Explaining "Memory."
When you speak of others as having a good memory, you do not mean that at all. Instead of meaning that the man with a "good memory" has accurately perceived of an event in the full ramifications of all its details, and recorded it in his whole human texture ready for reproduction at will, what you really indicate is that he has good power of retention, irrespective of detailed accuracy or faithfulness of the full recollection.

"Rose of Hell."
The "Rose of Hell" is the name given to a flower that blooms on a tree of great size and strength growing on the sides of Mount Agassiz high peak among the rugged mountains of Central America.

Legal English.
The circumlocution of legal documents is the penalty of having a bilingual language and descends to us from those countries when the English and the Normans were slowly amalgamating into one people. So the two races, in the market place or in social converse, to make their meaning clearer, joined a French word to an English or vice versa. That is why in the prayer book words so often run in couples: "Humble and lowly," "acknowledge and confess," "assemble and meet together." The English was for the English, the Norman-French for the French. "Hueuer" is a great user of such bilingual phrases: "Hunting and veneing," "wright and carpenter," "cars and head." And that is whence lawyers get such talk as "aid and abet," "will and testament" and "use and vant."

Had to Stay There.
"You are not very happy in the rent house," friends remarked to the renter. "No, I can't say we are." "Your ceilings are falling." "They are, and that isn't all. Our roof leaks, our cell ar fills with water every time it rains, our radiators thump, our furnace is too small for the house, the gutters have rusted away, the porch under the house hasn't had a new coat of paint for seven years, the wall paper hangs loose in every room and the chimney is shorter after every windstorm." "Why in the world don't you move?" "Because we can't find another house with a hall that our long oriental rug will fit."

Czar's Immense Wealth.
The czar of Russia is a well-paid ruler. He receives the revenues from the Russian crown lands, and that area is equal to that of one-third of the United States. Several years ago the imperial treasurer is reported to have advised the czar: "Your majesty need have no fear of ever coming to feel the sting of poverty. Financially you are solvent itself. With one hand you could buy out the American multi-millionaires, Morgan and Rockefeller, and still have enough left to talk business with Baron Rothschild!" It is said that the czar was displeased at the stippancy of the holder of his purse string. Whether the story is apocryphal or not, it does not stir any one's soul.

Garden of Eden.
The idea and imagery of a Garden of Eden, as the cradle of a race, came from the Semites, who had far more imagination than the Semites, as the early tablets prove. The Semites, who came from the northwest and traveled eastward, placed their Garden of Eden on the upper Euphrates, at the real cradle of their race, between Akah and Hitt, and upstream of the division into four branches in the delta.

Saturated.
"Dye kon Mac fell in the river on his way home last night!" "You don't mean to say he was drowned?" "Not drowned, mon, but badly d'posed."—London Op'ion.

Trapping Sparrows.
In England sparrows are trapped with a sieve, one end held up by a short stake to which a long string is tied. The trap is baited with bread crumbs, oats or wheat. The birds are permitted to eat the bait until a new bird has gathered under the sieve, when the cord is pulled, removing the stake and allowing the trap to fall over the birds gathered under the sieve.

A Bit to Think About.
On the doorway of an Italian cathedral are three inscriptions. The first, beneath an arch of roses reads as follows: "All that pleases is but for a moment;" the second, beneath a cross, "All that troubles is but for a moment;" and under the main arch, "That only is important which is eternal."

How insects Regulate Speed.
Motion pictures of insects in flight show that they regulate their speed by changing the inclination of their wings rather than by altering the rapidity of their motion.

Carpet Knights.
"Carpet knights," quoth a writer once in the long ago, "are such as have studied law, physic, or other arts or sciences, whereby they have become famous, and seeing that they are not knighted as soldiers, they are not therefore to use the horseman's title or spurs; they are only termed simply miles and milites, 'knights,' or 'knights of the carpetry,' or 'knights of the green cloth,' to distinguish them from those knights that are dubbed as soldiers in the field."

National Religion of Russia.
Prince Vladimir of Russia, who brought the Greek religion to Russia in 982, preferred it because of its oriental form, and thought it stood closer to the Russian character than the rites of the Roman. He made Kieff the seat of the metropolitan, while the patriarch remained just the same in Constantinople. But Peter the Great forbade the Russian clergy to recognize the foreign patriarch, and founded the Holy Synod in 1722, which became the head of the Russian church. There are about 15,000 monks and 30,000 priests in Russia, the former celibates, the latter married. Besides these are some 5,000 nuns with 250 convents, of which Novo Devichy is the largest of all.

