REV. J. H. WARREN TALKS DOMESTIC SCIENCE AT CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

The Address Was a Masterpiece and Was Listened to Attentively by All The Members Present.

One of the most enthusiastic Chamber of Commerce meetings was held at the rooms of the chamber on Tuesday night last. Among the features of the meeting was an address on Domestic Science delivered by Rev. J. H. Warren by invitation of the chamber. The Daily News publishes this admirable address in full below. It will prove interesting reading to the patrons of this paper. Gentlemen:

Domestic Science has been so neglected that I only need to say that 3 per cent of the American girls have received training.

The first method of raising a man above the life of an animal is to provide him with a healthy home. The home after all is the best school for the world. Children grow up into men and women there. They imitate their best and worst mortality there. Their morals and intelligence are in a great measure well or ill-trained there. The home is just about the only place where men can be humanized and civilized. There are domestic purity and moral life in the good home, and individual defilement and moral death in the bad one. We sometimes think that the school will give the child a good character. The school master has really very little influence on the character of the nation's homes; and they can only be improved through the instrumentality of woman. They must know how to make homes comfortable, and before they can know they must have been taught. Women must therefore receive sufficient training to fit them for their duties in real life. Their education should be conducted through with a view to their future position as wives, mothers and housewives. But among all class even the highest, the education of girls is rarely conducted with this object.

Among the working people the girls are sent out to work; among the higher classes they are sent out to learn a few flashy accomplishments; and men left to select from them, very often with little judgment, the future wives and mothers of the country.

Men themselves attach little or no importance to the industrial skill of women, and they only discover their value when they find their homes stupid and cheerless. Men are caught by the glance of a bright eye, by a pair of cherry cheeks, by a handsome figure, and when they fall in love, as the phrase goes, they never think, can the loved one, mend a shirt or cook a pudding.

And yet the most sentimental of

SECOND GAME BETWEEN RED SOX AND GIANTS TIE SCORE

Boston, Oct. 16.—The Boston and the New York Nationals battled for eleven innings to a tie, score 6 to 6, yesterday, when the contest was called on account of darkness. The second game will be re-played on the Boston field today.

The contest was exciting from the first to the last inning. With a lead of three runs handicap against them the Giants bitterly contested the Red Sox all the way until they finally caught them and passed them in the 8th inning. Boston rallied strongly and sent a fifth run across the plate which tied the score.

Collins had pitched a good game for the Red Sox until the 8th inning, when the Giants batted him from the mound. The Giants garnered a run in the 10th and the home club fans were in despair when Tris Speaker by a mighty drive for three bases to the center field seats, followed by an error by Wilson on the throw in, scored the tying run.

The 11th inning was unproductive and darkness ended the game with each club six runs apiece.

to do with the formation of the character of children. These are formed in the home—by the father and mother—by brother, sister and companions. It does not matter how complete may be the education given in schools. It may include the whole range of knowledge; yet if the scholar is under the necessity of daily returning to a home which is indecent, vicious and miserable, all this learning will prove of comparative little value.

Character and disposition are the result of home training, and if these are through bad physical and moral conditions, deteriorated and destroyed, the intellectual culture acquired in the school may prove an instrumentality for evil rather than good. The home should not be considered merely as an eating and sleeping place, but as a place where self-respect may be preserved, and comfort secured and domestic pleasure enjoyed. Three-fourths of the petty vice which degrades society and swell into crimes which disgrace it, would shrink before the influence upon its members, and especially upon the children growing up within it, the homes must be provided by the spirit of comfort, cleanliness, affection and intelligence. And in order to secure this, the presence of a well-ordered, industrious and educated woman is indispensable.

So much depends on the woman, that we might almost pronounce the happiness of the home to be woman's work. No nation can advance except through the improvement of the husbands must come down very soon and find out that the clever hands of a woman are worth far more than her bright glances; and if the shirt and pudding qualification be absent, then woe to the unhappy man, and woe also to the unhappy woman. If the substantial element of physical comfort be absent from the home, it soon becomes hateful. The wife notwithstanding all her good looks, is neglected; and the public eating house separates those whom the church and the laws have joined together. Men are desperately ignorant respecting the home department. If they thought for a moment of its importance, they would not be so ready to rush into premature housekeeping. Ignorant men marry ignorant women for their wives, and these introduce into the world families of children whom they are utterly incompetent to train as rational or domestic beings. The home is no home, but a mere lodging, and often a very comfortable one.

A workman of good judgment took to drink, his landlord said Frank don't do that. He replied by saying you would drink whiskey too if you had to live like I do. I would not be understood that habits of intoxication are wholly due to defective cooking, but no person can have the experience I have had in entering from one thousand to fifteen hundred homes each year, without coming to the conclusion that a Domestic Science hall is one thing needful in Eastern North Carolina.

