Nothing for Honest Business Men to Fear, Says Wilson

By President-Elect Woodrow Wilson,

The result fills me with the hope that the thoughtful, progressive forces of the nation may now at least unite to give country freedom of enterprice and a government released from all selfish and private influences devoted to justice and progress.

There is absolutely nothing for the honest and enlightened business men of the country to fear.

No man whose business is conducted without violation of the rights of free competition and without such private understandings and secret alliances as violate the principle of our law and the policy of all wholesome commerce and enterprise need fear either interference or embarassment from the administration.

Our hope and purpose is now to bring all the free forces of the nation into active and intelligent co-operation and to give to our prosperity a freshness and spirit and a confidence such as it has not had in our time.

The responsibilities of the task are tremendous, but they are common responsibilities which all leaders of action and opinion must share, and with the confidence of the people behind us everything that is right is possible.

My own ambition will be more than satisfied if I may be ermitted to be the frank spokesman of the nation's thoughtful purpose in these great matters.
