OWNED HISTORIC OLD HOTEL

Proprietor of Structure Built Around Cabin of Captured British Frigate Is Dead.

Jacob Smith, hotel proprietor of City Island, New York, died there at the age of seventy-three years. Mr. Smith's hotel has for years been one of the show places on the island. It was known as the Macedonian hotel, because it was built around the cabin of the British frigate Macedonia, which was captured by the United States frigate Decatur off Cape Verde islands during the war of 1812. After the engagement the Macedonia was towed to what is known as Cow Bay, City Island, and there Smith acquired it in 1874, pulled it on land and structurally added to it. In time he had a building large enough to accommodate a number of persons.
Three years ago a member of a historical society in England, which had learned of the existence of the Macedonia, came to City Island and offered Mr. Smith $30,000 for it, but he would not sell. He said he wanted it to remain in the family, which consists of seven daughters and two sons.

Fortunate Little Waif.

A romantic history attaches to a pretty little foundling at present being cared for in the West Ham and Eastern General hospital, London, England. A Stratford resident going home late one recent night heard a cry, the wail of a newly born child. He jumped over into a field situated in Knox road, struck a match, and discovered a bonny baby boy. The man conveyed the child to the police, who in turn took it to the West Ham hospital. "We could not think of sending him to the workhouse," the kindly ward sister stated, "and he is now the little 'duke of the ward.' He is daily gaining strength to fight the world, and we should like to find a good home for baby very soon. We called him 'Peter' to bring the little fellow good luck, and the cabbage patch is where he was found." This little foundling, who is quite alone in the world, has big blue eyes and pretty fair hair. He sleeps all day in a cozy hammock cradle in one of the children's wards, and is beloved by nurses and patients alike.

Colors of Sea Water.

It has been proved that the blueness of sea water is in constant ratio to its saltiness. In the tropics the tremendous evaporation induced by the blazing sun causes the water to be much more salt than it is in higher latitudes.
For about 36 degrees both north and south of the equator the waters of the world's oceans are of an exquisite azure. Beyond these latitudes the blue fades and changes to green, and in the Arctic and Antarctic oceans the greens are almost as vivid as the tropical blues.
China's Yellow sea is usually supposed to owe its origin to the flood of muddy water which its great river pours into it. But here, again, modern science has proved that living organisms are responsible for its peculiar tint.

Laborers on bathtubs in a Pittsburgh factory have struck because there are no tubs to use themselves after a hot day's work. This is a variation of the famous plaint of "Water, water all around and not a drop to drink." It is to be hoped this strike will have a clean finish.

Cure for Snoring.
The invention of a light steel bar to be held against the upper lip by clamps to prevent persons from snoring is announced in the patent office, but many persons are convinced that a crowbar driven softly through the nostrils is the only permanent cure.

Lot for Good.
"Did you hear about my neighbor losing control of his motor car?" Greene—"No, I didn't." "Well, he did. The sheriff's got it now!"

A Tangle.
A case of singular corruption on the part of an attorney caused Miss Inne Addams, the Chicago welfare worker, to say at Hull House:

"This case reminds me of a man who was being tried for the theft of a ham. The opposing lawyers shuffled so, they confused the witnesses so, they so strained their own statements—in a word, they got the case into such a formidable tangle of falsehood and mendacity that at last the prisoner, in a tremendous voice, spoke up and said:
"Judge, if you'll make them lawyers set down and shut up for a minute, I'm willing to what in and tell the truth."

Girls, be careful of the curling iron when it's hot.
Eulene cannot regulate marriage or love affairs.

What the aeroplanes need is a coakid apparatus.

The women's clubs of Chicago have declared war on the "masher." The most effective club in his case would be the policeman's.

Playing roulette by electric light is one of Chicago's present activities, though nobody really need be ashamed to play it by daylight.

As suchness and princesses are now going up in a ship, aviation may justly claim to have been admitted into the higher circles.

Flagged Train With Shirt.

Tearing his shirt from his back an Ohio man flagged a train and saved it from a wreck, but H. T. Alston, Raleigh, N. C., once prevented a wreck with Electric Bitters. "I was in a terrible plight when I began to use them," he writes, "my stomach, head, back and kidneys were all badly affected and my liver was in bad condition, but four bottles of Electric Bitters made me feel like a new man." A trial will convince you of their matchless merit for any stomach, liver or kidney trouble. Price 50 cents at The Hardy's Drug Store.
