WEDNESDAY, APRIL 29, 1914.

Next week promises to be a stre us one for Washington and Beau fort county-court week.

These old wooden buildings tha catch afire three times are like som folk we know-stubbern

The old Confederate Veteran will soon bivouse around the camp fires of memory in Washington. All honor to those who were the grey. Could they but be with us always.

Those fellows who violate the city ordinance by riding bicycles on the sidewalk are still being attached with the cost. How long before a little fine will come in play?

The members of Company G deprecating the disbanding of their company by the adjutant general weeks ago, wonder how they feel about the matter now?

Wonder if that sly fox Huerta not going to show Uncle Sam a thing or two in this peace negotiation busi. ness. He may be sincere in his seeming acceptance, but we are from Missouri just now.

An exchange says: "Maybe Huerta thought the United States gans were also loaded with grape juice." He'll find out different if he does not be have himself real soon and quit his job as we all want him to.

The "Big Stick Apostle" it seem is anxious for a scrap with Huerta How about placing him at the head of Mexico if this country should subdue our Southern neighbor. We be lieve the job would just suit him.

Evidences of Clean-Up week are now being seen occasionally on the streets of Washington. Garbage is piled up on the strets for the city dray in front of about one house in The presumption would be that the other nine don't need renovating.

With fifty of Washington's most beautiful young women presiding over the tables and a continuous performance all during the evening should be a sufficient inducement for somebody to be present at the Carbaret at the Elks' Home, May 21 Don't forget the refreshments either.

Second the motion: The Greens-boro News well says: "It is interesting as well as to no small degree humiliating, to remember that the Germans, next to the Spaniards perhaps, have suffered most horribly during the three year's war in Mexico. Yet a German was the first to come to the rescue of threatened poles; Americans. Hats off to the Fath-

CITIZENS SHOULD CO, OPERATE. The mayor has declared this to be Clean-up Week and the citizens of Washington should co-operate with him in making this the cleanest and most sanitary town in the State. Now is the time to do this work and if the people will not do it freely and voluntarily the mayor should send the on every lot in town and where the occupants or owners have not complied with the request they should be prosecuted as provided by the city ordinances. This matter of sanifation should be

FOR SHERIFF-

To the Democratic Voters of Beaufort county:

Having received many inquiries from my friends from the differen sections of the county as to whether I will be a candidate for renomina and election and expressing their desire to vote for me again, I take this method to express to my friends my sincere thanks for their loyal support heretofore and if poutthink I am a worthy officer and have discharged the duties of the office well and carefully guarded the coun ty's interest, then I ask you to give me your hearty support in the pri-maries and I will serve you as best I can two more years—serving your process and collecting your taxes as modestly as it can be done to collect as closely as I have sinc have been your sheriff. By reference to the financial committee's reports you will find my insolvent lists for each year have been about two per cent of the taxes.

Now if you think a new sheriff without experience, can do you better service and that you can save to the county money, by making a change, then it is to your inter-est and your duty, as I see it, to do If not the county needs ever cent due it and if I am continued b my Democratic friends in the sher iff's office I can only promise to de what I have done, to give you my whole time and undivided service Again thanking you for your past favors and for your suport at the coming primaries, I am, great, questioning brown eyes, hesitating in bewildered fashion as she found herself confronted by a roomful of men. Her gown with its light basque and full skirt was dowdy and badly cut, in marked contrast to the fashionable, clinging gowns of the women who had graced the room a short time previous. Her whits gloves were a fraction too short to meet her short sleeves, and left exposed thin arms and pointed elbows. But the tender face, with its sweetly expressive mouth, was unchanged. The lovely eyes were more appealing, as filled with wistful chyness, they gazed about the room.

Sincerely your servant, GEO. E. RICKS.

"I'm afraid it's a little late for me to come," she managed to say, as the senator came up to her with outstretched hand.

"This is an unexpected pleasure,"

"Oh, I never felt better in my life,

"It's very late," Hayes pleaded as put his hand lovingly and woman's shoulder.

"Yes, I know it is," Mary agreed, still not realising what a flasco her first attempt to enter into social life was. "I've, been outside for half an hour—just tryin' to make up my mind, but as long as you're here yet—why—"
"There aren't any other ladles present," Hayes tried to explain, "and I think perhaps—"

"You'd better so," Slade unished for him, but not in his conciliatory tone,

Mary started after him, clutching at his arm

"I've got to know what the matte s now-I must-I must," she declared

The got to know what the matter is now—I must—I must," she declared rehammently.

"Very well, Mary, as far as my plans go, I've arranged my life differently?

"Olferently? Differently? Haven't life too late now. I'm sorry to say this, but you force me."

"Wait is minute, Dan." She drow a long breath, as if nerving herself for an ordeal. "You're going to eay sumsthing dreath, as leading the say this, but you do not high dreadful. Before you begin I want to say that I'll do anything to get things back just the same as they ware before—anything. There's nothing you could ask me I won't do—nothing! There! Now! Now go on," and she sank weakly into a chair.

"Look here," Blade was cruelly abrupt. "This separation is permanent. Nothings going to change it."

"Separation!" She gave him a blank, amazed stare. "Why, Dan, who's talking about separation? We can't be separated."

"We can be—we are. When I left you that night it was for good and all, Mary. We can't get along together and I've made up my mind to it. It's settled."

"You mean to say you haven't minsed yer home? You haven't want.

It's settled."

"You mean to say you haven't missed yer home? You haven't wanted me to give in? You mean what's happened is for the beat?"

"Yes," he answered icity, "Mary gased at him in bewilderment. 'You're not the man I talked to five weeks ago. I don't know you. It must be the people about you—or it's—"

Like a flash the possibility of another woman came into her mind. But she dismissed it as quickly as it had come. She would not insult him or herself—or their love by such a suggestion.

"I am another man from the ous you married." Slade agreed, "but you wouldn't see it."

ouldn't see it."
"Is it my faulf that I married a man "le it my fault that I married a man who's turned into somebody clies!". Mary argued, fighting, fighting for her life, her happiness—for him. "I mar-ried you, Dan. I married a poor young fellow who was hard worked and fellow who was hard worked and holped him along. We started fail Dan, but this ain't fair," lapsing mor-aud more into poor grammar angetin Dan, but this ain't fair," lapsing more and more into poor grammar and dislect as her excitoment rose. "You got boyond me, but it was because I worked and saved the pennies for you, while you went out and got heiped and learned. Cooking didn't learn me. I didn't even know I was behind the times or unsatisfactory gnill one day you."

Slade nervously assured himself that all the doors were tightly clossed. He suppressed the twings of shame for his stealthy notion by assuring himself that it was not fear—simply business caution. To his cowfrely wrenching of his wife's heart be gave no thought at all. It was a move in the game. He made it as dispassionately as one moves a chessman on the board. Mary was looking at him with a new light in her brown eyes as he turned to her again. She spoke again.
