He Had Experience. They were not an exclusive congregation, nevertheless they showed signs of rebellion over the appointment of the new usher. "He is an excellent young man, no doubt," they said, "but he hasn't belonged to the church very long, and, besides, it doesn't seem likely that a young man who was a street car conductor until six months ago can be up on church etiquette."

But that was the very point that the trustees urged in vindication of their judgment. "We voted him in because he had been a conductor," they said. "We need a man of that kind to deal with the end-of-the-world hog. He is a greater nuisance in the church than in the cars. Early in the service he plants himself at the aisle end of a free pew and later comers who are ushered into that pew fall all over him in taking their places. It takes a man with grit to make him move along. This former conductor has the grit and he has not gained from experience. That is why we made him usher."

Prince of the Poets. The French poet, Leon Dierx, was found lying dead upon his bed by his family. The day before he accompanied Messrs. Henri de Requier, Victor Marguerite, and other men of letters to the house where the poet Stephane Mallarme used to live, and read a poem which he had written in honor of the anniversary. He left the cafe at 11, and as he passed the confectioner said: "Ah, well! I would be going to rest—if only I need not wake again!" The good woman scolded him for saying such things, and soon after his brother called and stayed with him till two in the morning. Next day he was discovered lifeless in his room, his last wish being thus fulfilled. Leon Dierx was 74 years old. In 1901, after the death of Mallarme, the young poets elected him their "Prince," though he was not a candidate for that honor.—London Evening Standard.

Trouser Crease That Stays. The permanent crease in trousers, as made by many of our city tailors, is somewhat favored just now. This idea is probably well known, but as it may not be familiar to all I give a description of it here. The trousers are first pressed dead flat, and then the extreme edge of the crease is stitched down, so that it is impossible for them ever to be without a perfectly straight line down the front. It is claimed that this prevents to a great extent the objectionable creasing at the knees that is so often experienced.—London Correspondence of Men's Wear.

WHERE THE CHILDREN OBEY

Courtesy to the Elders Universal in That Country, Makes the German Home Ideal.

As a rule German children of all classes are treated as children and taught the elementary virtue of obedience. Das Recht des Kindes is a new cry with some of the people, but nevertheless Germany is one of the remaining civilized countries where the elders still have rights and privileges. I heard of an English woman the other day who said that she had never eaten the wing of a chicken, because when she was young it was always given to the older people, and now that she was old it was saved for the children. If she lived in Germany she would still have a chance, provided she kept away from a small loud set, who in all matters of education and morality would like to turn the world upside down.

In most German homes the noisy, spoilt American child would not be endured for a moment, and the little tyrant of a French family would be taught its place to the comfort and advantage of all concerned. I have dined with a large family where eight young ones of various ages sat at an overflow table and did not disturb their elders by a sound. It was not because the elders were harsh or the young folks repressed, but because Germany teaches its youth to behave.

The little girls still drop you a pretty old-fashioned courtesy when they greet you. The little boys, if you are staying in the house with them, come and shake hands at unexpected times—when they arrive from school, for instance, and before they go out for a walk. They play the same games as English children and I need hardly say that they are brought up on the same fairy stories, because many of our favorites come from Germany.—From "Home Life in Germany," by Mrs. Alfred Sidgwick.

HAD LAID AWAY THE BANJO

Old Darky Found His Talents Brought Him Into Grave Danger, and He Fled.

Senator John Sharp Williams tells of a "character" in a southern state known as "the best banjo player anywhere." It followed, therefore, that when a lady in the town where this instrumentalist is a resident wished to show some northern visitors just what a genuine old darky could do with a banjo she called at Uncle Henry's little cabin and stated her wishes to his wife.

"I is very sorry, missy," said the wife, "but Henry he ain't playin' de banjo any mo'." She then indicated the spot where the instrument lay, covered with dust. "He jes' puts in all his time fishin' now."

"What led him to give up his playin'?" asked the visitor. "Has he got religion?"

"No, missy, dat wuthless nigger ain't got no religion. No, missy; he's done got skeered."

So They All Ate Onions. Sallie Fisher, the musical comedy star, who sang herself into the upper register of popular favor with that "Dearie" song, has a mother who occasionally gets Sallie into trouble. It was at a little dinner party in New York last season and there were four at the table, Sallie, her mother and two friends. Mrs. Fisher carefully scanned the menu card and then stated, with particular emphasis, that she wanted an order of Spanish onions, sliced and raw, and didn't care what else was ordered.

"Mother!" ejaculated Sallie. "Onions? And before the performance?" "Onions and before the performance," insisted Mrs. Fisher. Then she cast a rather scornful expression toward the fastidious daughter. "If these boys could see you eating garlic in the summer time they would have no objections to my eating onions in the winter time," said Mrs. Fisher, decisively, whereupon Sallie collapsed. Then they all ate onions.

She Hadn't Taught as Long as That.

A primary teacher, whose efficiency had extended her term of service in one school so long that she was teaching the second generation, frequently spoke to her pupils of the time when their parents had been in her room and often mentioned persons about town who had gone to school to her.

Just before the winter holidays she took occasion to speak of the significance at Christmas, explaining that it was the anniversary of the birth of Jesus. The story was familiar to most of the children, but one little fellow, whose religious education was not as extensive as that of the others, spoiled the effect by innocently piping up: "Did he ever go to school to you?"

Motor Tricycles.

The most recent novelty in London is the automobile tricycle, invented for shopping purposes. It is operated standing and takes up scarcely more room than the driver, so that it can be propelled into a shop and wheeled about as desired. It has a speed ranging to as much as sixteen kilometers per hour. A receptacle for parcels is placed on the under side.—Harper's Weekly.

Memory of Bacon. Mr. Balfour recently unveiled the statue of Bacon which the Benchers have erected in Gray's Inn. In the fashioning of Gray's Inn Gardens Bacon played a considerable part. The records of the Inn show that in 1597 it was ordered that "the summe of £7 15s. 4d. due to Mr. Bacon for planting of trees in the walkes be paid next term."

There is evidence that Raleigh, just before his last voyage to America, had a long conversation with Bacon in the "walks." On the northwest side of the garden there is a catalpa tree which is believed to have been planted by Bacon. "K is," says the historian of the Inn, "one of the oldest in England, and may well have been brought from its native soil by Raleigh."

Heat in the High Atmosphere. Forty-sounding balloons carrying registration apparatus, sent up by the Royal Meteorological Society of England, reached different heights. The mean altitude attained was 15,411 meters, the maximum 23,019 meters. At a certain altitude the temperature increased instead of decreasing. This could not have been due to solar radiation because the maximum height was reached after sunset.—Harper's Weekly.
