame.

The oven must be heated previous to roasting, the same as for broiling—ten minutes full heat. Turn meat frequently (leaving door open) until each side is seared. Then place roast lower down in the oven, add seasonings and begin basting with the fat which drips into the pan. The oven flame may also be reduced, and as a rule the front burner will do all the work after the preliminary browning of the surface. Red meats so roasted taste more like the old-fashioned roast before an open fire, than when cooked in any other manner. Not a drop of water is required for basting if there be a proper amount of fat, and the heat be moderate after basting is begun."

Just try a roast on your GAS Range and following all the instruction and you will have the finest piece of roast beef you ever tasted.
