Before casting his vote, we have no doubt, Senator Simmons read the sworn evidence which was presented to the Senate for its consideration.

We would like to know how of the newspaper editors and selfmade political guardians of the public who are making such a about his vote, have read any of the testimony?

The courts of our land have provided a means whereby all who are accused may have a fair trial and when they have stood trial before a jury of intelligent men and found not guilty, then it comes with poor grace from a person who knows nothing of the evidence to charge that the jury perjured themselves.

We say if Senator Simmons after having read the testimony in the Lorimer case was satisfied that the Senator from Illinois was Not Guilty the charges preferred and cast his vote according to the dictate of his better judgment, then he did right better judgment, then more for and, we admire him the more for taking a stand for what he considered right, knowing that the stand he had taken was not the popular one.

Senator Simmons is a man of larger calibre than any other aspirant for his position can hope to be, therefore, should not throw to the winds a position which ranks highest among his colleagues in the Senate.
