

Probably Fair Tonight and Tomorrow

COMING WEEK NEWS IS ONE OF INTEREST

Washington, D. C., Sept. 7.—The political calendar of the week will be ushered in Monday with elections in two States, Maine and Arkansas. In both States complete State tickets, legislatures and representatives in Congress are to be elected. Maine also will express her preference for a United States Senator.

The political situation in Maine resembles the situation in Vermont prior to the election held in that State last Tuesday. The Progressives have failed to put a State ticket in the field in Maine, but a serious split exists in the Republican ranks nevertheless and this is giving the Democrats strong hopes that the election will result in a renewal of power for their party.

The Democratic ticket in Arkansas, headed by Congressman Joe T. Robinson as the candidate for governor, is expected to be elected by the customary overwhelming majority. Interest in the election is confined almost wholly to the vote on several proposed constitutional amendments. State-wide prohibition, a new revenue act and the recall are among the important measures to be submitted to the voters.

Colonel Roosevelt's itinerary for the week begins in Spokane, Wash., and ends in San Francisco. Among the principal cities in which he is scheduled for speeches are Seattle, Tacoma, Portland, Boise, Pocatello, Ogden, Sacramento and Oakland. Governor Woodrow Wilson has accepted an invitation to address the national convention of United Spanish War Veterans at Atlantic City on Tuesday. Two days later he will go to Syracuse to speak at the New York State Fair.

Governor Johnson, of California, the candidate for Vice-President on the Progressive ticket, will start from Chicago Monday on a whirlwind tour through Illinois. After leaving Illinois he will visit Wisconsin, Minnesota and South Dakota and close the week in Iowa.

Republicans and Democrats of Connecticut will hold their conventions for the nomination of State tickets. Governor Baldwin will be renominated by the Democrats, but the Republicans appear to be at sea over their standard bearer.

State-wide primaries of all parties will be held in Colorado Tuesday for the nomination of candidates for State officers, presidential electors, two United States senators and representatives in Congress.

Other events of the week in the field of politics will include the Democratic convention in Delaware to nominate a State ticket and State convention of the Progressive party in Wisconsin and Washington.

Six nations have entered their star aero racers in the contest for the Gordon Bennett international trophy, which is to take place Monday on a course just outside the city of Chicago.

The consecration of Rev. James D. Morrison as Roman Catholic bishop of Antigonish, N. S., will take place at Antigonish Saturday. The services will be conducted by Mgr. Stagni, the apostolic delegate to Canada, who will be assisted by several noted prelates.

The funeral ceremony of the late Emperor of Japan will be celebrated on the Aoyama parade grounds near Tokio, on Friday night. The funeral will follow at Motoyama Kyoto, where an estate has been purchased by the imperial household as the site of the imperial mausoleum.

The attention of the Roman Catholic world will be centered during the week on Vienna, where the international Eucharistic Congress will be formally opened Wednesday. The gathering will bring together noted prelates from every part of the world.

Important gatherings of the week will include the national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, at Los Angeles; the national convention of the United Spanish War Veterans, at Atlantic City; the annual meeting of the American Bankers' Association, at Detroit; the International Association of Fire Engineers, at Denver; the General Passenger and Ticket Agents' Association, at Seattle; the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, at New London, Conn.; the Upper Mississippi River Improvement Association, at Burlington, Iowa; and the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress, at Guelph, Ont.

SEC. PRIMARY OUTLOOK BY THE VOTE TODAY

Indications point to a second primary in Beaufort County.

From information obtained up to the hour of going to press this is the forecast as secured by the Daily News.

It looks as if a second primary will be necessary for Register of Deeds, Sheriff, Representative and also of the County Commissioners. The Recorder of Washington District seems to be in doubt and will require another primary.

The election today in the city and throughout the county is quiet and without incident.

FRENCH MANEUVERS BEGIN.

Paris, Sept. 7.—One hundred thousand soldiers, forming the greatest body of French troops ever assembled in time of peace, are participating in the grand maneuvers which began today in the valley of the Loire, near Tours. The troops are divided into opposing armies, one representing an invading force, and the other forming the army of defence. One of the most interesting features of the maneuvers will be the work of the new auxiliary of aviation, consisting of several score of aeroplanes and dirigible balloons, the first named to be used for scouting purposes and the balloons for transmitting instructions and orders by wireless.

WILSON TO ADDRESS VETERANS.

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 7.—With fluttering flags and martial music, the gates of Atlantic City were thrown open today to greet the delegates and visitors to the ninth annual national convention of the United Spanish War Veterans and the Ladies' Auxiliary of that organization. Headquarters were opened at the Hotel Rudolph this morning and several informal features of the convention program will be carried out tomorrow. Governor Woodrow Wilson will be here the first of the week to address the delegates and review the big parade, in which United States soldiers and sailors and the militia of several States will participate with the veterans.

