The Reliability of Advertised Articles

advertising said recently: You may have a business without advertising, but you can't have advertising without a business.

Just think of the full significance of that statement to the newspaper render.
It means that when you see and man advertising regularly in the better newspapers he must have comothing real and genuine to advertise; that he he has merchandise of such nuelity that it ments the of his customers, and that he is so sure of the desirability of what he has to offer that he is willing to spend real money to tell people about it. He knows that money spent in advertis-ing is well spent, because he is chief problem in selling is to let so sure of his product that his everyone know what he has to sell.

Knowing this, can you afford to let this valuable information offered you by the daily newspaper slip by you through your own negligence? Do you not owe it to yourself to keep up to the minute by reading regularly the advertising columns of good publications like The Daily News?