Has Had Many Rulers.
The name Roumania comes down from the days of Roman rule. The country previous to that being overrun by semi-nomadic Getae and Dacians. Its vicissitudes, transformations, malformations and reformations have been innumerable, being ruled by this and that exploiting nation, and it only reached its present independence after the Russo-Turk war of 1877, and with the settlement for that time of the "Eastern question" by the congress of Berlin in 1878, Roumania became in area and impulse the little kingdom of today.

Why the Blues?
Everyone loves the blue sky, with its brightness, warmth and softness. Hundreds have written of it in glowing terms of praise, while the foreign late millions have felt what they expressed. Who does not love a pair of blue eyes? Laughing blue eyes, true blue eyes, tender blue eyes, Irish blue eyes. The men who follow the sea love her every mood and hue, and yet her sparkling sapphire cloak they would have her don on the happiest occasions. "It is impossible, in our condition of society, not to be sometimes a snob," wrote Thackeray—not to have a heart that would rellish pumping a little blue blood along with the red. But when our thoughts are dull, depressed and drear like an unkind wintry sky, we are in the blues. Why this paradoxical defamation of the color which is associated with so many of the fair and pleasing things of life? If we must vilify a color, there are yellow devils and dan-dice; why the blues?—Boston Globe

Languages of the World.
Strange as it may seem, there are more than four thousand languages spoken by mankind, while the number of dialects exceeds this. There are more than sixty vocabularies in Brazil and in Mexico the Nahuatl is broken up into some seven hundred dialects. There are hundreds in Borneo, while in Australia there is no classifying the complexities. Assuming that 65 dialects on the average belong to each language, we have the colossal total of 260,000 dialectic languages.

Early American Industry.
When English colonists settled on the Atlantic coast from New England to North Carolina, the abundance of wood suggested to them that there might be profit in the sale of ashes. In 1621, less than fifteen years after the founding of Jamestown, the Virginians were selling ash-bark from $30 to $40 a ton for export to England. The burning of ash-bark was a favorite business undertaken by negroes who had run away from slavery in the South and had settled in Canada. No capital was required, as wood was free; and, though the income was small, the work was easy and served to attract a good many people. As late as 1898 Canada exported annually 100,000 barrels of potash and pearlash, the equivalent of more than 20,000 barrels of ashes.—Harwood Record

Why is It?
"Of the 67,000 varieties of things about women's ways that it is impossible for a man to understand," said a quiet observer, "I will mention only one. Why is it that women button on their coats the other way from the way in which a man buttons up his coat? A man's coat is so made that the buttons come on the left side or half of the garment, when it is buttoned. In a woman's coat, the buttons come on the right side. When a woman puts on a man's overcoat she first things she says is always this: 'Why, it buttons on the wrong way!' Of course, the man thinks that the woman's way is wrong, and the only thing that is certain about it is that the man's coat buttons on one side and the woman's on the other."—New York Courier Pittsburgh Dispatch

Paying the Spies.
Louis XVIII must have been somewhat grateful for the institution of spies. Shortly after the restoration he asked Fouché, his minister of police (who had filled the same office under Napoleon) whether he had been efficient while spying during his exile in England. After a considerable amount of gushing, Fouché admitted that one of the members of the royal household, the Duc de Blacas, used to furnish regular reports concerning his master's movements. "How much did you pay for his services?" inquired the king. "A fixed allowance of 28,800 a year," was the reply. "I am glad to hear you say that," said the king. "We arranged to divide his earnings as a spy, and so long as he was working for you I used to draw $4,000 a year. It is comforting to learn that he didn't cheat me."—London Charivari

Did a Lasting Work.
If the proper study of mankind is man, then history must have the foremost place in any truly liberal education. In the broad, collective view, it is one of the most practical of studies. The men who founded this republic knew little of science, they never had the advantages of a university extension course, nor had they learned inance or plumbing or short-story writing in a correspondence school. But they were profoundly versed in the history of mankind, and particularly in the history of the institutions which man has devised for the purpose of maintaining his freedom, and which which they did in nature have endured his day.

Answered His Question.
Prince George of Denmark was nick-named "Est-il-possible" by James II. It is said that when the startling events of the revolution of 1688 succeeded one another with breathless rapidity, the emotions of Prince George found vent in the repeated exclamation: "Est-il-possible?" King James, enumerating those who had forsaken him, said: "And est-il-possible has none left."