GALA DAY PULLED OFF AT RACE TRACK FRIDAY

A large number of citizens from Washington and different sections of Eastern Carolina attended the races and free barbecue given at the Car-Skaden race track yesterday and the day was a conspicuous success in every way. Every one present entered into the occasion with spirit and enthusiasm and no meet ever pulled off in Beaufort county was more thoroughly enjoyed. Mr. Car-Skaden, the prime mover and originator of the meet, is to be congratulated upon his efforts.

It is needless to state the barbecue was thoroughly enjoyed. It was served in first-class style and many did full justice.

The following races, five in all, were interesting and exciting from start to finish.

First Race.—The first race was one-half mile heats, the best two out of three. The following horses entered: Nigger, owned by W. Car-Skaden; Hobson, owned by S. Fisher. The first heat was won by Hobson and the second heat also went to Hobson. Time, 1:40.

INTERESTING SERVICES AT M. E. CHURCH SUNDAY

At the First Methodist Church tomorrow morning Rev. W. H. Call will fill the pulpit, due to the absence of the pastor, Rev. R. H. Broom, who has gone to Monroe, N. C., to be at the bedside of his aged father, who is reputed to be very ill. Mr. Call, of depth of thought, has few equals in North Carolina as a pulpiteer.

On Sunday evening the services at this church will be in the nature of a mass-meeting, which is to be led by Mr. C. G. Morris, the district lay leader and Superintendent N. C. Newbold, the local lay leader. While the meeting will be open to all every Methodist is especially invited to be present. The program will be one of interest and it is to be hoped that a large congregation will be present.

THE CAMPAIGN IN MAINE HAS CLOSED

Both Democrats and Republicans Claiming a Victory at the Pools. Democrats Now in Power.

Portland, Me., Sept. 7.—A large question mark symbolizes the political situation in Maine at the close of the State campaign today. Both Democrats and Republicans are predicting victory at the polls on Monday, when the voters will name their choice for a United States senator and elect a governor, representatives in Congress, both branches of the legislature, and county officials.

The split in the Republican ranks and the substitution of national issues for the local problems around which the State elections heretofore have almost invariably revolved, have helped to complicate the situation and make guesswork of all predictions as to the outcome. Considered solidly Republican, and the change in sentiment was noted by the increase or decrease of the size of her majorities. Two years ago the Democrats carried the State, electing the governor, two representatives in Congress, both branches of the legislature, and a large majority of the county officers.

The Democrats are now in power, and have the machinery of government at their command. They realize that, should they be turned down by the voters as incompetent and unsatisfactory, it would likely be years before they could return to power. This is not all they are fighting for, however, for in November comes the national election, and the Democratic party in Maine feels certain that the winning of the State next Monday will, without doubt, mean that they will lead the electoral votes of the Pine Tree State for Wilson in November.

On the other hand, the Republicans, chagrined at their loss of power, are anxious once more to occupy positions in the seats of the mighty. New complications have entered into this campaign, too, and most of them are adverse to the Republican cause.

The election of a Democratic governor and legislature resulted in the prohibitory law being resubmitted to the people, and it was reaffirmed a year ago by a small majority. This showed conclusively that the prohibition sentiment throughout the State, which has always been a great asset of the Republicans, has materially weakened. The liquor question has been largely eliminated as an issue in the present campaign, although the Democrats promise if returned to power to give the voters an opportunity to pass upon a constitutional amendment which will give local option to the cities and large towns.

The Republicans have endeavored to keep local issues to the fore in the campaign, while the Democrats have paid most attention to the tariff and other national questions. Governor Marshall, of Indiana; Speaker Champ Clark and a host of other noted Democratic leaders who have stumped the State the past ten days have confined their remarks solely to national issues.

Opinion differs as to the effect that the advent of the Progressive party will have on the result of the election. The Progressives have not put a State ticket in the field and this has led the old party to believe that the Progressives as a whole will support the regular Republican nominees.

The Republican candidate for governor is William T. Haines, of Waterville, a former attorney general of Maine. He is opposed by Governor Frederick W. Plaisted, Democrat. The contest for United States senator is between Edwin C. Burleigh, who was a representative in Congress for many years, and the present Democratic senator, Obadiah Gardner, who was named last spring to succeed William P. Frye.

Maine will also elect four congressmen. In the first district, Tom Reed's old district, Asher C. Hinds, Republican, is opposed by Michael T. O'Brien, a Portland lawyer. In the second, the district which was represented by Frye, Lingley, and Littlefield, the Republican candidate is William B. Skelton, of Lewiston, a former State bank examiner and one of the shrewdest politicians in the district. He hopes to defeat Congressman Daniel J. McTigue.

