REAL ESTATE MARKET ACTIVE IN WASHINGTON.

There were three big real estate deals in Washington within one week. For the real estate market to be active is a good sign of prosperity, since it denotes that many people have implicit confidence in the future of the city, and are willing to stake their fortunes upon the assumption that it shall go forward.

The prices paid were omitted in the reports, at the request of some of those concerned. After all, however, the price paid is not a vital matter. Washington is not eager to see real estate prices shoot skyward after the manner of some towns, until the hot-air "boom" collapses and leaves things absolutely flat. Of course, it would be a bad sign if the owner of a central lot in Washington should sell it for actually less than he paid for it, but it is a slow and steady increase in values that signifies a solid and consistent growth.

The good thing about these deals is that they mean improvement of property by means of the erection of credit buildings. So long as city lots are being bought by the people for the purpose of erecting buildings, the city is in the best of health, and the probability is that the city will continue to grow and prosper.

Old Tin Cans.
"Goodness gracious!" exclaims the housewife. "I wonder what becomes of all the tin cans that are thrown away?"

A friend of mine who is a well known business man is thoroughly acquainted with the tin can from its infancy to the day of its doom. "Well, what does become of all these cans?" I asked the authority.

"They are," he replied, "reincarnated, so to speak, and become, in fact, a new tin can, but mostly a window weight." Then he explained how all the old tin cans are gathered up and hurled into a furnace and how the thin veneer of tin which is merely the outer covering, is separated as a metal product from the steel which forms the real basis for the can. The tin is far more valuable than the steel, and it is used over and over again for covering cans. The steel part which melted because a solid chunk in fact, the solid chunk in the whole steel family. Window weights must be stout, but before the use of steel from tin cans—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Light From the Earth.

Many different conjectures as to just what color light we reflect to our neighbors planets have been made from time to time, and the common consensus of opinion seems to be that whatever color it does throw is determined by the vegetation on the surface. It is not the highest form of plants that always produce the greatest effects. Some of the most striking scenes on the earth owe their characteristic features to mosses and lichens—for instance, the famous "crimson cliffs" of Greenland, which extend for miles northward from Cape York and derive their glorious color from the growth of red lichens that cover their faces. On the same principle it is thought that the earth's broad expanse of forest and prairie land causes our planet to reflect a considerable quantity of green light, which at the time of the new moon spreads a greenish light over that part of the lunar surface which is only illuminated from the earth.—Chicago Tribune.

Bunions.

"By the way," said the old shoemaker, "do you know what makes a bunion? No? Well, it is simply getting shoes too short. In a short shoe the foot cannot follow the dictates of growth imposed by nature. But it simply cannot keep from growing. So the tissue and bone and flesh that should go into the toes are simply sidetracked into a bunch wherever it can get the easiest and forms a bunion."

The Cynic.
"Why don't you want me to marry your daughter?"
"You have no money."
"But I have brains."
"Maybe so. But you don't prove it by wanting to get married, young man."—Washington Herald.

Inverted Trees.

A foreign railway company has solved the problem of getting good shade trees in a short time, though they may be small. The trees are so arranged that after two years' time they give as much shade as trees in the ordinary way of setting out would give that are fifteen or twenty years old. The company gets a small elm tree, preferably digging this root and all from the ground. The tree then is set, the top part being set into the ground, and the roots are left in the air. The tree then grows, forms roots in what originally was the top of a tree, and the original roots—these now take the place of the branches begin to leaf out and form a complete foliage very quickly. Beautiful specimens of such inverted trees are to be seen by the fountain in Kensington gardens, London.—New York Press.

The Discovery of Iron.

The stone age, bronze age and iron age so overlap one another it is impossible to say just when one begins or ends. Men began to use both bronze and iron long before stone had ceased to be used. In fact, America was in the stone age so late as its discovery by Columbus 400 years ago. It is safe to say that history proper and the iron age were born together anywhere from 8,000 to 10,000 year ago. It is more than likely that men gained their first information concerning the properties of iron through experiments with the pieces of it that had fallen from the sky in the shape of meteors.

Are You Nervous?

What makes you nervous? It is the weakness of your womanly constitution, which cannot stand the strain of the hard work you do. As a result, you break down, and ruin your entire nervous system. Don't keep this up! Take Cardui, the woman's tonic. Cardui is made from purely vegetable ingredients. It acts gently on the womanly organs, and helps them to do their proper work. It relieves pain and restores health, in a natural manner, by going to the source of the trouble and building up the bodily strength.

TAKE THE CARDUI Woman's Tonic

Mrs. Grace Fortner, of Man, W. Va., took Cardui. This is what she says about it: "I was so weak and nervous, I could not bear to have anyone near me. I had fainting spells, and I lost flesh every day. The first dose of Cardui helped me. Now, I am entirely cured of the fainting spells, and I cannot say enough for Cardui, for I know it saved my life." It is the best tonic for women. Do you suffer from any of the pains peculiar to women? Take Cardui. It will help you. Ask your druggist.
