KITCHENER.

The appointment of Field Marshal Lord Kitchener as British Secretary of State for War means that an able and experienced soldier will direct the general plan of the campaign tha is to be conducted by the English Kitchener is no carpet-In the Soudan and in the Boer war he showed not only true military talent of a high order, but the unyielding and indomitable temper that will not take from fortune any answer but success. Who will be in actual command on the field, if British troops are sent to the Continent, has not yet been announced but we may be sure it wil be a man after Kitchener's own heart, a man hard. In the centre of the British war web will sit the grim, inflexible figure of the War Secretary, who, as soldier in Egypt, knew how to tame savage and fanatical tribes and who was so instrumental in reducing to submission in Africa the most formidable and valiant enemy his country had encountered in many

SENATOR GORE.