PROBLEMS OF WOMEN ARE DISCUSSED BY A CORRESPONDENT.

Adhere Strictly to Feminine Methods if They Are to Accomplish Anything in Their Cause.

(By MRS. E. M. V. TRIEVEL)

Washington, D. C., Sept. 7.—Labor Day passed off quietly this year, the heat causing many people to leave the city for the day and others to remain in doors. The annual parade took place down Pennsylvania Avenue but hardly a ripple of the accompanying noise and demonstration touched the residence section.

Washington is distinguished for its many different kinds of parades. Before the more important ones occur, the avenue is lined with scaffolding on which as many seats are built as can possibly be crowded upon it. Frequently seats from which to view the inaugural parade are moved months in advance. Covered ones are somewhat more expensive than open ones and many people purchase the latter, as they are even more desirable than the closed ones provided the weather is propitious. But there lies the risk, for the Fourth of March is much more likely to be inclement than otherwise.

The last inaugural took place in their ideal of a raging blizzard, but in spite of the fact that traffic was apparently stopped and telegraph wires were down, there was a vast concourse of people in the Capital. All exposed seats were piled high with snow and a high wind was blowing, but that did not keep the multitudes off the avenue and many exponents of New England thrift were noted along the route, sitting bolt upright on the icy benches and persistently getting their money's worth, in spite of the warring elements. Many deaths are directly traceable to inauguration weather, but the number of escapes by persons who take the risk and still live seems miraculous, especially in the case of children, who are thus exposed. At least one President William Henry Harrison, died as the result of such exposure and the private citizens who have gone home to die from colds contracted during these festivities would form a great army.

The inaugural parade has much that is solemn and interesting in it, as also have the processions of Masons and other fraternal organizations who turn out to do honor to their dead comrades. But many others have decidedly comic features, and among these the Emancipation procession, which starts its irregular, wandering course down Pennsylvania avenue at ten o'clock every 30th of May, decidedly takes the prize. There are the brass bands, the cheap vari-colored bunting and the resplendent uniforms with lots of tarnished lace and buttons, so dear to the African heart. Plenty of fat, black drum-majors pirouette at intervals thrilling the wholly escort which pats along on either side to the accompaniment of the drums. Also, there are always a few floats, high decorated, on which recline colored goddesses of liberty and their satellites. While inauguration day has become famous for its blizzards, Decoration Day is no less distinguished for its sudden heavy rains and these always prove disconcerting to the Emancipation procession, and it is pathetic as well as laughable to see both the participants and the spectators, who forgetting all about liberty, run for cover. Here and there a horse begins to rear and back and where the rider is particularly unskillful, hurtles off in some unexpected direction through the crowd, which it knocks down indiscriminately, literally throwing its rider off their heads.

Speaking of parades reminds one of the recent suffragette parade in Baltimore she does feel justified in saying that women are not at their best in public processions. They labor under too many disadvantages. How can one make a good impression on the public, with one's hair all stringy and wet with perspiration, with one's hat on crooked and with one's jaw set firmly in the determination to carry along a heavy banner. Of course, the persons who don khaki suits and army hats and coarse shoes go forth to the fray claim that they have outgrown such frivolous matters as the universal feminine desire to look one's best, but does such a procession of tired, angry good? The writer, for one, believes that if women are ever to accomplish anything in this cause or any other, they must keep strictly to feminine methods, which are really just as effective, and that a woman with a real earnest purpose can accomplish more, dressed neatly and comfortably and in some less public place than she could in the soiled and unbecoming garments and the exhausted condition consequent upon several hours' march upon a dusty street.

ELECTION FORECASTS PROVE INTERESTING

It is more than amusing today to the Daily News man to hear the different forecasts as to the outcome of the election being held throughout the county today. One fellow will say with certainty a certain candidate has a walkover and within a few minutes another fellow will appear upon the scene and claim otherwise. All seem to be guessing but every one approached seems to know that his belief is sure to pan out as he foretells. No one knows, however, until the polls close and the ballots are counted.

RUSSIA REMEMBERS BORODINO.

Moscow, Sept. 7.—Modern Russia looked backward 100 years today and bowed low to the warriors who met the French legions in the sanguinary battle of Borodino, the fight which greatly weakened the strength of the invaders and led later to the disastrous retreat of Napoleon from Moscow. The battle was fought 100 years ago today near the little village of Borodino, not a great distance to the west of Moscow, where an elaborate program of festivities was carried out today in celebration of the centennial anniversary.

The Democratic incumbent. In the third district Congressman Samuel W. Gould, Democrat, is opposed by Forest Goodwin, a lawyer and former president of the State senate. In the fourth district the contest lies between John A. Madigan and Frank E. Guernsey, Republicans, who is now oldest in point of service of the four Maine congressmen.
