KEPT WARM BY ELECTRICITY

Incandescent Lamps Employed for Heating in the Hospital in New York.

In the Presbyterian Hospital, New York, there is an interesting instance of the application of electricity in the history for the benefit of the hospital patient. Here, says the Medical Monthly, the problem is to provide plenty of fresh air and at the same time sufficient warmth for the patient, and this has been solved by a simple but effective form of crib warmer.

Beauty and Utility. For the seventeenth time in three years the microscopic South American state has undergone a change of administration, and the new potentate, President Casper, the three hundred and second, had summoned an artist, and was ordering new designs for all the official emblems.

"I want something striking," he declared—"something showy, even. My people are impressed by such things. I have here some sketches I made myself. Look them over, and be guided by these ideas as far as possible."

They were gorgeous affairs. Green coats with crimson vests in brilliant, orange-colored trousers with spots of Cambridge blue. All the colors of the rainbow were there. "Ah!" he said, turning the pages. "This is evidently for the navy, this is for the army, this for the air force—what is this for, with the long plume on the three-cornered hat, the bright yellow dress, trimmed with purple and red?"

LARGE ONLY IN THE CHEST

Physically Small Man, With Shrewd Head, Had the Laugh on the Big Fellow.

Being a large man—bodily, that is—Singleton generally gives us the pip. He has a nasty habit of inflating his two-yard chest and glaring piteously on us, the smaller fry. The staff had a "what d'ya say" week, and there was hardly anything else in it but "what d'ya say" for a while.

Then Myleton came in. Myleton's was a quiet man; little chap, generally comes in late everywhere, but comes in just the same. The conversation got to brown and muscle. It generally goes where Singleton is. At last Myleton clipped in.

"Look here, Singleton, I'll wager you an even half-gold I measure more around the waist than you do."

"We all stand, and Singleton nearly choked.

"I'll take you," he grinned, "and give you five to one, if you like."

"Doesn't Myleton, then, in the dressing-room Singleton ran the tape round Myleton, and cried contemptuously:

"Thirty-four inches! As broad across the shoulders as a herring across the forehead."

Myleton's face fell, but he picked it up again, and placing the tape round Singleton he called loudly:

"Fifty-nine inches!" Then, to the stakeholder, "I'll take that three pounds, please."

"But how?" Singleton said.

"Well," said Myleton, "the big chest was yours, but I measured round it!"

There's been an awful shrinkage in Singleton.—London Tit-Bits.

SPEAKING AS A FINE ART

Many Men Who Attempt to Address Audiences Cannot Make Themselves Heard.

Speaking is one of those arts which people seem to think it unnecessary to study and learn, and the probability is that most speakers of the kind mentioned are blundering swimmers of their own ability. Doubtless their voices resound sonorously in the empty spaces of their own chest and head, and this prevents them from knowing that it does not penetrate to the auditory apparatus of other people.

To be a lecturer, it is not only necessary to know your subject, but the art of enunciation and audible delivery needs to be learned also. And the way that it is the proof, the set up, that counts the most of all. Your story may be well told but if it is not well made your efforts can be counted as lost. The printer that handles your copy is the man to keep your eyes on.

ORIGIN OF FAMOUS PHRASE

Belief that Common Political Term Sprang From a Horse Race Held in Tennessee.

The political term "dark horse" is thought to have had its origin in the following circumstances. In the last century there lived in Tennessee a "character" named Flynn, an elderly person who dealt in horses. Flynn generally continued to own a speedy nag or two for racing purposes. It is said that he was a "good thing" during his peregrinations throughout the state.

The best of Flynn's speys was a coal black stallion named Dusky Pete, almost a thoroughbred and able to go in the best of company.

One day Flynn visited a town where a race meeting was in progress. He entered Pete. The people, knowing nothing of the horse's antecedents and not being over impressed by his appearance, backed the local favorite heavily against the stranger.

Just as the horses were being saddled for the race, a certain Judge McMinamee, who was the "oracle" of that part of the state, arrived on the scene and was made one of the race judges.

As he took his place on the stand he was told of the folly of the owner of the strange entry. Running his eye over the track the judge instantly recognized Pete. "Gentlemen," said McMinamee, "there's a dark horse in this race, as you'll soon find out."

He was right. Pete, the "dark horse," lay back until the three-quarter pole was reached, when he went to the front with a rush and won the race.

Big Advertising Waste. The business man's waste paper basket has increased 200 per cent in size during the last seven years. The fact leads to the inquiry, Why? The answer is to be found in the mass of ineffective and undigested circular and other advertising matter that daily pours into the office of every active business man only to find a resting place in the waste basket.

Some of these advertisements are so poor that their typographical appearance condemns them; some are so badly written that they create no desire to purchase; others have merit and carry a message, but the message has been sent to the wrong person. Much of this waste basket could be eliminated by the employment of more intelligence in the preparation and distribution of advertising matter.

Why "Knocking" is Bad Business. If you knock your competitor you are told you are making a psychological error. True. But what does it mean? Simply this: that the normal mental tendency is fair play. If you do violate that standard in the buyer's mind, you will create a repulsion, thereby spoiling your chances for a sale.—A. T. Osborn.

The Cane's Peculiarity. The camel alone among animals does not perspire with its entire skin. It perspires only in the back of its neck, and when traveling in the frame best does not require a continual supply of water in order to regulate the moisture evaporated through the pores.

A curious consequence of this peculiarity is the fact that, within four degrees of the blood temperature of a healthy animal, that is a rise of temperature of just one degree, which in a human being and in other mammals would be a sign of fever, in a camel is not.