Homes are the manufacture of men, and as the homes are, so will the men be. Mind will be degraded by the physical influence around it, decency will be destroyed by constant contact with impurity, and desilement and coarseness of manners, habits and tastes will become inevitable. You cannot rear a kindly nature sensitive against evil, careful of proprieties, and desirous of moral and intellectual improvements, amidst the darkness, dampness disorder and discomfort, which unhappily characterize so many of our homes. And until we can in some way or other improve their domestic life, we need not expect anything better.

Grown people cannot be comfortable without regular attention to these common matters. Everyone needs and ought to have comfort at home, and comfort is the united product of cleanliness, thrift, regularity, industry, in short a continuous performance of duties each in itself apparently trivial. The cooking of a potato, the baking of a loaf, the mending of a shirt, the darning of a pair of hose, the making of a bed, scrubbing of a floor, the washing and greasing of a baby, are all matters of so great moment, but a woman ought to know how to do all of these before the management of a household, however poor, is intrusted to her. Much might be said in favor of household management, and especially in favor of improved cookery. Ill-cooked meals are a source of discomfort.

G. A. Connor Gives Reply To Card Of L. P. Harris.

Belhaven, N. C., Oct. 8, 1912.
Mr. L. P. Harris,
Ex-nominee of the Bull Moose Convention which convened at Washington, N. C., Oct. 5th, 1912, and also General Manager of Rodman Estate.
Washington, N. C.

Mr. Dear Sir:
Your letter of the 7th inst., declining the nomination for the office of sheriff for Beaufort County by the Independent Progressive Party, just received and in reply will say: I wish to thank you for the stand that you have taken. Your action suits me exactly.

As a member of the convention I wish to state, that I personally opposed your nomination. I believe a mistake was made in presenting your name to the convention, and I believe that I can safely thank you in behalf of every Bull Moose in Beaufort County, feeling sure that our party is stronger as it is now.

It is your privilege to vote as you like and if you do not feel disposed to join with the progressive people of Beaufort County, regardless of past party affiliation in trying to bring about certain reforms that appear to be badly needed, then you should remain where you are.

Let us hope that some day you may have the pleasure of receiving the nomination by a body of men whose action will not be a disgrace to you as you seem to think that our action has been. It was unnecessary to use such strong terms regarding placing your name on the ticket.

We certainly are not so anxious to vote for you that we must be forced not to do so. We willingly and gladly relieve you and assure you that not a son of a Bull Moose will cast a vote for you in November. We do not wish to dishonor you more.

Thanking you for the courteous manner in which you declined the nomination, assuring you that we are not at all worried by your action, and believing that the Bull Moose Party will live long after you, and I am dead, I beg to remain,
Most Graciously Yours,
G. A. CONNOR,
Temporary Chairman of Bull Moose Convention.

CORRESPONDENTS GIVE INTERESTING NEWS FROM THE COUNTY

JAKEVILLE ATOMS.

Thank you, Small; folks have always been showing me a place to sit-up-and-git, but you are the first to tell me you will show me "a place to sit down." This sounds good to me, for I love to sit down, notwithstanding it is a very bad habit. In corn hoeing time I love to sit on the fence (or used to); when I go out to plow I love to sit on the plow beam and watch Dobbin fight flies; when I go out driving I love to sit in the shade of a pretty Parisian hat; but I don't love to sit in the shade of a sixteen-foot hat pin.

Said above, I used to love to sit on the fence. No, I don't now. You'll remember a fellow correspondent startled the scientific world some time ago by stating that the fences in his locality were being devoured by hookworms. Since then I have been rather shy of fences as sitting down places. Though, since giving the matter considerable thought have decided our contemporary was perhaps mistaken, that sitting on the fences and not hookworms was responsible for their worm eaten appearance. Sitting on fences and many other structures such as bridges, school houses, court houses, and the like, makes them look wormy.

Don't believe you mean to show me a place to sit down. You are not one of the sitting down kind. Your school building shows no indication of hookworm infection, which shows you have not been sitting down on it. Lots of school houses look awfully wormy. All because there has been too much sitting down going on around them.

Lots of wormy places. Look at our public roads and bridges. They are worm eaten in many places, all because somebody has been sitting down on his job. Go to the towns and cities and they look wormy about in places. Here is an old eye-sore here, a salphod, slack twisted establishment there, unsightly sites of factories that might be yonder. Enquire at any of those places and you'll find that somebody is running a successful sitting down business there. Look at the thrones of old European monarchies. Nothing but worm eaten figureheads. All because one set of men has been sitting on them for centuries. Look at little nearer home and you'll find that some of our official settees have been sat on till their occupants are badly in need of a dose of Epsom salt and that other hookworm medicine.

Hookworms in many places, but we are getting them out. The doctors are running them out of the ale, mentary canal, lovers of light are running them out of the educational canal, lovers of right are running them out of the political canal.
