

THE CITIZENS OF BEAUFORT COUNTY TO VOTE ON STOCK LAW

Raleigh, Mar. 9.—A steady grind of routine business marked the morning and afternoon deliberations of the House yesterday.

The divorce law was tabled and the appropriations bill passed its several readings and was sent to the Senate. The governor was authorized to employ counsel to assist in the Carter-Abernathy probe on March 22nd, and a conference committee appointed for the primary bill.

Senate.

The poor, hated, despised, feared, law-ridden, fence hounded cattle tick awoke the Senate to a smoldering fury of resentment yesterday morning. It was all over a bill which came from the House, innocent enough in sound, directed toward the eradication of a self-same obnoxious insect. "A bill to be entitled an act to eradicate the cattle tick and promote cattle raising in Beaufort county." There was nothing wrong with the eradication of the cattle tick, and nothing save merit in the promotion of the live stock industry, so the Senate passed the bill in a flurry on Saturday afternoon without a wink.

Sometime between the hours of the last session Saturday and the session yesterday morning, Senator Harding of Pitt, discovered that there had been thrust upon the counties bordering on Beaufort the necessity of providing fences for the stock law which the former innocent sounding bill required. That was just the beginning, for upon his motion yesterday morning the action by which the bill passed was reconsidered.

Senator Harding was not kindly disposed toward such running of legislation over him without his knowledge and consent. He argued that he had not been given notice the measure so vitally affecting the pocketbooks of his constituents had been introduced and furthermore did not believe that the people of Beaufort county either knew about the bill or wanted stock law.

"I insist," he declared, "that this fight has not been made in the open and has not been made fairly."

"The very fact that this bill came from the House without the knowledge of the representatives whose counties are affected by it is sufficient reason to condemn it," was the statement of Senator Gilliam. Even Senator Stubbs was moved to speak on the measure. He declared in justice to Representative Mayo, who presented the bill, that notice had been given him in a certain sense. He had been asked by the Representative if he would vote for a bill to give stock law to Beaufort county, and he had replied in the affirmative not having this bill under consideration, but he reserved to himself the right to vote against the bill offered when it affected unfavorably other counties in his district.

Senator Harding offered an amendment which would require Beaufort county to pay for its own stock law to the voters of Beaufort county.

The Senators agreed upon this and the bill was passed again through its reading, but instead of emphatically placing a stock law upon the county, the way is left open for the people of Beaufort either to accept or reject it.

ARE MARRIAGES ACCIDENTS?

(From Leslie's Weekly.) In telling the young men of the West Side Y. M. C. A. in New York City, how to pick a wife, Dr. E. Gardner Smith said: "It would be sacrilegious to say that some marriages are made in heaven. They are not made in heaven, they are accidents."

In the sense that they take place without foresight, on the part of any one, many marriages may well be classed as accidents. Dr. Smith reminded his audience that the girl who smiles and is all dimples over and ice cream soda, may be all vinegar when it comes to getting up and preparing an early breakfast. The trouble with so many young people is that the period of love-making is on the ice cream soda theater-going, fox-trotting basis. After marriage comes a rude awakening, when they are brought face to face with the serious side of life which cannot be evaded.

A 22-year-old wife, who is sister of a millionaire husband for divorce because of his alleged cruelty in making a "hot-house flower" of her, gives some advice to her sex on question of marrying old men. This unhappy young wife says her 76-year-old husband had pursued her from the time she was 15, that she was married at 18, and that for four years she had no fun, nor been able to enjoy the company of young people, something every normal young person craves.

Not once in a thousand times does the marriage of an 18-year-old girl with a 76-year-old man prove happy. Why do the 999 persist in taking the foolish step? It is strange there is so little public censure of such marriages. The marriage of an old man with a young woman should be as much under condemnation, as the possible marriage of a beardless youth with a woman old enough to be his grandmother.

A THRIFTY STUDENT AT UNIVERSITY

Chapel Hill N. C., Mar. 9.—When Jim Capps relinquished the professional barbering business in Chicago in the summer of 1913, came all the way to Chapel Hill and matriculated in the University, his very action put the reverse pedal on the common accepted theory—college education first; trade or profession second in order.

But he was to properly relate his trade with his University training. A Collins barber chair, and the accessories of a complete shaving outfit, was purchased and addressed "J. A. Capps, Chapel Hill, N. C." before he left Chicago. When he arrived in the University village, he had his tuition and room rent to Treasurer Warren, and assigned to room 7, Old West dormitory, among his first jobs was to install a barber shop in his room.

His room-mate acquiesced to the installation of the shop in the room. The barber chair was carried up the flight of steps to the second floor of the Old West, the wing of the building adjacent to the college chapel. Next to the window affording a plenty of light the chair was securely fastened to the floor. This job over, he wished to create the atmosphere of a real up-town barber shop. An oil stove was to afford hot water for shaving purposes. A handy rack well supplied with towels and a variety of bottles of hair tonics created a commercial atmosphere. Then, knowing the tastes of college boys for baseball games, he gathered together a variety of baseball photographs of the Collins and Mathewson type.

Another campaign was necessary to establish his business, for he is remembered freshmen are hardly known beyond their room walls. A modest advertising feature was conducted. Tacked on bulletin boards was a small sized card bearing the inscription, "Barbering, hair-cuts and shaves, done at No. 7 Old West"—J. A. Capps. Customers began to drop in on him any old hour of the day—some came on business errands while others intimated their motive of looking around the new college enterprise.

He wanted system about his business. He wished a frank blending of his barbering business and his University studies. Regulation hours were desired, and customers were advised to call only between the hours of 2:30 and 6 o'clock each afternoon for their haircuts and shaves. The regulation applies to professors as well as students. Capps barber shop has the patronage of faculty and student. President Graham is a patron of the shop, and Prof. L. P. McGhee, dean of the law school, is a regular visitor.

CLASS FROM ORPHANAGE BEGINS TOUR

Oxford, March 9.—The Oxford Orphanage Singing Class has started on its annual tour, visiting the various towns and cities in North Carolina. The class is being made up of the members of the class, and under the auspices of the Masonic Lodges and friends of the Institution.

This organization, for such it may be called, has a two-fold purpose. First: the class gives a highly creditable and enjoyable entertainment, such as will be real help and benediction to all good people wherever the children go, and in this way arouse in our people a deeper interest in, and love for all that is good and true.

In the second place the Institution represented by these children supplements its income by giving the friends of the Institution this opportunity to make a special effort to aid the work. These efforts have heretofore enabled the Orphanage to care for about 100 more children than could have otherwise been provided for.

The fact that our people are becoming more and more interested in orphanage work and the saving of life insures the success of the great work in which this class is engaged. We urge the hearty co-operation of all good people in this noble endeavor.

MR. THOMAS WEBSTER.

On February 19th, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Fifteen, while nature had prostrated into silence the gentle spirit of Thomas Webster took its eternal flight in the great beyond and returned to the God who gave it.

He died as he lived a friend to all who knew him and when he embarked on that unknown journey from which none have ever returned, there are none who ever knew him doubt but that he met his lot face to face and crossed into the great beyond safely and dropped his anchor in the haven of the good, there to await the resurrection, when all men will be judged according to their stewardship here on this earth.

He leaves behind a wife, seven children, five daughters and one son, and a host of friends to mourn their loss.

He united with the F. W. B. Church when quite young and was a faithful member until he was called to the home beyond to reap the reward which is prepared for the final and faithful.

Written by his Nephew,
W. P. WEBSTER.
